In all the Pantheon the weakest goddess is Clio, the goddess of history, and instead of being represented by sculptors as holding a scroll might better be represented as limping on crutches. Faithful history is the saving of a few things out of more things lost. The immortality that comes from pomp of obsequies or granite shaft or building named after its founder or page of recognition in some encyclopedia is an immortality unworthy of one's ambition, for it will cease and is no immortality at all.

Oblivion! A hundred years. But while I recognize this universal submergence of things earthly, who wants to be forgotten? Not one of us. Absent for a few weeks or months from home it cheers us to know that we are remembered there. It is a phrase we have all pronounced, "I hope you missed me." Meeting some friends from whom we have been parted many years we inquire, "Did you ever see me before?" And they say, "Yes," and call us by name, and we feels a delightful sensation thrilling through their hand into our hand and running up from elbow to shoulder and then parting, the one current of delight ascending to the brow and the other descending to the foot, moving round and round in concentric circles until every nerve and muscle and capacity of body and mind and soul is permeated with delight.

Now, I have to tell you that this oblivion of which I have spoken has its defeats, and there is no more reason why we should not be distinctly and vividly and gloriously remembered five hundred million billion trillion quadrillion quintillion years from now than that we should be remembered six weeks. I am going to tell you how the thing can be done and will be done.

We may build this "everlasting remembrance," as my text styles it, into the supernal existence of those to whom we do kindnesses in this world. You must remember that this infirm and treacherous faculty which we now call memory is in the future state to be complete and perfect. "Everlasting remembrance!" Nothing will slip the stout grip of that celestial faculty.

Did you help a widow pay her rent? Did you find for that man released from prison a place to get honest work? Did you pick up a child, fallen on the curbstone, and by a stick of candy put in his hand stop the hurt on his scratched knee? Did you assure a business man, swamped by the stringency of the money market, that times would after awhile be better? Did you lead a Magdalen of the street into a midnight mission, where the Lord said to her: "Neither do I condemn thee. Go and sin no more!" Did you tell a man, clear discouraged in his waywardness and hopeless and plotting suicide, that for him was nearby a lover, in which he might wash and a coronet of eternal blessedness he might wear?

What are epitaphs in graveyards, what are eulogiums in presence of those whose breath is in their nostrils, what are unread biographies in the alcoves of a city library, compared with the imperishable records you have made in the illumined memories of those to whom you did such kindnesses? Forget them? They cannot forget them. Notwithstanding all their might and splendor, there are some things the glorified of heaven cannot do, and this is one of them.

They cannot forget an earthly kindness done. They have not cutlass to part that cable. They have no strength to hurl into oblivion that benefaction. Has Paul forgotten the inhabitants of Malta, who extended the island hospitality when he and others with him had felt, added to a shipwreck, the drenching rain and the sharp cold? Has the victim of the highwayman on the road to Jericho forgotten the good Samaritan with a medicament of oil and wine and a free ride to the hostelry? Have the English soldiers who went up to God from the Crimean battlefields forgotten Florence Nightingale?

It is not half as well on earth known that Christopher Wren planned and built St. Paul's as it will be known in all heaven that you were the instrumentality of building a temple for the sky. We teach a Sabbath class, or put a Christian tract in the hand of a passer-by, or testify for Christ in a prayer meeting, or preach a sermon and go home discouraged, as though nothing had been accomplished, when we had been character building with a material that no frost or earthquake or rolling of the centuries can damage or bring down.

Another defeat of Oblivion will be found in the character of those whom we rescue, uplift or save. Character is eternal. Suppose by a right influence we aid in transforming a bad man into a good man, a dolorous man into a happy man, a disheartened man into a courageous man, every stroke of that work done will be immortalized. There may never be so much as one line in a newspaper regarding it or no mortal tongue may ever whisper it into human ear, but wherever that soul shall go your work upon it shall go, wherever that soul rises your work on it will rise, and so long as that soul will last your work on it will last. Do you suppose there will ever come such an idiotic lapse in the history of that soul in heaven that it shall forget that you invited him to Christ; that you, by prayer or gospel work, turned him round from the wrong way to the right way? No such insanity will ever smite a heavenly citizen.

Oh, this character building! The structure lasting independent of passing centuries, independent of crumbling mausoleums, independent of the whole planetary system. Aye, if the material universe, which seems all bound together like one piece of machinery, should some day meet with an accident that should send worlds crashing into each other like telescoped railway trains, and all the wheels of constellations and galaxies should stop, and down into one chasm of immensity all the suns and moons and stars should tumble like the midnight express at Ashtabula, that would not touch us and would not hurt God, for God is a spirit, and character and memory are immortal, and over that grave of a wrecked material universe might truthfully be written, "The righteous shall be held in everlasting remembrance." O time, we defy thee! O death, we stamp thee in the dust of thine own sepulchers! O eternity, roll on till the last star has stopped rotating and the last sun is extinguished on the sapphire pathway, and the last moon has illumined the last night, and as many years have passed as all the scribes that ever took pen could describe by as many figures as they could write in all the centuries of all time, but thou shalt have no power to efface from any soul in glory the memory of anything we have done to bring it to God and heaven!

There is another and a more complete defeat for oblivion, and that is in the heart of God Himself. You have seen a sailor roll up his sleeve and show you his arm tattooed with the figure of a favorite ship, perhaps the first one in which he ever sailed. You have seen a soldier roll up his sleeve and show his arm tattooed with the figure of a fortress where he was garrisoned or the face of a great general under whom he fought. You have seen many a hand tattooed with the face of a loved one before or after marriage. This custom of tattooing is almost as old as the world. It is some colored liquid punctured into the flesh so indelibly that nothing can wash it out. It may have been there fifty years, but when the man goes into his coffin that picture will go with him on hand or arm. Now, God says that He has tattooed us upon His hands. There can be no other meaning in the forty-ninth chapter of Isaiah, where God says, "Behold, I have graven thee on the palms of My hands." It was as much as to say, "I cannot open My hand to help but I think of you. I cannot spread abroad My hands to bless but I think of you. Wherever I go up or down the heavens I take these two pictures of you with Me. They are so inwrought into My being that I cannot lose them. As long as My hands last the memory of you will last. Not on the back of My hands, as though to announce you to others, but on the palms of My hands for Myself to look at and study and love. Though I hold the winds in My fist, no cyclone shall uproot the inscription of your name and your face, and though I hold the ocean in the hollow of My hand its billowing shall not wash out the record of My remembrance. 'Behold, I have graven thee on the palms of My hands.'"

What joy, what honor, can there be comparable to that of being remembered by the mightiest and most affectionate being in the universe? Think of it—to hold an everlasting place in the heart of God! The heart of God! The most beautiful palace in the universe. Let the archangel build some palace as grand as that if he can. Let him crumble up all the stars of yesternight and to-morrow night and put them together as mosaics for such a palace floor. Let him take all the sunrises and sunsets of all the days and the auroras of all the nights and hang them as upholstery at its windows. Let him take all the rivers and all the lakes and all the oceans and toss them into the fountains of this palace court.

Oh, where is oblivion now? From the dark and overshadowing word that it seemed when I began it has become something which no man or woman or child who loves the Lord need ever fear. Oblivion defeated. Oblivion dead. Oblivion sepulchered. But I must not be so hard on that devouring monster, for into its grave go all our sins when the Lord for Christ's sake has forgiven them. Just blow a resurrection trumpet over them when once oblivion has snapped them down. Not one of them rises. Blow again. Not a stir amid all the pardoned iniquities of a lifetime. Blow again! Not one of them moves in the deep grave trenches. But to this powerless resurrection trumpet a voice responds half human, half divine, and it must be part man and part God, saying, "Their sins and their iniquities will I remember no more." Thank God for this blessed oblivion. So you see I did not invite you down into a cellar, but up on a throne; not into the graveyard to which all materialism is destined, but into a garden all abloom with everlasting remembrance. The frown of my first text has become the kiss of the second text. Annihilation has become coronation. The wringing hands of a great agony have become the clapping hands of a great joy. The requiem with which we began has become the grand march with which we close. The tear of sadness that rolled down our cheek has struck the lip on which sits the laughter of eternal triumph.

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR OCTOBER 13.

Subject: Joseph in Prison. Gen. 39 to 41. 14—Golden Text Gen. 41. 21—Memory Verses, 21, 22. Commentary on the Day's Lesson.

Introduction.—The history of Joseph as recorded in the Bible, is of unique beauty. So simple that a child may understand it, yet in its simplicity so beautiful that no uninspired hand can embellish it. Modern writers would fill volume in recording what Moses puts within the compass of a few chapters. Joseph appears in the life of Israel.

20. "Into the prison." The word implies an edifice, or portion of the royal mansion, mostly subterranean, in which the roof or vault rising nearly from the surface of the ground, round, or shaped like an inverted egg. In chapter 41. 14 it is called "dungeon." Such dungeons are in similar circumstances used. His imprisonment must have been severe at first. In Psalm 105. 18 we read that they hurt his feet with fetters, he was laid in iron. But God blessed him, and it was not long before he had many favors shown him there. Joseph was in prison three years.

21. "The Lord was with him." "This is an example of the strength of God's consolations in the worst of ills. Joseph had power within his soul enabled him to press forward, and it was very dark before him. The pine seemed severe, he was no martyr. But he learned to trust God with gladness of heart he goes to persecution and imprisonment. The eye was upon him, and no weapon against him prospered. He knew right and made the best of everything.

22. "Keeper of the prison." An officer who was charged with the discipline of the prison. "Committed Joseph's hand." We see here the nature of human influence. It is an influence of rank, but of character. In all men equal in rank to-day and to-morrow there will be found those who acquired influence over the others. The prisoners were all in the same rank, but very soon Joseph's character gave him influence.

23. "Because the Lord," etc. The reason of his influence was the favor of God with him. Just so far as a man is Christlike will he have influence. Wisdom and virtue will shine in the narrowest cell. A good man will do good wherever he is and will be a blessing even in banishments, for the Spirit of the Lord is not bound or banished.

1. "The butler." The cupbearer, overseer of the wine-making and drinking and serving, an important officer of the king. "Baker." This was another officer in trust of the king's bread and baking, and his post was one of high honor because they who had charge of the food of the king might easily poison him. "Had offended." High places are dangerous places.

3. "In the house." The state prison was in connection with Potiphar's residence. See on verse 20.

4. "Charged Joseph," etc. The captain of the guard himself, who was Potiphar, charged Joseph with them, which intimates that he began now to be respected by him, and perhaps to be convinced of his innocence. "He served them." He waited upon them. So long as God was with him Joseph will shine even in the dungeon. Pharaoh's officers are sent to witness his graces, which he is not permitted to come forth to show.

5. "Each man—in one night." This shows that the dreams were of the night. While our ordinary dreams have no special significance, yet it can not be doubted that God has in many cases, especially in early times, spoken in dreams. "Differing to the interpretation." The expression is intended to show that the dreams were not meaningless, but suited to each man's case and capable of a sound interpretation.

6. "Sad." They were sure their dreams had more than an ordinary meaning.

7. "Wherefore—so sadly." He spoke kindly to them; he, too, was a common sufferer with them, and understood their feelings.

8. "No interpreter." One thing troubled them was that they were in a position to submit their dreams to the magicians of Egypt, who were supposed to be able to interpret dreams. But he pointed them to his God as the One who could reveal difficult things. "Tell them." Thus had God at last brought Joseph prominently before them.

11. "Pressed them." From this we learn that wine anciently was the juice of the grape, without fermentation. The cupbearer took the bunch, pressed the juice into the cup, and immediately delivered it into the hands of his master.

12. "Three branches are three days." Human knowledge could not have known that these branches had reference to time, or if they did have whether days, months or years were intended. It was wisely ordered that one part of a dream should require a divinely inspired interpreter. It was God's design to assure the butler that Joseph spoke by wisdom not from man, but by inspiration from above.

13. "Lift up thine head." This phrase refer to a custom which the kings of Egypt observed when those among them be guilty of great crimes were pardoned, and others less guilty were punished.

14. "Think on me." Joseph had work yet to do to this world. He was to become "the shepherd and the stone of Israel;" he was to be lord of Pharaoh's house; he was to become the father of two powerful tribes in Israel. He could not perish while the promises he had received were yet unaccomplished. "Make me out." "He desires enlargement of preferment. Providence sometimes signs the greatest honors for those who least covet or expect them."

15. "I was stolen." Joseph's very modest statement with respect to himself. He does not reflect upon those who had sold him, or dwell upon the great wrong done him in his imprisonment; he merely states the fact and declares his innocence. "Land of the Hebrews." Judea was probably known by this name in Egypt. "Dungeon." Joseph's way is now for a time through darkness, but this is the very way in which God often leads His people.

Joseph also interpreted the dream of the baker. Vs. 16-19. On the third day after this Pharaoh made a great feast, and the butler was restored to his office and the baker was hanged. Joseph had interpreted to the butler, however, forcast Joseph's release. It is supposed that Joseph had at this time been in prison one year, and he must wait two full years" yet before God's time for his release. Joseph knew the fate of the butler and baker, but his future was wisely hidden from him. He must walk by faith and not by sight.

It seems to be a simple fact the Indian is dying out. The latest official figures show that in 1890 there were on the reservations in the United States as against 207,965 in 1900, 243,524 in 1890. The number on reservations, however, increased from 162,000 in 1890 to 172,000 in 1900 and 121,695 last year.

One of Tom Johnson's Reforms.

Among the radical reforms pressed by Mayor Tom Johnson of Cleveland, is the passing of an ordinance by which the cost of paving and maintaining Euclid avenue and other fine residence streets is to be borne entirely by abutting property owners. He is said to support the measure with the "up grade since he himself lives on the avenue which every loyal Clevelander believes to be the finest street in the world.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

A Chance to Make Money.

I have been selling Perfumes for the past 6 months. I make them myself at home and sell to friends and neighbors. Have made $10. Every one buys a bottle. For 50c. worth of material I make Perfume that would sell for $2 in drug stores. I also sold 125 formulas for making perfume at $1.00 each. I first made it for my own use only, but the curiosity of friends as to where I procured such exquisite odors, prompted me to sell. I clear from $25 to $35 per week. I do not canvass, people come and send to me for the perfumes. Any intelligent person can do as well as I do. For 42c. in stamps I will send you the formula for making all kinds of perfumes and a sample bottle prepaid. I will also help you get started in the business. Lorna Francis, No. 11 S. Tanning Leather.

The slowness of the process of tanning is largely due to the difficulty with which the tannin penetrates into the hide. As the penetration proceeds the outer part of the hide becomes converted into leather and is thereby made impervious, consequently the rate of penetration decreases. Months of soaking in the tanpit are therefore necessary for thick hides.

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTARY FOR OCTOBER 13.

Subject: Joseph in Prison, Gen. [illegible] 20 to xl. 5—Golden Text: Gen. [illegible] 21—Memory Verses, 21-23—Commentary on the Day's Lesson.

So simple that a child may understand it, yet, in its simplicity, so beautiful that no uninspired hand can embellish it. Modern writers would fill a volume in recording what Moses puts within the compass of a few chapters. No blemish appears in the life of Joseph.

20. "Into the prison." This probably denotes an edifice, or portion of the royal mansion, mostly subterranean, which, the roof or vault, rising immediately from the surface of the ground, round, or shaped like an inverted [illegible]. In chapter 41. 14 it is called "the dungeon." Such dungeons are still, under similar circumstances, used in the East. His imprisonment must have been severe at first. A MINISTERIAL MARKSMAN.

CARRIE NATION SYMPATHIZER KNOCKED OUT.

LOUISVILLE & NASHVILLE'S NEW OFFICERS.

Czolgosz's Sentence—Two New States—Fraudulent Claims—Lipton—Diamond Dealer Suicides—Lumbermen to Meet.

A PREACHER SHOOTS.

John C. Brown was shot through the lung on the public square in Carbondale, Ill., Saturday by the Rev. Jos. McGammish, a Seventh Day Adventist minister, and died in forty minutes. Brown for some time has been very bitter against the preacher. He felt that McGammish was paying too much attention to Mrs. Brown. Brown told several people that he would kill McGammish before sundown. The threat reached the minister, he armed himself, and when Brown met him, McGammish shot him. The tragedy occurred during the busiest part of the day and the street was crowded. Brown leaves a widow and one child. McGammish has a wife and two children, considerable property and enjoys the respect of the community.

L. & N. OFFICERS.

At the annual meeting of the directors of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company held in New York, the following officers were elected: Milton H. Smith, president; Walker D. Hines, first vice-president; S. H. Elgar, second vice-president; W. J. Dickinson, third vice-president; J. H. Ellis, secretary; W. W. Thompson, treasurer. Mr. Hines has been filling the position of assistant chief counsel of the company. He is only 31 years old. The office of third vice-president was newly created. The road's earnings for the year ending June 30th were $28,022,206, an increase of $279,828. The total operating expenses were $18,233,033, a decrease of $70,378.

FOR COMMUTATION.

Governor Odell, of New York, declares he will not consider any petition for a commutation of Czolgosz's death sentence, but the Social Alliance of Boston is circulating a petition of this nature for signatures. The petition is a long one and says: "The motive is no sentimental sympathy, much less the upholding of any form of anarchism, but the belief that the ends of justice, the vindication of the law and the higher interests of civilization will be better served by this change in the form of penalty."

PRIEST CHARGED WITH ASSAULT.

Rev. Father Charles J. Jungblud, Lizzie Nolan, his housekeeper, and a servant girl, all of Neillsville, Wis., were arrested Saturday, charged with assaulting Mary Prim, an orphan 11 years of age, who lived at the priest's house. It is alleged that the girl was whipped so severely and punished in other ways that her condition is considered very critical. The people of Neillsville are said to be very indignant.

WIRE CRUSHED THEM.

At Alpena, Mich., Saturday two men were killed and three injured by being crushed under heavy coils of wire at the Page Fence Company's warehouse. The men were pulling wire when a tier of coils toppled over upon them.

WANTS TO COME INTO UNION.

Governor Murphy, of Arizona, has issued a semi-official proclamation calling a statehood convention to convene in Phoenix on October 26. The Phoenix Board of Trade will appropriate funds to cover all the expenses of delegates to the conference. Gov. Murphy has accepted an invitation from Governor Otero, of New Mexico, to address a statehood convention at Albuquerque on October 14. It is understood that the two territories will cooperate in an effort to secure admission.

STREET CAR COLLISION.

Two electric cars on the Camden Inter-State railroad collided Saturday morning in a heavy fog at Huntington, W. Va. Leander Gilkerson, motorman, was probably fatally injured; Charles Wade and Charles W. Dea, mortormen, were dangerously injured, as were several passengers.

MEMPHIS' issue of $250,000 park bonds have been sold at par.

THE LAW PROTECTS 'EM.

The Kansas supreme court has reaffirmed the judgment of the district court of Shawnee county in the case against Balfe Stark. Stark was one of Carrie Nation's assistants in joint smashing. After one of their raids Stark was fined $25 and costs. He appealed to the supreme court, claiming that a saloon being under the ban of the law, might be destroyed by any citizen without violation of the law. The court says: "All places where intoxicating liquors are sold or kept for sale, are declared by statute to be common nuisances. This fact, however, does not justify their abatement by any person or persons without process of law. They can be abated only by a prosecution instituted in behalf of the public by the proper officers. The destruction and injury to such property except in the manner provided by the statute, is a trespass."

"JOE WHEELER, JR."

The actions of a young man who for the past few days has been masquerading under the name of Joseph Wheeler, Jr., United States army, are engaging the attention of the Boston police. It appears the young man registered at a leading hotel and from there sent notes to various business men asking for loans of money. The extent of this operation has not been learned. The hotel clerk missed him and an investigation showed that he was not the son of the famous United States army general, as he claimed to be. Then the police were put on his trail.

LIPTON IN CHICAGO.

One of the principal features of the reception and banquet in honor of Sir Thomas Lipton being arranged by the Chicago Athletic Club will be the presentation of a handsome souvenir that will be designed with the view of making a testimonial of his visit that will be of permanent and constant value to Sir Thomas. The memento will not be a loving cup, but some article that will accompany Sir Thomas and remind him of the Chicago Athletic Association wherever he travels.

JEWELER SUICIDES.

With $5,000 worth of diamonds in his possession, D. W. Dickie, a jeweler, committed suicide Saturday night near the Grant monument in Lincoln Park, Chicago. A park policeman heard a pistol shot in the direction of the monument, and, after searching for twenty minutes in the darkness, came upon the body of Dickie lying upon a bench just south of the statue. Dickie was about 55 years of age. Little could be learned about him.

TOBACCO ASSOCIATION.

The National Tobacco Association was organized at Richmond, Va., Wednesday. The objects of the association are stated to be self-protection, to provide ways and means for general warfare in matters affecting insurance, statistics, export trade and the introduction of American tobacco into foreign countries.

THE Baltimore Sun, which has long resisted the idea of publishing a Sunday edition, has finally succumbed to the popular demands and appeared on October 6.

MORMONS have begun a revival in London, and are holding meetings under the direction of Apostle Francis M. Lyman. At a concert Saturday Miss Emma Gates, a granddaughter of Brigham Young, who has been studying music in Berlin, made her debut.

LUMBER CONVENTION.

New Orleans, October 3.—A call has been issued by officials of the various organizations of lumbermen for a convention of all those interested in the lumber business in the states of Tennessee, North and South Carolina, Florida, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana and Texas to meet in New Orleans on Thursday, October 17, to discuss the best methods of organizing associations in those states into having them and devising means of enlarging the field of work of those already in operation.

TOO MUCH RAIN.

In Managua, Nicaragua, religious processions are being held and prayers are being offered for the cessation of the excessive rains now falling and that there may not be a repetition of the great flood of twenty-five years ago in Western Nicaragua.

THE democrats of Massachusetts have nominated Josiah Quincy for governor.

A Remarkable Story.

An article in La Science pour Tout, informs us that a Chilian botanist has discovered a plant that coughs when the slightest particle of dust alights on the surface of one of its leaves. Strange as this may seem, it is not at all, for upon sufficient provocation it appears the leaf of this same plant turns red and spasmodic tremors pass over it in sucession, while it gives out a sound precisely like sneezing. The so-called respiration of plants is well known to botanists, but when it comes to coughing, blushing and sneezing it would seem that a special examination should be made both of the plant and the botanist reporting the phenomena.

Stayed in Bed 36 Years.

John Bond, a negro at Dublin, Ind., died the other day at the age of 79. Thirty-six years ago, when his mother was about to sell the family farm, he vowed that if the farm were sold he would take to his bed, where he would stay until he grew white. That period in his life was never reached. The farm was sold, and he kept his vow. He never required the assistance of a physician, and was even carried in his bed to the polls to vote until the Australian system came into use. Then he refused to vote at all. His faithful sisters cared for him throughout the many long years.

From Standing Grain to Loaf.

A Great Bend (Kan.) correspondent of the Kansas City Journal writes: "Standing wheat in the field at noon today, harvested, threshed, ground into flour, baked into bread in large quantities by a bakery and sold around town for 6 o'clock supper was a record-breaker in this county this afternoon, in quickness of conversion of standing wheat in the field to the bread plate. A combined harvester and thresher is doing work in California style near town. Several bushels were taken to the Moses Mill and Elevator company, ground into flour, thence the flour went to the Moore bakery, was made into bread, baked and offered for sale in quantities.

A Remarkable Book.

The most remarkable book in the world, so far as appearance is concerned, is neither written nor printed. It is in the imperial library of Paris, and the letters are cut out of tissue paper with a pair of scissors. A sheet of blue tissue, in which the letters are cut, is placed between two pages of white, and so the matter is read.

Pocahontas is described as having features as regular as those of an European woman. She is also said to have had a lighter complexion than usual among Indians.

Mrs. Emma E. Felch, Treasurer Fond du Lac, Wis., Social Economic Club, Tells How She was Cured of Irregular and Painful Menstruation by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for irregular and painful menstruation, and was entirely cured after using two bottles. I can truly say it is a boon to suffering women, and I would recommend all suffering from the above troubles to try a few bottles and be cured. Very thankfully yours, EMMA E. FELCH, Division St., Fond du Lac, Wis."

$5000 FORFEIT IF THE ABOVE LETTER IS NOT GENUINE.

When women are troubled with irregular, suppressed or painful menstruation, weakness, leucorrhœa, displacement or ulceration of the womb, that bearing-down feeling, inflammation of the ovaries, backache, bloating (or flatulence), general debility, indigestion, and nervous prostration, or are beset with such symptoms as dizziness, faintness, lassitude, excitability, irritability, nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, "all-gone" and "want-to-be-left-alone" feelings, blues and hopelessness, they should remember there is one tried and true remedy. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once removes such troubles. Refuse to buy any other medicine, for you need the best.

No other medicine for female ills in the world has received such widespread and unqualified endorsement.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

MOTHERHOOD

The greatest ambition of American men and women is to have homes blessed with children. The woman afflicted with female disease is constantly menaced with becoming a childless wife. No medicine can restore dead organs, but Wine of Cardui does regulate derangements that prevent conception; does prevent miscarriage; does restore weak functions and shattered nerves and does bring babies to homes barren and desolate for years. Wine of Cardui gives women the health and strength to bear healthy children. You can get a dollar bottle of Wine of Cardui from your dealer.

WINE OF CARDUI

143 Market Street,
Memphis, Tenn., April 14, 1901.
In February, 1901, I took one bottle of Wine of Cardui and one package of Thedford's Black-Draught. I had been married fifteen years and had never given birth to a child until I took Wine of Cardui. Now I am mother of a fine baby girl which was born March 31, 1901. The baby weighs fourteen pounds and I feel as well as any person could feel. Now my home is happy and I never will be without Wine of Cardui in my house again. Mrs. J. W. C. SMITH.

Clanton, Ala. Oct. 15, 1901

The new constitution. What is it? Is it the thing that those who favored the convention said it would be? They pledged their honor that it would be the instrument that would free the State from the negro, and fraud at the ballot box. Will this be done if the proposed constitution is adopted by a vote of the people on the 11th day of November? I confess that I cannot see anything in this proposed new constitution that will guarantee to the people any such state of things; but to the contrary every young negro that can read and write can register and vote but the old slaves, the very best class of negroes, can't vote and we are placed in a position of enfranchising the most vicious class of the negro, and disfranchising the old negro who, as a class, are not charged with any crime, but were our slaves and were faithful, as a rule, to every interest of our homes in the late war. I will not argue the question, I only mention it that the people may think of the discrimination between the two classes of negroes and in order that we may, as the rulers, seriously ponder in our hearts the justice to all human beings that is involved in this question. There is one more thought that I will mention, and that is the appointment of three men in each county, all three to be of the same political party, who will be clothed with authority and power to pass on the qualification of of voters. The convention ignored an amendment proposed by Governor Oates which provided that not more than two of these registrars should be of the same political party. Why did the convention do that? Was it not the safeguard that the law in all the states has placed around the ballot box? And could there have possibly been any danger to the people in having at least one man on that board of the opposite political views to that of the dominant party? I can see none, but I think that I can see at least a possibility for that board to pass as qualified those who are of their political persuasion, and to reject those who may not think as they do. I will be charitable and hope that if this constitution is accepted that it will never come, but by way of warning I will say that those who are appointed as registrars should be just towards the people, for if the power that is vested in them should be used for exercised to disfranchise men on account of their political views, it will in my judgment, be the means of more trouble in this country than the country ever experienced. The safe and sure thing for the people to do is to vote against the thing, and rid our people of the possibility of any such complications.

Where is the man that the old constitution has stood in his way? Where is the industry or enterprise in the State that the old constitution has stood in the way of its progress? The old constitution is the friend of education, and the friend of the individual man who may not have property to admit him to the polls and who may, as an honest man, dissent from the party in power. God forbid that we should ever put a premium on land or money and ignore true character and manhood. Let us stand by the old constitution, "the old ship that we know is safe."

Is Your Life Worth 25 Cents?

Consumptives, we know that you have been disappointed many times, but make one more effort to be cured. Gooch's Mexican Syrup has cured thousands and it will cure you. Consumption is the result of the food material that should go to support the body and sustain life being absorbed and thrown off in tuberculous matter. To overcome this waste of vital force and restore the nourishment to the system in its natural course, is to cure. This is accomplished by Gooch's Mexican Syrup. It controls coughs, night sweats, spitting of blood, soreness in chest, inflamed throat and lungs, difficulty of breathing, heavy coughs accompanied with expectoration and parched lips. We know you have been disappointed many times, but make one more effort to save yourself. You can buy a bottle of Gooch's Mexican Syrup for 25 cents. It cures a simple cough as if by magic, and is the best remedy for whooping cough.

For inflamed eyes, sore throat, sore mouth, use Dr. Tichenor's Antiseptic. Pleasant to taste and smell and will give quick relief.

NOTICE TO FARMERS.

It is a well-known fact that every man should work to his own interest. Then why not the farmer get the benefit of his own labor? Why not the farmer get his prices as well as the merchant? Simply because he does not look around and see what the market price is. He does not know where to go. He does not know that R. L. MARCUS will give more for Produce of all kinds and sell goods for less money than anybody in the city. One call will convince you. Respectfully, R. L. MARCUS, Clanton.

UNIVERSITY SCHOOL
PLANTERSVILLE, ALA.

Is a training and strictly private school for boys and girls.

Correllated to the University of Alabama and to the Alabama Polytechnic Institute.

Has fitted more pupils for college, more pupils for teaching, more pupils for advanced business positions than all other schools in Chilton county combined. It is the only school in Chilton county whose pupils have a First Grade Certificate under the present school laws.

Its course of instruction is the best arranged, its methods the soundest, most thorough and up-to-date; its scholarship the most advanced; its location, buildings, grounds, furniture, equipments, the most attractive and best adapted of any school in Chilton county.

Its pupils enter any college in the South on certificate of the Principal. It deals honestly with the public adheres to professional courtesy, and performs its promises. Its mission is to build up, not to pull down. It is not, as some are, a mere common school called "College," "Normal," etc., by which misnomers the uninformed are misled.

$101 pays all expenses of board, tuition, fuel, lights, etc., for session of nine months. School opens September 25, 1901. Write for catalogue. E. Y. MCMORRIES, Principal.

CLANTON, - - - ALABAMA.

Americans do not monopolize the practice of keeping the courts busy. It is published that in 1899 there were more than 1,125,000 actions started in England, making litigants of over 4 percent of the population.

The New York World says that we can smile at British jealousy of American trade triumphs, but when John Bull intimates that American ladies can't dance he'd better look out. There is such a thing as going too far.

For every man, woman and child in the country there is an average of two farm animals. There are about 40,000,000 each of sheep and swine, about 45,000,000 cows and other cattle, and about 16,000,000 horses and mules.

Dr. Mary Wooley, president of Mt. Holyoke college, says that "gentlewoman" should be a synonym of "college woman," and adds that "the sacrifice of gracious womanhood is far too great for knowledge and is not required."

Professor Ludwig Marlenburger of Chicago announces that the earth draws closer to the sun each succeeding summer and recedes farther away each winter. Though the exact measurements are not at hand, this condition of affairs has been suspected.

The skeleton spectre of famine again stalks abroad in parts of Russia and of Asia. Again the east will cry out to the west to give bread to millions of starving mouths. Even with all the progress of modern civilization, hunger seems to torment as vast multitudes as in the days of the Caesars. Times are sadly out of joint in broad regions of the earth.

The hostility to the teaching of vertical writing in the public schools seems to be gaining headway both in the East and the West. School boards and citizens generally appear to lean toward the slanting support of upright penmanship. The smooth, forward, flowing method of forming letters carries along with it the favor of the masses.

At the last session of the Indiana legislature a law was passed extending the right of eminent domain, such as is exercised by steam railroad corporations to condemn rights of way, to all traction companies. The effect of this law has been wonderfully stimulating to electric railroad construction. Something like 1000 miles of electric railroad is at present projected in the state and a keen competition in suburban and interurban traffic between steam and electric systems is expected to follow.

Niagara is a young river. G. K. Gilbert, of the United States Geological Survey, explains that it came into existence after the glacial epoch. The cataract has sawed a slot seven miles long, moving back four or five feet each year. This would make the river 7000 years old. But the falls have not always been so high, nor the crest line so uniform, nor the volume of water so great. From this it would seem that the river may be anything from seven thousand to a hundred thousand years old. No more exact computation can be made.

Dr. B. Benjamin Andrews, in a lecture on "Veracity" at the University of Chicago said that it is sometimes a good and proper thing to tell a lie, providing the intention in mind is a good one. "Veracity is not merely a statement of facts; neither is a lie merely a statement of what is not true," said Dr. Andrews. "A bad intention is necessary to constitute a lack of veracity. When a sick man is near death is is proper to tell him that in a short time, perhaps, he will be well. This is not lying. But if you tell a man who is near death the fact for the purpose of killing him, that is a lie."

Ten years ago the population of the world was fixed at 1,468,900,000. It is now estimated at 1,540,000,000, an increase of more than 71,000,000. An interesting feature of the statistics is the fact that the Americans are fast catching up with Europe in the gain. The increase in the Americas for the past ten years is 20,000,000, while in Europe it is 50,000,000. It is estimated that the Western hemisphere now contains 142,000,000, about the population of the whole of Europe a century ago. The estimate for Europe at the present time is 390,000,000. Africa is now gaining in population at a greater rate than at any time within a century.

FOR GOOD ROADS.

The Southern Railway has entered upon a scheme for the improvement of the wagon roads of the South in pursuance of the policy of President Spencer to encourage the growth and development of all territory tributary to the Southern system. A good roads special train of ten cars will leave Washington shortly for the South under charge of President W. H. Moore of the National Good Roads Association, and will make frequent stops at points along the Southern Railway for the purpose of building sample roads and arousing interest among the people on the subject. The aim is to educate the southern people in practical road building, and to impress on them the economy and benefit to be derived from fine roads. The train will carry all necessary machinery for the building of roads and a corps of road experts.

DISEASED COTTON.

W. A. Ortenk, assistant pathologist in the bureau of plant industry of the United States Department of Agriculture, at Washington, is at Montgomery to investigate the wilt disease of cotton, which has been the cause of much injury in some sections of Alabama as well as in other states. He hopes to obtain a variety of cotton resistant to the wilt. The disease may be recognized, Mr. Ortenk says, by the blackening of the inside of the stem of diseased plants. It occurrs usually in scattered patches in the fields, which increase in size from year to year until they involve the whole field. Land once diseased always remains so, and it is this feature which makes the disease so much to be dreaded.

HENRY PIERSON DITTMAN, a well-known sugar broker, formerly of Selma, died in New York last Friday morning. Mr. Dittman was a brother of Mrs. Ellen Brown, librarian of the Selma Library Association.

THE residence of John Manley, five miles southwest of Huntsville, was destroyed by fire early Saturday morning. The loss was $3,000; no insurance. Mr. Manley and family narrowly escaped from the burning building with their lives, and saved nothing.

COL. LIGON DEAD.

Col. R. T. Ligon, the last Lieutenant governor of Alabama, died in Montgomery Friday morning. He was elected to the office on the ticket with Gov. Houston in 1874. His office was abolished at the close of his term.

BIG RAILROAD SUITS.

Fifteen suits aggregating nearly $1,500,000 have been filed in the federal court in Denver. These suits are against all the principal railrords having representatives in Denver. A larger batch will be filed in Chicago and New York, and the total sum asked for will be greatly increased. The suits have been brought by Colonel George W. Cook. They are aimed at all the railway and car companies of the United States and Canada. They invole adjudication of a patent car brake, which was originated in Denver nearly twenty years ago. The suits are for infringement of the brake, the principles of which are alleged now to be in actual application on every railroad on the continent. The patent was issued in 1883, to Simon P. Weller, Sylvanus Wance and George Boesch, all of Denver. Weller is now Master Mechanic of the Missouri Pacific road at Sedalia, Mo.

CLAIMS ACCIDENT.

Jesse Sherman, a prominent ranchman living near Leadville, Col., caught three boys supposedly poaching upon his rabbit preserves Sunday and started after them with a shotgun. One boy was killed instantly, another was shot through the right lung and fatally wounded, and a third was shot through the back and hips. Sherman took the three boys to town and gave himself up. He asserts the gun was accidently discharged while he was running. He was arrested on the charge of murder. Sherman and his family are among the most respected people in this part of the country.

AFRICAN RAILROAD.

It has been decided by the government of the Congo Free State to construct 1,000 kilometers (621 miles) of railroad in the upper Congo region. This marks an important change in the development of the colony. The railway will bring the thickly populated banks of lakes Albert and Tanganyika into direct communication with the Congo river, through a country exceptionally rich and capable of of rapid development. The new line will remain the permanent property of the Congo Free State.

FIVE ROBBERS

Early Saturday morning robbed the post office of Harrodsburg, Ky., securing $30, and afterward attempted to effect an entrance to the Mercer National Bank. Before they succeeded they were discovered by officers, who at once opened fire on them. About forty shots were exchanged and one of the robbers was wounded, after which the band retreated, taking their disabled comrade with them, and effected thei escape. One of the men is reported to have a thumb shot off and a slight wound from a bullet in his face.

Gen. John R. Brooke, commanding the Department of the East, has issued his annual report. The bureau at the infantry and cavalry posts found inadequate in size and recommends an enlargement. General Brooke lays great stress upon the desirability to having the army posts in remote Southern posts made as comfortable and attractive as possible for their garrisons. He emphatically renews his former recommendation in regard to the possibility of a war, of an attack of several hundred from the land side in the rear. He urges that the approaches receive the attention which their importance demand. He recommends that experiments in wireless telegraphy be conducted. The most important feature of the report is an appendix by Lieutenant J. P. Story, dealing with ordnance and artillery. He says the most important problem pressing upon the artillery is to provide a sufficient number of officers and men qualified to operate the artillery defense of our harbors. To operate the mines in the harbors of the United States and its possessions will require about seventy officers and 2,700 soldiers.

The final census report on the population by sex, general activity and color of the several states and territories is issued. It shows that the whole number 39,059,242 and constitutes 51.2 per cent of the total population in 1900 while the females number 37,241,145 or 48.8 per cent. There is a slightly larger proportion of females now than ten years ago. There is an increase in total population of 21 per cent since 1890. There are native born persons and foreign born persons. As to color or race the population in 1900 is made up of 66,990,802 white persons, 9,312,585 colored, Chinese, Japanese and Indians. The colored element constitutes 12.2 per cent of the population.

General Wood's trip is producing great interest in the movement for reciprocity, says the Remedios correspondent of the Tribune. Santa Clara, Cardinas, Sagua and Remedios, Spaniards and Cubans, appeal for a reduction of the duty on sugar and tobacco. They say the country will be ruined unless United States grants this appeal. Politics on the eve of an election in president is even overshadowed by this question, and the good feeling for America is noticeable.

The United States supreme court convenes this week. The term will probably be occupied with motions and admissions to the bar, for advancement of cases and for writs of certiorari. Such cases as have been set for argument will be heard. Several important ones are docketed.

Gen. Powell Clayton, of the U. S. minister to Mexico, resigned September 20th, but has been asked by President Roosevelt.

Surgeon General Sternberg in his annual report to the secretary of war says the health of the army was good during the calendar year. The surgeon general says that alcoholism is decreasing among the soldiers.

One of the matters which is expected will receive attention at the coming sessions of the national conference of American states to be held in the City of Mexico is the establishment of an international health service.

The thirty days period of mourning prescribed by President McKinley in respect to the memory of the late President McKinley expired and the flags on all government buildings which have been at half mast since the 14th of last month were displayed again at full mast.

Ethel Roosevelt, the President's second daughter, is a student and pupil at the Cathedral School in the suburbs of Washington.

An Infant Musician.

The gold medal for violin playing at the Royal Academy and Royal College of Music in London has been obtained by May Harrison, a little girl 10 years old.

Doctor of Oriental Learning.

Miss Mary Williams Montgomery who has received the degree of doctor of Oriental learning, was born in Turkey 27 years ago. Her mother was Miss Emily Redington of Rome, N. Y., and her father the Rev. E. R. Montgomery. Both went to Turkey as missionaries under the American board (Congregational). Miss Montgomery lived in Turkey until she was 12 years old, when she came to this country to complete her education. She was graduated from Wellesley college in 1898, and from there went to Germany for a post-graduate course in Berlin university. Miss Montgomery is a sister of George R. Montgomery, professor of philosophy in the Yale divinity school.

Crepes and Poplinettes.

As regards fabrics, there is more substance in the soft, clinging crepe de chine and satins of today than in the taffies of yore. Many women complain of the price of crepe de chine, but it is really a good investment for the fabric cleans so beautifully and when the powers of the cleaner have been exhausted the dyer's art can be resorted to. Thus it is seen that crepe de chine is a most serviceable fabric, which can do duty equally well for day or evening wear.

Another fashionable fabric of the same silky texture is poplinette, which likewise can be worn on various occasions. These poplinettes vary in quality. Some are entirely of silk, and others are of silk and wool, resembling a very fine canvas, akin to silk, but of softer finish.

When Packing Luggage.

When packing luggage it is well to make a list of the articles as they are put into the different boxes. The list should be made in such a way that one put in last are entered the first, each box being numbered, so that if any special article is wanted it may be known at once which box contains it. When packing glass or china protect some straw or hay to pack them in if they are to be sent a long way and are heavy. It should be damped to prevent them slipping. Let the most and heaviest things be put first in the box. Let there be plenty of straw and pack them tightly. Never attempt to pack glass which is of much value till you have seen it done by some one used to the job. The expense will be but trifling to have a person to do it who understands it, and may be great if articles of value are packed in an improper manner.

Rage for Burano Lace.

There is a great vogue at present for the lovely and rarely used Burano lace, that 25 years ago Queen Margherita resuscitated during the time of great poverty and starvation in the little village of Burano, outside of Venice. A difficulty arose, however, for, although superb specimens of Burano lace were in existence, so small had been the demand that all the old workers had died out, and the only old woman who remembered the Burano point stitches was unable to teach them. But by watching old Cenci Scarparioia work, Mme. Anna Bali d'Este, present mistress of the school, cunningly learned the secret, perfected herself thoroughly, and then taught to eight pupils what she herself had acquired.

In color it is a delicious deep cream, the stitches are exquisitely fine, and now there is a positive "craze" for the exquisite Burano point. There is no other fad so satisfying as the collection of fine laces.

American Women at Shanghai.

English women living in Shanghai do not go in for culture or intellectual distinction. The American women, however, are true to their traditions. They love books, and, although far from friends and country, they do not forget self-improvement. The club which they founded in Shanghai is flourishing, and which has been well sustained, evidences that fact. As the American consulate is common ground, meetings have been held in the drawing room, which will accommodate several hundred people. The object of the club, it is stated in the constitution and bylaws, is to develop a higher and broader intellectual culture, and to unite more closely the women of the American community in Shanghai. It is called the American Woman's Literary society, and any American woman may join, a member who has been recommended by the executive committee and receives a two-thirds vote of the members present at the meeting at which her name is proposed. The program is arranged for the year by committees, but is subject to revision at the direction of the society, to which it is submitted as a whole.—Philadelphia Press.

Secret of Unfading Loveliness.

The secret of unfading loveliness has been discovered by an American woman, according to a writer in the London Mail. She had become weary of the monotonous process of applying an artificial bloom to her cheeks, day after day, so while in London went to a "fashionable tattooist" and asked him if he could tatto "a nice, healthy color that would stay there all the time." The artists in pigments was startled, but said he would try, and proceeded to experiment on his own ankle with a pigment about the color of rouge.

The story goes that at the end of a week of close and careful observation he, to his great delight, obtained the exact tint for facial application. He furthermore discovered that it was necessary to grade the coloring so that by repeating the process over the pigment already inserted he was able to make a perfect imitation of the glow of health. Then the American returned, and to her great delight was informed that if she was still determined to go through with it the tattooing could be done.

"Even then," said the tattooist afterward, "I was very nervous about it, for I knew that if it was a failure nothing on earth could ever remove the evidences of a blunder. However, I yielded to persuasion, and set to work with the finest needle I had and some carefully prepared color. How closely I watched the effect of every insertion of the pigment and what a state of anxiety I was in until the second tattooing had been finished I shall always remember, but it was a success beyond anything that either of us had expected. The American looked at herself in the glass and went away delighted beyond measure with the successful results of her own bright idea."

Useful Home Work for Women.

In the Woman's Home Companion Ada C. Sweet has an unusually able and attractive article which every woman interested in home work will read with pleasure.

"I saw an unusually attractive room of a girl last summer. The rug she had made herself from strips of blue and white cotton, knitting them, like yarn, on large wooden needles. The window curtains had been a pair of rather coarse but snow white linen sheets—old homespun linen. These cut in two she had hemstitched all around, to make two curtains for each window. Then she had embroidered them in dull blue and white, just a sprig here and there inside the hems. The bedcover was all white. It had been made from a wide piece of some thick, cotton material, and was edged with an embroidered cambric ruffle. The covers for bureau and wash stand were made in the same way, of the same material. The little bookcase in this room had a brilliant curtain which fairly shone and flashed with color. Its owner had bought a remnant of satin, and loaded it with embroidery in most fanciful patterns and colors. I did not wonder at the pride with which its young mistress showed this room.

"When our girls begin to appreciate woman's handiwork at its true value they will see the worthlessness of much of the gimcrack furniture which lumbers many houses. The pine boxes with veneered fronts which pass for wardrobes and bureaus; the tawdry, unfinished, assertive, weak-kneed tables and chairs, the 'over-stuffed,' fat cushioned sofas with colorings like unto an Indian's blanket, and all the endless bric-a-brac and cheap impedimenta of the day, will not bear the examination of intelligent, instructed eyes. The girl who works, under artistic training, with her own hands at household stuffs will demand tables and chairs of good material, well planned and well made, comfortable and standing square on their four legs, as respectable tables and chairs should stand."

FASHION NOTES

Beautiful lorgnettes are of smoked pearl set with jewels.

A white tulle hat with rather wide brim has a large black ostrich feather across the front.

Folds are seen, some three or four rather wide folds edging a wide collar or sleeve tabs of lace, and forming the standing collar.

On one of the plain backed skirts the bands of the material which finish it are put in an ornamental design across the back. This is not so satisfactory as plain, straight strappings.

Enameling was never prettier or more popular. One little chatelaine watch is in pale blue enamel with a fleur de lys in the centre, and the chatelaine pin in the form of a fleur de lys of the blue enamel.

The heart has been everywhere in woman's dress except on her head, and it has at last reached the hats. Black hats for the fall will be trimmed with black galon spangled, the black spangles in the form of hearts.

The long light woolen coats show yokes from which rows of stitching having the effect of closing inverted plaits fit them to a little below the waist, where each seam opens and leaves the skirt of the coat full.

An attractive brown felt hat with a round derby shaped crown and rolling rim is trimmed with a big knot of brown veiling in the front and light brown quills, two or three on either side tucked into the knot which extends well around to the sides.

Thin clusters of buttons are seen on many of the first exhibitions of fall styles. One long light coat has small satin buttons in the thick clusters with knots of satin ribbon, having the effect of bunches of grapes. The massed clusters of buttons appear on different styles of garments.

GARDEN AND FARM

TO USE WITH PARIS GREEN.

When using paris green allow one pound for 150 pounds of plaster. If water is used, mix one pound paris green with ten gallons of water.

IMPROVEMENT IN BEEF CATTLE.

Fifty years ago the average weight of beef cattle on the hoof were only 800 pounds, but improvement of breeds has so greatly increased the size of beef cattle as to bring the average up to 1,400 pounds at the present day.

WHEN PLANTS WILL GERMINATE.

Experiments show that rye and winter wheat will germinate in a soil the temperature of which is thirty-two degrees; barley, oats, flax, peas and clover will sprout at thirty-five degrees; turnips, the same, carrots at thirty-eight and beans at forty degrees. If these experiments have been carefully conducted they demonstrate that some plants will sprout even below the freezing point.

SCIENCE IN FEEDING.

Too much science in feeding cannot be given, but some of the advice relating to feeding according to the live weight of the animals is almost impossible on some farms. The German tables call for one and a third per cent. of the live weight of the animal, or about 13 pounds of food per 1000 pounds of live weight. As animals vary in weight, while foods also differ in quality, the labor required to apportion the foods for the individual animals would be too costly, and considerable time would also be lost.

THE TREATMENT OF ROUP.

During the season of cold rains and chilly nights unless the poultry is well guarded roup will likely result. The first symptoms appear as a slight cold, a scarcely perceptible gasp in breathing, which slowly develops and shows itself in inflammation of head and eyes. The eyes begin to water, and the fowls rub the sides of their heads on their wings in an attempt to relieve them. At this stage roup may easily be cured, since ulceration has not set in, but if left to itself a cancerous substance will form in the eyes and mouth, and nothing but death will relieve them. When first noticed, the fowls should be isolated and placed in bright, dry rooms, the head and face washed with warm water and castile soap and annointed with carbolized vaseline. A little kerosene should be injected in nostrils, and this treatment should be continued daily for two or three days. Feed lightly and make them work for their food.—Home and Farm.

MASH AS A POULTRY FOOD.

A mash of half meal and half bran is one of the best foods for chickens, young or old I know of. For the young chicken I prefer to have the food cooked but for the old ones I do not care. The mash must not be fed in the morning, because when the fowls get all they want of it they will all huddle in the sun together and do nothing all day. The right time to feed mash is just before the fowls go to roost at night. By feeding mash in the winter time I have no trouble in making them fill the egg basket. Mash is also a fine food to fatten fowls with. To fatten fowls with mash it should be mixed with sugar, say a small handful to a quart of mash, fed twice a day. It should be fed in troughs.—Inland Poultry Journal.

HORSERADISH AS A GARDEN GARDEN CROP.

Horseradish hardly gets its due in the ordinary gardn. It is put into a corner, like the boy when company comes, as though any place and any treatment were good enough for it. When one buys horseradish on the market—that is, the prepared horseradish—he is reminded again how careless the popular mind has grown to be on this matter. The purchaser of grocery-store horseradish does well if he gets a ten per cent. dose of the real root. The ninety per cent. may be potato or turnip or excelsior, or almost anything. What we need is a horseradish revival. People's eyes should be opened (spite of their weeping) to the merits of pure goods, and, equally, to the merits of the adulterants. Good varieties of horseradish should be selected, good cuttings should be carefully taken and planted in a good place in the garden, and clean, sound roots should be prepared for the dining table. Good horseradish is a wholesome and grateful thing, but poor horseradish is an abomination.—The Country Gentleman.

LOSS BY FLIES.

At the Wisconsin Station they divided fourteen cows into two lots, as nearly equal in condition as they could make them, and one-half were sent to pasture according to the usual custom of farmers, though in a small field with plenty of shade during the day. The others were kept during the day in a comfortable stable with screen doors and windows, but allowed to feed in the pasture during the night and early morning. It was found that these produced twenty per cent. more butter than those in the pasture during the day, as the latter were kept moving all of the time by the flies. On an Iowa dairy farm they obtained more milk from cows kept in a dark stable without screens during the day and let out to graze at night, than they did from those in pasture all day and in stable at night. Similar results have been obtained by the spraying of cattle with something to repel the flies, but most of these repellants have an odor that fills the air in the stable and may injure the milk or butter, if not very carefully used. We never found anything better than a sponge or damp cloth just moist with kerosene, and wiped lightly over the top of the head, along the back and over the legs, using it every morning just after milking. The odor evaporates before the next milking, if not used too freely.—The Cultivator.

HELPING OUT THE SUMMER PASTURES.

The success of summer dairying depends upon the pasture first, and then on the way the pasture is helped out in the way of providing additional summer food. We have passed the age of dairying where a progressive farmer depends entirely upon a pasture field, turning his cows loose there all summer, and letting them scurry for a living. Such cows live in clover the first half of the summer, and nearly starve during the rest of the season. They grow lean and weak and their milk supply gets smaller and thinner every week, and by the time fall and winter comes they are pretty specimens. A farmer once told the writer that he had tried summer dairying and winter dairying, and there was money in neither. Upon investigation, it was found that his system was to starve the cows in summer for winter dairying, and vice versa for summer dairying. The result was the animals never came up to the mark because it took them half the season to recover from the starvation process.

Whether you intend to try winter dairying or depend simply upon summer dairying, it is necessary to have good pasture through the summer, and in the late summer and autumn it is necessary to help the pasture out. This is simpler than many imagine. Sometimes it simply means fencing off a portion of the field, so the grass has a chance to grow while the cows are feeding on the other part. Constant daily cropping in hot, dry weather kills the grass and keeps the plants from ever getting any headway. If the pasture field is sufficiently large, fence part of it off in August, and in this way keep it green and healthful. Also be sure that the weeds and briers are kept cut down. Do not let any of these go to seed. Their spread will ruin a pasture lot quicker than anything. The cows do not disturb the weeds and briars, and consequently they have the opportunity to grow and thrive while the grass has not. At least give the latter a fair chance in the race.

Help the pasture out with ensilage and corn stover crops. Do not be sparing with these even in summer. They may save a good deal for the late fall pasture, which is oftentimes more valuable to the dairyman than the early spring and summer grass. A little system like this will go a long way toward keeping up the quality and supply of milk and cream, and at the same time preserving the health of the animals for the fall and winter work.—William Conway, in American Cultivator.

ARTIFICIAL INCUBATION AND BROODING.

When we set hens with eggs costing several dollars per setting, it causes great anxiety. When operating on incubators, all that is necessary is to look at the thermometer and see that the temperature is being maintained at the proper degree, and if the mercury is playing round 103 or 104, you are satisfied that all must be going well. The objections we have to using hens for incubators is, nothing taxes the vital powers of your birds so much as setting, and then the annoyance, they are invariably declining to set, breaking eggs, eating eggs, etc., that is fatal to the enterprise of early chicken raising. The incubator will hatch just as many chickens from fertile eggs as the hens, and if any difference, more, and the brooder will raise as large a percentage if these chicks as the hens will. Our observation with brooders is that a much larger percentage is raised. Instead of having a number of broody hens for three weeks, you can have them laying, which increases the income and saves food. If hotels and restaurants can afford to pay from fifty to seventy-five cents for young chicks, why not the farmer have his incubator and brooders and get off those nice young broilers early for his own use. After he once gets a machine it will last him for a lifetime if well cared for. We are quite sure if the American people would use more broiler meat and less pork, there would be less sickness and healthier children. The farmer can avail himself of this fine luxury cheaper than any one, as he raises his own grain and has plenty of of free range. An incubator and brooder on a farm for the use of the family may become just as much of a necessity as any machine employed. The main point in artificial incubating and brooding is, you can have broilers just when you want them. If you are breeding fine fowls their health and appearance is much improved with an incubator to hatch your stock. Hens not allowed to set, both young and old, will be in better condition. We believe in incubators to perform the work of hens. The birds will score more points, and prove more profitable as layers as the vitality is not sapped from the ancestors.—J. C. Clipp, in The Epitomist.

Iron Crown of Italy.

The famous iron crown of Lombardy is one of tht most precious heirlooms of the Italian royal house. The crown is only partially of iron. Tradition declares it was made from one of the nails used at the Crucifixion. This was beaten out into a thin rim or iron, which was magnificently set in gold and adorned wth jewels. Pope Gregory the Great bestowed it on Queen Theodolinda, a Frankish princess, under whom the Lombards first changed their Arian faith for the Catholic. Charlemagne was crowned with it, and so were Henry of Luxemburg and succeeding emperors. It was also used at the coronation of Napoleon I. The Emperor of Austria restored it to the King of Italy in 1866.—London Graphic.

SURGICAL LAWSUIT DECIDED.

The Right to Discretion in Emergencies Affirmed.

There is a popular notion that surgeons will always operate when they get a chance, but when it may not be necessary. This notion has less basis to-day than it had once, although anæsthetics and antiseptic methods make surgery far safer now than fifty years ago. And the idea never had much excuse. There have been in the past, and are to-day, exceptions to the rule, but the majority of surgeons are reluctant to operate until it is absolutely necessary. Indeed they sometimes refuse when patients ask them to do so.

A lawsuit was recently decided in Chicago which was probably based on the old belief here referred to. A surgeon, after beginning an operation such as had been agreed upon, proceeded to do something else which had not been originally proposed, but which he believed to be necessary, in view of newly discovered facts. The patient entirely recovered, and was in excellent health at the time the suit was brought, four years later. The court held that the surgeon had kept within his rights in acting as he had done.

It is important to keep in mind two sets of conditions under which the extra operation might be conducted. It might be something which the surgeon merely regarded as a good, but not a necessary thing. Here it would not be excusable to proceed, if there had been no previous understanding. But unforseen complications may arise. Perhaps a cancer is to be removed, and on opening the body the operator finds that it extends further than was suspected. What shall he do? Take out only a part and leave the rest in? Shall he pause in the middle of the operation, restore the patient to full consciousness (which might require an hour or two), and then lay the case before him for decision? Or, suppose an artery begins to bleed. Must the surgeon wait until next day to get permission to tie it up? "The Medical Record" remarks that "it is wise policy, whenever there is any reasonable probability of unexpected complications, to obtain the patient's prior consent to deal with any other conditions that may be found essentially connected with the proposed operation." But even without such an understanding, surprises will sometimes occur, and the surgeon ought to have freedom to be governed by circumstances.

His Wife Rattled Him.

"Women are so impulsive," said an East End man the other day. "I was awakened from a sound sleep Sunday morning by my wife crying in an excited manner. 'Henry! Henry! come quick!' I sprang from bed and ran to the head of the stairs and at once smelled smoke. Then I shouted, 'Take the baby, run to the corner and turn in the alarm!' I scrambled back to the room and snatched up some clothes, thinking I'd put them on later. Then I grabbed little Elizabeth, who was sleeping with me under my arm and dashed downstairs. 'Where is it?' I exclaimed running here and there to locate the fire. Behold, my wife was sitting in the dining-room with the baby in her lap as calm as could be, with nothing out of the usual, except a smile of joy on her face.

"'Why don't you get out of here? Do you want to be burned up alive?' I shouted.

"'Why, Henry, what in the world's the matter with you? Are you crazy?'

"'No, I'm not crazy. I want to know where the fire is?'

"'Fire! There is no fire,' she said.

"'What did you yell fire for then?'

"'I didn't.'

"'Well, what in thunder is it, then?'

"'Why, Charlotte has a tooth.'

"'Goodness, I thought the house was on fire.'

"'How stupid,' remarked my wife coolly, as she placed the baby in her high chair and started for the kitchen. 'Why don't you put Elizabeth down? Do you intend to carry her under your arm all day? And you had better get dressed, too; breakfast is almost ready.'"

The Enemies of the Lobsters.

Everything that swims is an enemy to the little embryo lobster, including himself—for the larger ones eat the little ones in most wanton fashion. The little fry lobsters shed their shells seventeen times on the average during the first year of their existence. After they are five years old they shed them four times a year.

The range of the lobster is about 1,000 miles, from the straits of Belle Isle on the north of Cape Hatteras on the south, and fifty miles out to sea. It was long a mooted question whether they went up and down the coast, like shad, mackerel, blue fish, etc., or whether they remained stationary like the oyster and clam.

This was settled by the fish commission in a very curious and interesting way. They attached a zinc tag to a lot of them at various points, and set them free. These tags were numbered, and a record kept of them in a book. Fishermen were given a prize if they would return them to the commission by mail with a statement as to where and when found. By these means it was soon discovered that they travel back and forth out to sea, instead of up and down the coast.

The English Beanfeast.

Beanfeast is the name given to an annual dinner given by employers in England to their works people—possibly so called because beans or a bean-goose figure prominently at the banquet. The beanfeast was regularly, in older times, observed on Twelfth Night in England, and also some places on the Continent, and is a very old institution.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

Lieutenant Peary has reached the highest point North. But he has not been able to climb the pole.

William Waldorf-Astor has been explaining why he became an Englishman. It is hoped that he is not looking back to his old home and cherishing hopes of fatted calf.

And now some iconoclast has discovered that there is no such thing as a Turkish bath in Turkey. We expect to hear next that there are no French-fried potatoes in France.

During the past sixteen years lynchings have occurred in all the States except five—Delaware, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Utah. It is a national evil.

If this thing keeps up this old world may reasonably expect at some time to receive a visit from a full planet. Not long ago a meteorite was discovered at Porto Alegre, Brazil, fifty-five feet in diameter and eighty-five feet in length.

In Great Britain a child must reach the age of seven years before it can be prosecuted as a criminal. In Germany the limit it twelve. Possibly the English age is the safest. Seven years would seem to be sufficient to inculate the principles of honesty and true humanity into a child.

"No man liveth unto himself." The glory or the shame of the individual is bound to reflect itself, however much he may wish it otherwise, upon the parents who reared him, on the wife and the children who bear his name, and upon all the people and institutions closely associated with his career.

"In a climate where a man can lie in a hammock, pick up a banana with one hand, and dig a sweet potato with one foot, the incentive to idleness is easy, and his debilitating consequences inevitable." This, says former Governor Allen, is sufficient explanation why Porto Rico has for four centuries been practically at a standstill.

General Miles has ordered a thousand new pistols from the manufacturers of the Mauser rifles in Germany for the use of our cavalrymen and mounted officers. The pistols were invented by an American named Borchard, and they possess a remarkable capacity for rapid and accurate fire. Our Government contemplates securing the exclusive right of manufacture.

Chicago's compulsory education department has provided a means to sterilize all the lead pencils used by the pupils as they are given out in the morning and collected at the close of school. As the children do not get the same pencils back again there is danger of infection especially as almost all are in the habit of chewing the ends of their pencils, which is a certain method of contagion unless they are disinfected.

The advent at the White House of a President with an average family makes renewed and sharp disclosure of the fact that this great country has no domicile large enough for its Chief Magistrate. In the residence wing of the Executive Mansion there are but five sleeping apartments, while the Roosevelt family, with nurse, governess, maid and housekeeper, numbers twelve persons. Under such circumstances the housing of the President's family in decent quarters is a serious problem, a solution for which should be promptly found by the incoming Congress next winter, thinks the Philadelphia Record.

For many years the French have been endeavoring to devise some means of bringing the oases of the desert of Sahara into such communication with the rest of the world as to admit of their cultivation. Camel trains are too slow and uncertain, and railways are impracticable. At last a suitable means of transportation has apparently been found. It is the automobile. The new vehicle, therefore, offers another means of carrying civilization into Africa. Automobile trips across the hitherto pathless desert may become in the near future one of the things which every tourist will undertake as a part of this Old World travel.

Amos W. Butler, Secretary of the Indiana State Board of Charities, has made a study of the feeble-minded in the Indiana institutions. In a group of 241 families in which there are two or more generations of feeble-mindedness, he found 970 persons who are blood relations. Of these families, 221 have two generations of feeble-mindedness, sixteen have three generations, three have four generations, and one has five generations. The number of direct descendants who are feeble-minded is known to be 726. These facts led Mr. Butler to the conclusion that the State should retain control of these grown-up children during life.

Dr. Max Haushofer, of the Munich University, says that society may be held responsible, though only to a limited extent, for certain conditions of life created by it, into which it introduces the individual and by which it offers occasion to the degeneration of human impulses. Moral carelessness, superstition, vexatious family life, lack of noble incentives, material distress, immoderate longing for enjoyment, wasting envy—these are conditions into which man is brought not quite by his own faults and which form the soil for emotions that either in precipitous passion or by plan, secret and continuous urging create criminal deeds.

IN our correspondence columns will be found a letter on the suffrage clause of the new Constitution signed "Taxpayer and Voter." The writer takes a very pessimistic view of some things which under that clause might possibly happen. If his view should be correct, we are bound to confess that his advice to vote against the new Constitution would be good and safe to follow. But there are two sides to this as well as every other question, and we cannot agree with "Taxpayer and Voter." He takes the gloomy view that every person connected in any way with the registration of voters is to be such a strict partisan as to ignore those not of the same politics. We look at it from the brighter side. Let us see.

1. Three registrars are to be appointed in each county. Will they be all of one political party? We do not know, neither does our correspondent. We have confidence in Governor Jelks seeing to it that the opposition is fairly represented. We are of the opinion that Governor Jelks is just as likely to appoint one or more Populist registrars in Chilton county as to appoint Democrats. It should be remembered that under the Sayre election law we have had a Democrat appointed registrar, and no harm has come out of it, and we do not expect any trouble to arise from the new appointments when made.

2. We do not believe that one white man will be disfranchised under the new Constitution, but undoubtedly a large number of negroes will. This should be a feature very agreeable to our friends the Populists, who were always in favor of getting rid of the negro vote. "Taxpayer and Voter" thinks that young negroes who can read and write will register, and no doubt some of them will. But their number will be comparatively small, and with ALL white men registered what influence can that small number have? That is the safeguard of this suffrage proposition. ALL white men to be voters, and the great bulk of illiterate negro voters eliminated.

3. We heartily concur in this sentiment expressed by "Taxpayer and Voter:"—"God forbid that we should ever put a premium on land or money and ignore true character and manhood." We say amen to that. There seems to be a great deal of misapprehension in relation to this suffrage clause. Under what is known as the temporary registration plan every white man in the State can register whether he can read and write or not, or whether he owns one cent's worth of property or not, and once his name is on the register he is registered for life. After 1903 if he can read and write he can register, but if he cannot read and write he must be a property owner. That is the registration plan simply expressed.

We feel confident that every white man in Chilton county will be duly registered in good time, and none need feel any uneasiness on that score.

THE following circular has been issued by Hon. S. J. Bowie to the voters of Calhoun county, and as it is of equal value to voters of this county we gladly reproduce it.

The more thoroughly voters understand the new Constitution the more they will appreciate it.

The Democratic papers throughout the county and State have published copies of the new Constitution and address explaining it. I hope that you will read both carefully and explain it to your neighbors.

The new Constitution among many other good points, guarantees to the whole people of the State:

1st. The elimination of the great bulk of the incompetent, vicious and ignorant negro vote, without the disfranchisement of any white man except for crime.

2d. That white supremacy in the State is guaranteed by law, and honest elections assured.

3d. That the limit of taxation has been reduced ten cents on the $100.00.

4th. That the Constitutional appropriation for public schools has been increased from one hundred thousand to over one million dollars per annum, making it impossible for the Legislature to reduce the same below the present amount and providing for an increase from year to year in proportion to the increase in taxable values. Under the liberal provisions of the new Constitution a common school education is put within the reach of every child in Alabama.

5th. That the power of the Legislature to enact local and private legislation to the virtual exclusion of general legislation affecting the entire public has been cut up by the roots. Such local legislation as may be needed will hereafter be made by the people affected by it.

6th. The great expense amounting to many thousands of dollars, of holding useless election in August has been abolished entirely.

7th. The Legislature now meets every two years at an expense of nearly sixty thousand dollars. Hereafter they will meet only once in four years unless called in extra session. The direct saving to the people is thus about fifteen thousand dollars per annum.

8. Provision is made for a reduction of a number of offices and circuit solicitors and many other officers now appointed are made directly elective by the people.

9th. Ample provision for refunding the State debt is made under which nearly two hundred thousand dollars per annum can be saved to the people in interest alone.

10th. The present unlimited power of the Legislature to create new judicial offices is curtailed and authority is given the Legislature to consolidate the separate courts of law and chancery thereby doing away in many cases, with unnecessary offices and preventing new ones except where imperatively demanded by the public service.

11. The saving from November elections, quadrennial sessions of the Legislature and refunding of the public debt will constitute a magnificent sum to add, if necessary to the common schools of the State.

I believe it is our duty to let the people know what the new Constitution contains, and of all good citizens to rally to its support. I hope you will aid in organizing your precinct. Advise me what you think ought to be done about sending out literature, having speeches made and the chances of carrying your precinct. If desired I can furnish copies of the new Constitution. Yours truly,

SYDNEY J. BOWIE, Chm.

THE SUNNY SOUTH.

The Sunny South of Atlanta, Ga., is making a special short time offer of its splendid paper from now until January 1st for only 10c. The full subscription price for one year is only 50c and for a literary weekly of its character the price is remarkably cheap. The short time price quoted, 10c until New Years is largely in the nature of an introduction of the paper to its larger Southern audience that it deserves.

The paper, as its title-head states, is devoted to literature, romance, fashions and fiction. It is really devoted to Southern writers and Southern readers and is their own story paper. It contains each week short stories, sketches, incidents of war and of peace, anecdotes at home and afield, poems, ideas, fashions, columns of sunshine, letters of travel, hints for home keepers and indeed everything of interest to young and old. There are at present running two splendid serial stories and at least as many will be kept constantly before its readers.

This paper for over a quarter of a century has been more or less active in the Southern field, but it has not adequately occupied the whole space to which it was allotted. Some six months ago, it passed under a new management and the continued improvement in it has become more apparent with each issue. At present its form is ideal as a family story paper and the offer to send it until January 1st for only 10c is one of the most remarkable.

The Banner has a clubbing rate with the Sunny South and the Weekly Constitution whereby all three papers will be sent one year for only $1.75. This will furnish any family with three good papers at practically the cost of one. The Weekly Constitution on Monday gives the cream of the week closing with its publication, and the Sunny South on Saturday give splendid service in its line.

Mother's Worm Syrup.

Best worm medicine. Children like it so well they eat it on bread.

If your cow is suffering with garget, "spoiled udder," use Dr. Tichenor's Antiseptic freely. It is said to be a very fine remedy by those who have tried it.

DIED.

On Tuesday morning Mr. Hugh Mullins, aged 27, passed away at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Mullins, at Clanton. Ten years ago, while working on the railroad, he contracted rheumatism from exposure, and has been a terrible sufferer ever since. Death, to him, was a happy release from pain. Our sympathies are with the grief-stricken parents and relatives.

Why suffer with that painful Wound when Dr. Tichenor's Antiseptic will stop the pain and heal it so quickly and cost so little? One application will convince and convert you. Price 50c.

A WORTHY SUCCESSOR.

"Something New Under The Sun."

All Doctors have tried to cure CATARRH by the use of powders, ointments and gases. Douders and drugs in paste form. Their powders dry up the mucous membranes causing them to crack open and bleed. The powerful acids used in the inhalers have entirely eaten away the same membranes that their makers have aimed to cure, while pastes and ointments cannot reach the disease. An old and experienced practitioner who has for many years made a close study and specialty of the treatment of CATARRH, has at last perfected a Treatment which when faithfully used, not only relieves at once, but permanently cures CATARRH, by removing the cause, stopping the discharges, and curing all inflammation. It is the only remedy known to science that actually reaches the affected parts. This wonderful remedy is known as "SNUFFLES" the GUARANTEED CATARRH CURE and is sold at the extremely low price of One Dollar, each package containing internal and external medicine sufficient for a full month's treatment and everything necessary to its perfect use.

"SNUFFLES" is the only perfect CATARRH CURE ever made and is now recognized as the only safe and effective cure for that annoying and disgusting disease. It cures all inflammation quickly and permanently and is also wonderfully quick to relieve HAY FEVER or COLD in the HEAD.

CATARRH when neglected often leads to CONSUMPTION—"SNUFFLES" will save you if you use it at once. It is no ordinary remedy, but a complete treatment which is positively guaranteed to cure CATARRH in any form or stage if used according to the directions which accompany each package. Don't delay but send for it at once, and write full particulars as to your condition, and you will receive special advice from the discoverer of this wonderful remedy regarding your case without cost to you beyond the regular price of "SNUFFLES" the "GUARANTEED CATARRH CURE."

Sent prepaid to any address in the United States or Canada on receipt of One Dollar. Address Dept C 235 EDWIN B. GILES & COMPANY, 2330 and 2332 Market Street, Philadelphia.

THE HOME GOLD CURE.

An Ingenious Treatment by which Drunkards are being Cured Daily in spite of Themselves.

No Nervous Doses. No Weakening of the Nerves. A Pleasant and Positive Cure for the Liquor Habit.

It is now generally known and understood that drunkenness is a disease and not weakness. A body filled with poison, and nerves completely shattered by periodical or constant use of intoxicating liquors, requires an antidote capable of neutralizing and eradicating this poison, and destroying the craving for intoxicants. Sufferers may now cure themselves at home without publicity or loss of time from business by this wonderful "HOME GOLD CURE" which has been perfected after many years of close study and treatment of inebriates. The faithful use according to directions of this wonderful discovery is positively guaranteed to cure the most opposate case, no matter how hard a drinker. Our records show the marvelous transformation of thousands of Drunkards into sober, industrious and upright men.

WIVES CURE YOUR HUSBANDS!! CHILDREN CURE YOUR FATHERS!! this remedy is in no sense a nostrum but is a specific for this disease only, and is so skillfully devised and prepared that it is thoroughly soluble and pleasant to the taste, so that it can be given in a cup of tea or coffee without the knowledge of the person taking it. Thousands of Drunkards have cured themselves with this priceless remedy, and so many more have been cured and made temperate men by having the "CURE" administered by loving friends and relatives without their knowledge in coffee or tea, and believe today that they discontinued drinking of their own free will. DO NOT WAIT. Do not be deluded by apparent and misleading "improvement." Drive out the disease at once and for all time. The "HOME GOLD CURE" is sold at the extremely low price of One Dollar, thus placing within reach of every body a treatment more effectual than others costing $25 to $50. Full directions accompany each package. Special advice by skilled physicians when requested without extra charge. Sent prepaid to any part of the world on receipt of One Dollar. Address Dept. C 935, EDWIN B. GILES & COMPANY, 2330 and 2332 Market Street, Philadelphia.

BILL ARP'S LETTER

Bartow Philosopher Reverts to Weather Conditions.

POLITICS ARE ALSO TOUCHED UPON

Course President Roosevelt Is Pursuing Seems to Go Against the Grain So Far as the G. A. R. Is Concerned.

The elements are unsettled. The wind seems to be veering southward. Roosevelt keeps on saying kind words about us and the republicans are in a state of apprehension. The G. A. Rs made the first assault on him because he dared to emlt the bravery and patriotism of our people, but he answered them back nobly. And now they are in consternation because he invited Clark Howell to dine with him. The City of Snushan is perplexed. It looks like there is a power of good political fun ahead of us, and we can't be worsted. McKinley wanted to be kind, and they wouldn't let him, but my opinion is that Roosevelt is going to run the machine according to his emotions. He is a man of emotions, good, generous emotions—and our emotional nature is the best part of our nature. That is the reason that women are better than men; they are more emotional. A selfish man, a greedy man or a politician "per se" have no emotions. They plot and scheme for personal advantage. Hamlet said that a politician is a man who would circumvent God. They bribe and deceive to gain their end. But Roosevelt is outspoken, candid and fearless. The politician's utterances are cautious and come from his head; Roosevelt talks from his heart, and if he feels like inviting Clark Howell to dine he is going to do it without consulting Mark Hanna or the G. A. R.'s or for a moment considering what the party will say about it.

I like Roosevelt because he has a wife and children; in fact, he has been married twice and has two sets of children. That's all right if the children harmonize and the last wife is as good to the children of the first wife as she is to her own. Our nearest neighbor for long years had three sets of children. Colonel Bayard, a widower, with two children, married Mrs. Hand, a widow with three children. Two more children were born to the last marriage, and all was peace and harmony in that household. This reminds me of another family, where there were three sets, and they didn't harmonize, and one day when they were quarreling in the back yard, the wife came running in and said to her husband: "John, you'd better go out yonder with a switch; your children and my children are fighting our children."

I am pleased to learn that our president is coming to Georgia next fall and will visit his mother's old home at Roswell. Think I will meet him there and show him around, for almost everybody else is dead but me that was there when his mother was a girl. I will show him where we boys played bullpen and town ball, and where his uncle half Dan, or half of his Uncle Dan and I played sweepstakes and Dan always won my white alleys. Yes, I will show him around. But that colony of fine Savannah people, all blooded stock, are not there now. There were the Kings, the Dunwoodys, who were in college with me. Not all the King boys, of course, for there were nine of them and only one sister for the whole crowd— a beautiful girl. I have a very dear cousin in Birmingham who has nine girls and one son. What a pity that those two families were not neighbors and contemporaries, so that the children could have mated and intermarried. I like families with numerous offspring. If I had the making of the constitution, whether federal or state, I wouldn't let a bachelor hold a public office; he shouldn't be eligible to go to congress or to the legislature. It is not possible for him to feel deeply concerned about the perpetuity of government. It is the children and the grandchildren we fathers are living for. An unmarried man lives for himself. He may be smart and moral and well educated, but, as Kipling says, he can't understand the paternal anxiety.

All those Roswell boys were manly and well favored. They made good preachers, good soldiers, good architects and manufacturers and were good citizens. Poor Tom King had his leg shattered at Manassas, and as soon as he could walk was in the field again and was killed at Chickamauga. He was a bright, cheerful, handsome man, and everybody loved him. Old Barrington King sent north for a teacher and got one by the name of Eels, but the boys didn't like him. They said he was a hypocrite and an abolitionist, and was just fooling papa. They called him Slickfish and guyed him until he was sent back to where he came from. Colonel Bayard married Barrington King's sister, the Widow Hand, and moved to Rome. He was a courtly gentlemen, a descendant of Chevalier Bayard, and his grandfather was Nicolas Bayard, a French Huguenot. He was a cousin to the Senators Bayard, of Delaware. He was an expert swordsman, and loved to show you the back stroke by which his ancestor, while flying from some troopers, slowed up his horse, and, as they came up on the gallop, cut their heads off one by one with the same back stroke. One of his granddaughters, Miss Flonda Seay, has recently wedded a Mr. Tracy, of New York, a nephew of B. F. Tracy, who was secretary of the navy. One of Mrs. Bayard's daughters married Bishop Quintard, druggist, doctor, preacher, soldier, chaplain and then bishop. He got a beautiful and dutiful wife, and everything else he asked for. Kind-hearted and lovable as a woman, he always carried a satchel full of cake and candy for other people's children when he traveled on the train. We college boys knew him well in Athens when he was first a drug clerk and next a doctor, and we let him pull our teeth just because he was so kind and genial.

Well, now, I have written all this about Roswell because our president's mother lived there and married there. I like to speak of him as our president, and I don't want any Georgia paper to call him Teddy or make sport of him in carteons. Some idiots think these caricatures of our presidents are very smart and funny, but the people who have respect for the high office think they are shameful. You can't degrade the man without degrading the office.

But we will have to wait some time on Mr. Roosevelt. You can't always sometimes generally tell, as Cobe would say; we must wait and see how long this south wind blows—"the sweet south wind that breathes upon a bank of violets," as Shakespeare says. And we are the violets. We have both hope and confidence, for a man of emotions can't go back upon his ancestors nor the place of their nativity. The Bullochs have been honored in Georgia. More than one hundred years ago we named a county for Governor Bulloch, and we wouldn't mind naming another for his great-great-grandson. Georgia has never had a president, and we will be proud to have even half of one, especially the maternal half—most all great and good men have bred after the dam.—Bill Arp, in Atlanta Constitution.

The proposition to establish terminals for a trans-Atlantic steamship line at Bearhaven, on Bantry Bay, on the west coast of Ireland, and thus shorten the sea voyage to Europe by 120 miles, has so far progressed as to be the subject of favoring legislation in the British Parliament. It is predicted that with swift vessels the trip across the ocean may be shortened to four and one-half days. An almost similar saving in the length of water transportation might be effected on this side of the Atlantic by carrying out the project of the late Austin Corbin for a steamer terminal at the eastern end of Long Island.

Professor Mosso, of Turin, in a recent lecture delivered in the United States, said that physical education and gymnastics develop the brain as well as the muscles. As much time should be devoted to muscular exercise as to intellectual exercise. Children, he thinks, should not be taught to read and write till they are at least nine years old. Following up his comparison of muscular with intellectual fatigue exhibits phenomena identical with those of intellectual fatigue. It is probable that the various parts of the brain relieve each other; that only one part is active at a time. He states, as a principle, that the more mobile any animal's extremities are, the more intelligent the animal is, other things being equal.

The enormous quantity of fiction taken from public libraries—ranging from sixty-five to eighty per cent. of the total circulation—is raising the question whether it pays to still further enervate the minds of the silly element of society by supplying it with trashy fiction at the public expense. There are those who think that Mr. Carnegie would do more good with his library money by establishing branch libraries from which fiction is excluded, thus causing the foolish the extra trouble of a trip to the central reservoir of foolishness. Some librarians have proposed to encourage the reading of useful books by issuing two cards, one for fiction and the other for non-fiction, and allowing card-holders to take out books on both cards.

The present perils of old age should be abated, remarks Puck. A minister of the gospel not long since wrote in one of the magazines to the title—"Should the Old Minister be Shot?" letting us see that this would often be the most graceful solution of the problem. And it is quite true of the other underpaid professions and trades. There are intelligent, decent persons who lead regular and industrious lives and who yet never make enough to have anything left when old age takes them from their work. There are thousands of these whom, under our present system, it would be merciful to shoot. Often they are wise enough to perform the service for themselves. Too often they linger on through the stages of starvation. Here is an inviting field for the puzzled philanthropist. Our homes for old people are just numerous enough to show the need for many times the number we have.

ADVICE TO COTTON RAISERS.

A writer in the Lexington Advertiser gives the following advice to cotton raisers in regard to the treatment of the staple, which is doubtless worthy of consideration. "Pick only when dry; never pile on the ground, but empty your sack or basket into the cotton house, and let the cotton lie a week or ten days and go through a mild heat before ginning, and then insist on the gin running moderately slow. The idea for this is to allow the fiber to absorb as much oil from the seed as it possibly can. When this stage is reached the fiber slips from the seed easily without being torn or cut, and the result is longer, smoother, heavier, stronger and richer-colored lint than can be obtained by the slip-shod methods of the average farmer, and the price obtained will more than offset the little additional care taken.

REV. DR. TALMAGE.

DISCOURSE BY THE EMINENT DIVINE LAST SUNDAY.

Subject: The Charm of the Christian Religion—It Illuminates and Brightens the Lives of Men and Women—The Beauty of God's Love.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The charm of an exalted religion is by Dr. Talmage in this discourse illustrated and commended; text, Job xxviii, 17, "The crystal cannot equal it."

Many of the precious stones of the Bible have come to prompt recognition, but for the present I take up the less valuable crystal. Job, in my text, compares saving wisdom with a specimen of topaz. An infidel chemist or mineralogist would pronounce the latter worth more than the former, but Job makes an intelligent comparison, looks at religion and then looks at the crystal and pronounces the former as of far superior value to the latter, exclaiming in the words of my text, "The crystal cannot equal it."

Now, it is not a part of my sermonic design to depreciate the crystal, whether it be found in Cornish mine or Harz Mountain or Mammoth Cave or tinkling among the pendants of the chandeliers of a palace. The crystal is the star of the mountain; it is the queen of the cave; it is the eardrop of the hills; it finds its heaven in the diamond. Among all the pages of natural history there is no page more interesting to me than the page crystallographic. But I want to show you that Job was right when, taking religion in one hand and the crystal in the other, he declared that the former is of far more value and beauty than the latter, recommending it to all the people and to all the ages, declaring, "The crystal cannot equal it."

In the first place I remark that religion is superior to the crystal in exactness. That shapeless mass of crystal against which you accidentally dashed your foot is laid out with more exactness than any earthly city. There are six styles of crystallization and all of them divinely ordained. Every crystal has mathematical precision. God's geometry reaches through it, and it is a rhomboid or in some way it has a mathematical figure. Now, religion beats that in the simple fact that spiritual accuracy is more beautiful than material accuracy. God's attributes are exact, God's law exact, God's decrees exact, God's management of the world exact. Never counting wrong, though He counts the grass blades and the stars and the sands and the cycles. His providence never dealing with us perpendicularly when those providences ought to be oblique, nor laterally when they ought to be vertical. Everything in our life arranged without any possibility of mistake. Each life a six-headed prism. Born at the right time, dying at the right time. There are no "happen so's" in our theology. If I thought this was a slipshod universe I would be in despair. God is not an Anarchist. Law, order, symmetry, precision, a perfect square, a perfect rectangle, a perfect rhomboid, a perfect circle. The edge of God's robe of government never frays out. There are no loose screws in the world's machinery. It did not just happen that Napoleon was attacked with indigestion at Borodino so that he became incompetent for one day. It did not just happen that John Thomas, the missionary, on a heathen island, waiting for an outfit and orders for another missionary tour, received that outfit and those orders in a box that floated ashore, while the ship and the crew that carried the box were never heard of. I believe in a particular providence. I believe God's geometry may be seen in all our life more beautifully than in crystallography. Job was right, "The crystal cannot equal it."

Again, I remark that religion is superior to the crystal in transparency. We know not when or by whom glass was first discovered. Beads of it have been found in the tomb of Alexander Severus. Vases of it are brought up from the ruins of Herculaneum. There were female adornments made out of it 3000 years ago—those adornments found now attached to the mummies of Egypt. A great many commentators believe that my text means glass. What would we do without the crystal—the crystal in the window to keep out the storm and let in the day, the crystal over the watch, defending its delicate machinery, yet allowing us to see the hour; the crystal of the telescope, by which the astronomer brings distant worlds so near he can inspect them?

Oh, the triumphs of the crystals in the celebrated windows of Rouen and Salisbury! But there is nothing so transparent in a crystal as in our holy religion. It is a transparent religion. You put it to your eye, and you see man—his sin, his soul, his destiny. You look at God, and you see something of the grandeur of His character. It is a transparent religion. Infidels tell us it is opaque. Do you know why they tell us it is opaque? It is because they are blind. "The natural man receiveth not the things of God because they are spiritually discerned." There is no trouble with the crystal; the trouble is with the eyes which try to look through it. We pray for vision, Lord, that our eyes might be opened! When the eye salve cures our blindness then we find that religion is transparent.

It is a transparent Bible. All the mountains of the Bible come out—Sinai, the mountain of the law; Pisgah, the mountain of prospect; Olivet, the mountain of instruction; Calvary, the mountain of sacrifice. All the rivers of the Bible come out—Hidekel, or the river of paradisaical beauty; Jordan, or the river of holy chrism; Cherith, or the river of prophetic supply; Nile, or the river of palaces, and the pure river of life from under the throne, clear as crystal. While reading this Bible, after our eyes have been touched by grace, we find it all transparent, and the earth rocks, now with crucifixion agony and now with judgment terror, and Christ appears in some of His 256 titles, as far as I can count them—the Bread, the Rock, the Captain, the Commander, the Conqueror, the Star, and on and beyond any capacity of mine to rehearse. Transparent religion!

The providence that seemed dark before becomes pellucid. Now you find God is not trying to put you down. Now you understand why you lost that child and why you lost your property. It was to prepare you for eternal treasures. And why sickness came, it being the precursor of immortal juvenescence. And now you understand why they lied about you and tried to drive you hither and thither. It was to put you in the glorious company of such men as Ignatius, who when he went out to be destroyed by the lions said, "I am the wheat, and the teeth of the wild beasts must first grind me before I can become pure bread for Jesus Christ," or the company of such men as "that ancient Christian martyr" who, standing in the midst of the amphitheatre waiting for the lions to come out of their cave and destroy him, and the people in the galleries jeering and shouting, "The lions!" replied "Let them come on!" and then, stooping down toward the cave where the wild beasts were roaring to get out, again cried, "Let them come on!" Ah, yes, it is persecution to put you in glorious company, and, while there are many things that you will have to postpone to the future world for explanation, I tell you that it is the whole tendency of your religion to unravel and explain and interpret and illumine and irradiate. Job was right. It is a glorious transparency. "The crystal cannot equal it."

I remark again that religion surpasses the crystal in its beauty. The lump of crystal is put under the magnifying glass of the crystallographer, and he sees in it indescribable exquisiteness—snowdrift and spinters of hoarfrost and corals and wreaths and stars and crowns and constellations of conspicuous beauty. The fact is that crystal is so beautiful that I can think of but one thing in all the universe that is as beautiful, and that is the religion of the Bible. No wonder this Bible represents that religion as the daybreak, as the apple blossoms, as the glitter of a king's banquet. It is the joy of the whole earth.

People talk too much about their cross and not enough about their crown. Do you know that the Bible mentions a cross but twenty-seven times, while it mentions a crown eighty times? Ask that old man what he thinks of religion. He has been a close observer. He has seen the sunrises of half a century. He has been an early riser. He has been an admirer of cameos and corals and all kinds of beautiful things. Ask him what he thinks of religion, and he will tell you: "It is the most beautiful thing I ever saw. The crystal cannot equal it."

Beautiful in its symmetry. When it presents God's character, it does not present Him as having love like a great protuberance on one side of His nature, but makes that love in harmony with His justice—a love that will accept all those who come to Him and a justice that will by no means clear the guilty. Beautiful religion in the sentiment it implants! Beautiful religion in the hope it kindles! Beautiful religion in the fact that it power to garland and enthrone and emperialize an immortal spirit! Solomon says it is a lily. Paul says it is a crown. The Apocalypse says it is a fountain issued of the sun. Ezekiel says it is a foliaged cedar. Christ says it is a bridegroom come to fetch home a bride. While Job in the text takes up a whole vase of precious stones—the topaz and the sapphire and the chrysoprasus—he takes out of this beautiful vase just one crystal and holds it up until it gleams in the warm light of the eastern sky, and he exclaims, "The crystal cannot equal it."

Oh, it is not a stale religion, it is not a stupid religion, it is not a toothless hag, as some seem to have represented it—it is not a Meg Merrilies with shriveled arm come to scare the world. It is the fairest daughter of God, heiress of all His wealth, her cheeks the morning sky, her voice the music of the south wind, her step the dance of the sea. Come and woo her. The Spirit and the Bride say come, and whosoever will let him come. Do you agree with Solomon and say it is a lily? Then pluck it and wear it over your heart. Do you agree with Paul and say it is a crown? Then let this hour be your coronation. Do you agree with the Apocalypse and say it is a springing fountain? Then come and slake the thirst of your soul. Do you believe with Ezekiel and say it is a foliaged cedar? Then come under its shadow. Do you believe with Christ and say it is a bridegroom come to fetch home a bride? Then strike hands with your Lord and King while I pronounce you everlastingly one. Or if you think with Job that it is a jewel, then put it on your hand like a ring, on your neck like a bead, on your forehead like a star, while, looking into the mirror of God's word, you acknowledge "The crystal cannot equal it."

"What," say you, "will God wear jewelry?" If He wanted it He could make the stars of heaven His belt, and have the evening cloud for the sandals of His feet. But He does not want that adornment. He will not have that jewelry. When God wants jewelry He comes down and digs it out of the depths and darkness of sin. These souls are all crystallizations of mercy. He puts them on, and He wears them in the presence of the whole universe. He wears them on the hand that was nailed, over the heart that was pierced, on the temples that were stung. "They shall be Mine," saith the Lord, "in the day when I make up My jewels." Wonderful transformation! Where sin abounded grace shall much more abound. The carbon becomes the solitaire. "The crystal cannot equal it."

Three crystals! John says crystal atmosphere. That means health. Balm of eternal June. What weather after the world's east wind! No rack of storm clouds. One breath of that air will cure the worst tubercle. Crystal light on all the leaves; crystal light shimmering on the topaz of the temples, crystal light tossing in the plumes of the equestrians of heaven on white horses. But "the crystal cannot equal it." John says crystal river. That means joy. Deep and ever rolling. Not one drop of the Potomac or the Hudson or the Rhine to soil it; not one tear of human sorrow to imbitter it. Crystal, the rain out of which it was made; crystal, the bed over which it shall roll and ripple; crystal, its infinite surface. But "the crystal cannot equal it." John says crystal sea. That means multitudinously vast, vast in rapture, rapture vast as the sea, deep as the sea, strong as the sea, ever changing as the sea; billows of light, billows of beauty, blue with skies that were never clouded and green with depths that were never fathomed; Arctics and Antarctics and Mediterraneans and Atlantics and Pacifics in crystalline magnificence. Three crystals—crystal light falling on a crystal river, crystal river rolling into a crystal sea. But "the crystal cannot equal it."

"Oh," says some one, putting his hand over his eyes, "can it be that I who have been in so much sin and trouble will ever come to those crystals?" Yes, it may be—it will be. Heaven we must have, whatever we have or have not, and we come here to get it. "How much must I pay for it?" you say. You will pay for it just as much as the coal pays to become the diamond. In other words, nothing. The same Almighty power that makes the crystal in the mountain will change your heart, which is harder than stone, for the promise is, "I will take away your stony heart, and I will give you a heart of flesh."

"Oh," says some one, "it is just the doctrine I want. God is to do everything, and I am to do nothing." My brother, it is not the doctrine you want. The coal makes no resistance. It hears the resurrection voice in the mountain, and it comes to crystallization, but your heart resists. The trouble with you, my brother, is the coal wants to stay coal.

I do not ask you to throw open the door and let Christ in. I only ask that you stop bolting it and barring it. My friends, we will have to get rid of our sins. I will have to get rid of my sins, and you will have to get rid of your sins. What will we do with our sins among the three crystals? The crystal atmosphere would display our pollution. The crystal river would be befouled with our touch. Transformation must take place now or no transformation at all. Give sin full chance in your heart, and the transformation will be downward instead of upward. Instead of a crystal it will be a cinder.

In the days of Carthage a Christian girl was condemned to die for her faith, and a boat was bedaubed with tar and pitch and filled with combustibles and set on fire, and the Christian girl was placed in the boat, and the wind was offshore, and the boat floated away with its precious treasure. No one can doubt that boat landed at the shore of heaven. Sin wants to put you in a fiery boat and shove you off in an opposite direction—off from peace, off from God, off from heaven, everlastingly off, and the port toward which you would sail would be a port of darkness, and the guns that would greet you would be the guns of despair, and the flags that would wave at your arrival would be the black flags of death. Oh, my brother, you must either kill sin or sin will kill you. It is no exaggeration when I say that any man or woman that wants to be saved may be saved. Tremendous choice! A thousand people are choosing this moment between salvation and destruction, between light and darkness, between charred ruin and glorious crystallization.

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTARY FOR OCTOBER 20.

Subject: Joseph Exalted. Gen. xli, 37-46. Golden Text, I. Sam. ii, 30. Memory Verses, 39-41. — Commentary on Day's Lesson.

38. "Unto his servants." The high officers of ancient Egypt were assembled in the department of state affairs or the department of the most distinguished servants of priestly order, and, according to custom, admitting Joseph to the ordinary office that was to be conferred. The ministers were consulted as to the propriety and propriety of the step. "Such a one as this." The history of Joseph had become known and his servants, and long experience with him, his present wisdom was a guarantee for the proposed step. "Spirit of God is." Here is a recognition of the existence and power of God. Joseph had expressed (v. 16) that the interpretation of dreams was not in himself but would give the answer. The attributes Joseph's was a spirit of God in him. Such wisdom, could be found only in one attended with the Divine Spirit.

39. "Discreet." Intelligent, clear insight into matters, denotes a capacity to form proper measures to go.

40. "Thou." This was addressed to Joseph and also to his brethren. When Joseph was exalted to be second to a man to government, not have had the reverence would be the man, and were so very willing to have should be carried out, now, when Joseph's "Unto thy word." Joseph before Pharaoh and God in the sight of Pharaoh he was traduced as men, now the king of incomparable wisdom from this not to be reproach, nor puffed best of men have passed port and evil report.

Journey Undertaken to Bring Back a Specimen.

In the early years of the century just an ancient ice bank of a northern river melted away more than ed the well-preserved carcass of a prehistoric elephantine whose race had been extinct ages. The flesh was so that when found wolves feeding upon it. The adjacent of the Arctic ocean, indeed, have been noted for their preservation. the preserved tusks of these extinct creatures that once ranged the grassy steppes of northern and became extinct long human records. Lately the Academy of Sciences of St. Petersburg fitted an expedition to recover the remains of one of these mammoths. A recent telegram from Yakutsk sends information that the expedition is about to set out on an journey of 1,600 miles to bring one of these mammoths. It is at Kolymsk at the mouth of the Kolima river on the Arctic ocean, in about latitude 70 northeastern border of Yakutsk. The last journey will take two and a half years. The expedition expects to be back in the spring of 1904. The ancient carcass, if found, will be the first specimen ever secured with its stomach full of food.

A TEMPORARY CROESUS.

$1,000 in His Pocket for a Single Minute.

H. T. Cantrell, president of Wichita Falls, Texas, walked into the subtreasury and had a delightful sensation of being a million for only a minute. He was asked to handle money to the extent of $1,000 on place it in his pocket and walk about the inside portion of the subtreasurer's office. "I'm nearly as old," said Mr. Cantrell. "I have been handling money my own, the governments, and other persons for nearly a half century, but I never had so much money in my possession before at one time, and I never expect to have that much again. The sensation of being a millionaire if only for a minute, is peculiar. I, of course, swell up immediately, but only for a second. When a person sees and handles a million or more of money in such small packages as I did there is no reason in the world why he shouldn't be conceited. This condition in my case, however, was short-lived, and the last minute I felt just like a torn $5 bill that had been knocked about the country for ages—that was, of course, when they took that huge amount of money away from me. I will go back to Wichita Falls now and handle postage stamps."

Many young ladies have found it necessary to improve, or rather to alter, the spelling of the names with which they were originally blessed. Ethel becomes Ethelle, Jessie becomes Jessie, Mary becomes Marie, and so on. A brother lately received a letter from his young sister at a fashionable boarding school. It was signed Jessie. He answered: "Dear Sister Jessie—Your welcome letter received. Pa and mamma are well. Aunt Lizzie and Uncle Georgie started for Europe yesterday. I have bought a horse. You ought to see it; it's a pony. It's name is Maudie. Your affectionate brother, Samuel." The sister's next letter was signed Jessie.

Human Prey of Wild Animals.

The report of the government of India for 1899 shows that for that year 25,587 human lives fell a prey to wild animals. By far the largest number—24,621—were killed by snakes. Tigers were responsible for 839 deaths, wolves for 238, leopards 225 and 1,402 were killed by elephants, hyenas, jackals, and crocodiles together. The deaths due to serpents were much more numerous than during preceding years.

Rich Mines, But No Railroads.

There are few localities in the world where railroads could do so much toward opening rich country as in Northern Mexico. The ore is there, and it is well known by capitalists, but the great problem is that of transportation. The difficulties of getting a railroad across the mountains from a Pacific coast port to the mining regions have, up to the present time, discouraged every capitalist who has thought of it. Several railroads are being built through the country west of the Sierra Madre, but hardly near enough to the mineral district to be very valuable.

Pope Gets His Snuff in America.

Pope Leo XIII. is still addicted to the habit of taking snuff. It is not generally known that the snuff used by the head of the Roman Catholic church is made especially for his use in America. This particular kind is the highest priced made anywhere in the world and before being packed is flavored with the costly attar of roses.

TO CURE A COLD IN ONE DAY

Take Laxative Bromo-Quinine Tablets. All druggists refund the money if it fails to cure. E. W. Grove's signature is on each box. 25 cents.

Editor Banner.—In your last week's issue your correspondent, "Taxpayer and Voter" criticises the proposed new constitution, and professes his inability to see its superiority in it over the old one. But there is a vein of conservatism running through his article, conspicuously absent in many of those who oppose the document formulated by our late convention, and it is therefore to be hoped he is open to conviction and willing to listen to something on the other side.

What are some of the beneficent changes proposed by the new constitution? 1. And most important; under its provisions white supremacy is forever assured, and the negro equality imbedded in the old instrument eliminated, and the pledge is at the same time preserved that no worthy white man is disfranchised.

The temporary plan of registration, with which so much fault has been found, expires by limitation next year, and is so safeguarded, that it will not be practicable for the registrars to deny any worthy applicant, who is entitled to the privilege.

The public school system is far more liberally provided for. It is estimated that the munificent sum of $800,000 annually will be available for common school education in our State, and this will place within the reach of every child in our borders, this inestimable gift. In addition to this the people of any county, by a three-fifths vote can levy 10 cents on the $100, as additional support for their public schools.

3. State taxation has been reduced from 75 to 65 cts. on the $100.

4. Our State elections have been so changed that the Legislature will meet only every 4 years, at an annual saving of $15,000 to the State.

5. The free pass system has been abolished, and our public officials will have to pay their way on the railroads, as other good citizens are required to do when they travel.

6. Local and private legislation, which have been the cause of so much just complaint, and the prolific source of so much evil, has been almost entirely abolished. With such a provision stock laws, and other oppressive measures cannot be exploited over the heads of the majority, by an insignificant minority.

I might mention many other points, but have air advantagessed too greatly on your space perhaps.

In view of the magnitude of the question, and the momentous interests at stake, permit me in conclusion, to appeal to my fellow-citizens to lay all prejudice aside; and calmly and impartially consider this question. It involves consequences vitally affecting the interests of the generations to come after us, and we should therefore examine its merits impartially, without bias or preference of opinion, and as reasonable men desirous of arriving at the truth, and in view of duty to ourselves, and our posterity, act upon the question for God and for the right. CIVIS.

PUBLIC SPEAKING.

Hon. S. J. Bowie will address the citizens of Chilton county in behalf of the ratification of the new Constitution at the following times and places:

Clanton, Sat'day, Oct. 26, 11 a.m.

Is Your Life Worth 25 Cents?

Consumptives, we know that you have been disappointed many times, but make one more effort to be cured. Gooch's Mexican Syrup has cured thousands and it will cure you. Consumption is the result of the food material that should go to support the body and sustain life being absorbed and thrown off in tuberculous matter. To overcome this waste of vital force and restore the nourishment to the system in its natural course, is to cure. This is accomplished by Gooch's Mexican Syrup. It controls coughs, night sweats, spitting of blood, soreness in chest, inflamed throat and lungs, difficulty of breathing, heavy coughs accompanied with expectoration and parched lips. We know you have been disappointed many times, but make one more effort to save yourself. You can buy a bottle of Gooch's Mexican Syrup for 25 cents. It cures a simple cough as if by magic, and is the best remedy for whooping cough.

For inflamed eyes, sore throat, sore mouth, use Dr. Tichenor's Antiseptic. Pleasant to taste and smell and will give quick relief.

If your cow is suffering with garget, "spoiled udder," use Dr. Tichenor's Antiseptic freely. It is said to be a very fine remedy by those who have tried it.

Mr. G. G. Calloway, of Enid, recently killed a big rattlesnake on Mrs. M. D. Logan's plantation near Higgins' ferry. It had twelve rattles and a button, and weighed about 25 pounds. It was 3 inches in diameter and about 4 ft. 6 in. long.

NOTICE TO FARMERS.

It is a well-known fact that every man should work to his own interest. Then why not the farmer get the benefit of his own labor? Why not the farmer get his prices as well as the merchant? Simply because he does not look around and see what the market price is. He does not know where to go. He does not know that R. L. MARCUS will give more for Produce of all kinds and sell goods for less money than anybody in the city. One call will convince you. Respectfully, R. L. MARCUS, Clanton.

UNIVERSITY SCHOOL
PLANTERSVILLE, ALA.
Is a training and strictly private school for boys and girls.
Correlated to the University of Alabama and to the Alabama Polytechnic Institute.
Has fitted more pupils for college, more pupils for teaching, more pupils for advanced business positions than all other schools in Chilton county combined. It is the only school in Chilton county whose pupils have a First Grade Certificate under the present school laws.
Its course of instruction is the best arranged, its methods the soundest, most thorough and up-to-date; its scholarship the most advanced; its location, buildings, grounds, furniture, equipments, the most attractive and best adapted of any school in Chilton county.
Its pupils enter any college in the South on certificate of the Principal. It deals honestly with the public, adheres to professional courtesy, and performs its promises. Its mission is to build up, not to pull down. It is not, as some are, a mere common school called "College," "Normal," etc., by which misnomers the uninformed are misled.
$101 pays all expenses of board, tuition, fuel, lights, etc., for session of nine months. School opens September 25, 1901. Write for catalogue.

One of the chief uses of those South American republics is to make new histories, geographies and maps necessary every year or two.

By a co-operative plan two million Londoners are to be supplied with daily dinners at two pence each. They will, at least, be free from the dangers of overeating.

Massachusetts has fixed a new responsibility upon railroad companies and their agents. A Boston man recently obtained a judgment for $500 against a railroad company because its conductor refused to protect him against abuse and assault by a drunken fellow-passenger.

The "touching" interest of the Italian people in the affairs of their king was strikingly manifested on the occasion of the birth of his daughter. Within two days after that event King Victor received 26,000 congratulatory telegrams and 20,000 requests for money.

Speed is becoming more and more the supreme consideration in the construction of war ships. Ships of the navy, it seems, must not only be able to fight, but it seems must also be able to run away upon occasion, and to steam great distances without stopping to take on coal, states the Baltimore Sun.

At a recent meeting of German spinners at Leipsic a table was submitted, which showed that the world's consumption of cotton was now about 14,000,000 bales annually. The United States stands at the head of the list, being credited with a consumption of 3,600,000 bales. Great Britain comes second, with 3,300,000 bales.

The value of street railway franchises in a big and growing city is exemplified in the offer which the Chicago City railway has made to the municipality in consideration of a 20 years' extension of its franchises. It offers to pave the streets it occupies from curb to curb at a cost of $10,000 in return for the privilege it asks.

The last clause of a will which was filed for probate in Washington, D. C., the other day significantly says: "The net sum of $186,000 left by this will is the financial result of a long life of industry and economy, and if used for good and useful purposes by those to whom it is now given is enough. And if not so used is too much."

The nations of Europe spend for military and naval purposes $750,000,000. They keep under arms continually 3,000,000 men, with six times as many in readiness for emergencies. It is estimated that each community loses at least $200 a year for each man who is kept under arms and is therefore unproductive. This loss, for all Europe, would amount to $600,000,000 which, added to the $750,000,000 paid out for military and naval purposes, would make a grand total of $1,350,000.

The statistics collected during 1899 showing the damage done by lightning have been published by the weather bureau. The number of buildings damaged or destroyed by lightning in 1899 was 5527. In addition to these 729 buildings caught fire as a result of the proximity to other structures that were fired by lightning. The approximate loss in 2824 cases was not reported, owing undoubtedly to the fact that the loss was small. A conservative estimate of the total loss by lightning during the year would be $600,000. The great majority of buildings struck by lightning were not provided with lightning rods. The same conditions prevailed in the preceding year.

Jules Verne, now long past his seventieth year, has begun his ninety-ninth story. Since he commenced writing some of his most marvelous tales have been proved to be only prophecies. For instance, we have submarine boats almost as wonderful as Captain Nemo's craft, and the journey around the world has been accomplished in much less time than that required by the mythical Fogg. If M. Verne wishes to write a novel of adventure so improbable that science will not catch up with it for a long time to come, he will have to tax his powers of ingenuity to the utmost; provided that at the same time, as in his earlier stories, he surrounds it with the specious atmosphere that imparts one of the chief charms to his narratives.

NASHVILLE'S CARNEGIE LIBRARY.

The Nashville Chamber of Commerce is in receipt of a letter from James Bertram, private secretary to Andrew Carnegie, dated at Skibo Castle, Scotland, October 4, which says that Mr. Carnegie stands ready to give $100,000 for the erection of a library building in Nashville. The offer is accompanied with the usual proviso that the city furnish an annuity for running expenses.

VALLEY FORGE MONUMENT.

The first monument erected at Valley Forge in memory of the revolutionary soldiers who died there during the winter of 1777-78 was unveiled and dedicated Saturday by the Daughters of the Revolution. The monument is a handsome obelisk of granite, fifty feet high, and at its base appear two bronze panels, one containing the seal of the society and the other representing a scene of camp life at Valley Forge. Above these the original colonial flag with thirteen stars has been carved in the shaft. The inscription reads: "To the soldiers of Washington's Army Who Sleep in Valley Forge, 1777-78.

GEORGIA HOLOCAUST.

John Hatcher, Jack Hatcher and Minnie Hatcher, two brothers and a sister, all grown, were burned to death near Ashburn, Ga., Saturday morning. Mrs. Hatcher, the mother, was awakened by the heat at her residence and barely escaped with her life, too late to assist her children. Neighbors came to the rescue as quickly as possible, but were unable to save those in the house or to stay the flames. Early in the night a lamp was overturned in a room of seed cotton and the inmates succeeded in extinguishing the fire after being slightly burned. It is thought that the fire was only smothered, as it broke out again in the same room and the house was totally destroyed.

SOLDIERS REINTERRED.

The bodies of nine American soldiers who were killed in the battle of Lundy's Lane, were reinterred Saturday afternoon near the spot where they fell in the bloody strife nearly one hundred years ago. The bodies were discovered several months ago and identified by buttons and accoutrements as members of the Ninth United States Infantry. A company of red-coated Canadian soldiers met a detachment of American soldiers at the center of the upper steel arch bridge at Niagara and escorted them to Lundy's Lane. The ceremonies took place in the presence of a company of distinguished representatives of the Canadian and United States governments, veterans and historical organizations and prominent citizens of the Niagara frontier.

JOHN S. PILLSBURY, former governor of Minnesota and one of the State's foremost citizens, died last Friday. He served three terms as governor, from 1876 to 1882. HOTEL BURNED.

The Hutchins House, at Houston, Tex., a large four-story hotel, was burned at an early hour Saturday morning and it is believed the fire was the result of incendiarism. There were about 300 guests in the house, all of whom got out in safety and without injury. Many of them lost heavily in effects, however, as thieves raided the hotel while the fire was in progress. The loss is placed at $110,000 on the hotel and furnishings, with insurance of $55,000. The house was built forty years ago and was one of the best-known hotels in the South.

BROTHERS DIE SAME NIGHT.

Jesse Cooper, a native of Ohio, who has resided near Allegheny Springs, Tenn., for twenty years, died suddenly Saturday night. He was found dead in bed by his wife who at once notified his brother in Ohio as to whether he desired the remains shipped to his native state. In reply Mrs. Cooper was informed that the Ohio brother had died the same night.

CRUSHED BY AN AUTO.

While ascending Bull hill, on the road from Central Valley to West Point, the 1,800 pound automobile in which F. H. Benedict and a party of friends were traveling, was overturned and Mr. Benedict was almost instantly killed. He is a son of E. C. Benedict, the intimate friend of former President Cleveland.

IN VENEZUELA.

The military situation of the Tachira frontier apparently remains unchanged, although the scouting and restless activities of General Uribe-Uribe and his followers may result in an engagement with the Colombian troops of more or less importance any day. In various parts of Venezuela guerilla parties of nationalists continue more or less in armed activity, and minor uprisings are frequently reported. President Castro is vigorously repressing insurrection wherever he can.

UNVEILS MONUMENT.

Captain Richmond P. Hobson attended the D. A. R. dedication of a monument marking the site of the home of General James W. White, founder of Knoxville, who was Hobson's great-greatgrandfather. The ceremony occurred on the lawn of the suburban home of Hon. Jesse C. Groner, where General White's house stood. It was preceded by a street parade, headed by Hobson. Hon. Richmond Pearson, of North Carolina, uncle of Hobson, is also a guest of honor.

THE case of Jake Champion, said to have been caught in the act of robbing the office of the Southern Express company a few months ago by F. Z. Woodruff, an employee, came up at Anniston Friday. The first American flag unfurled at Santiago is to figure in the street fair at Montgomery during the week of October 28th.

TUSCALOOSA SUICIDE.

The body of Louis Beck, a well-known carpenter, was discovered in a house Saturday near Lock 1 on the Warrior river. A note was found, stating that he could not pay the debts he owed, so he had decided to end his life with carbolic acid. He had purchased the fluid after his work for the day on the Methodist church, and took it after he went to his home, where he lived alone. He was about 47 years old.

GOT AWAY WITH BOOTY.

T. J. Caslisle, the tax commissioner of Lee county, got on the train at Loachapoka Saturday morning and when he was getting off at Opelika, a pickpocket ran his hand in his pocket and got his pocket-book which contained $458 in New York exchange, $50 in gold and $50 in currency. He went to the bank of Opelika where he had purchased the New York exchange, and while notifying them of his loss the man who robbed him came in the bank. Carlisle started towards him and he ran, pursued by carlisle, around an entire block, when he made his escape in the crowd. A farmer named Golden, from Thaddeus, in Tallapoosa county, was robbed at the same time of $130, and another farmer was robbed of $160.

TRESTLE COLLAPSES—TWO ARE KILLED.

A heavy double-header freight train, without a word of warning plunged through the long trestle on the Central of Georgia Railroad near Leeds Saturday morning. Four persons were carried down the drop of forty feet and one of them was instantly killed in the first crash, another dying several hours later. J. W. Webster, engineer of the front engine, was so badly hurt that he died at St. Vincent's hospital, Birmingham, the following night. His fireman was instantly killed. Three others of the train crew were injured. The trestle which caused the disasters pans the Southern Railway and is what is known as a two-deck trestle, practically a trestle upon a trestle. The frame work reaches a height of about forty feet where the timbers gave way. There are no hanging pieces of timber, and the trestle gives the impression of having been cut in two with a knife. Not a vestage of the frame work was left standing between the cutting-off place and the side of the mountain.

REAR ADMIRAL BUNCE DIES OF CANCER.

BACK FROM EXPLORING FROM HAWAII.

The Shark Goes through Warehouses from Hawaii—Chinese Labor—37,000,000 Packages of Seeds.

Mr. Henry E. Cooper, [illegible] secretary and for several [illegible] prior to his departure for the [illegible] States acting governor of Hawaii, discussed with Secretary of Agriculture Wilson the conditions in the territory. In his conference he [illegible] alized the seriousness of the [illegible] problem. The natives are dying rapidly, the mortality being in [illegible] neighborhood of forty to the [illegible] sand, and foreign laborers are [illegible] the country more rapidly than [illegible] are coming. The encouragement [illegible] Chinese labor is regarded as the [illegible] promising solution. The sugar [illegible] crop that should have been harvested at the beginning of January is still in the field, and will not be harvested before next month. The native [illegible] erally will not work. The coffee industry is languishing, and [illegible] things that should be raised there are bought outside of the islands. The department reports that it costs [illegible] an acre to fertilize the cane [illegible] Hawaii. Secretary Wilson told Mr. Cooper of the plans the department is making for Hawaii, and said he intended to build up the coffee, [illegible] rubber and other industries which help to diversify the Hawaiian industries. The department purposes, Mr. Wilson, to make all these [illegible] within the United States [illegible] ever is adaptable to them [illegible] fully, and to furnish everything [illegible] needed among themselves.

The Department of Agriculture completed plans for the annual distribution throughout the country. Despite the fact that double the amount of seeds are to be sent this year, the preliminary work is advanced further than in the past. There will be 37,000,000 packets distributed. A change has been made in the method of distributing cotton and [illegible] crops which will be sent only in sections where they are adaptable. Havana and Sumatra tobacco will be sent only to Florida and certain [illegible] of New England where their use has proven successful and where [illegible] lin spread over tobacco areas have the necessary tropical conditions. The department will begin sending the seeds about December 1st, most of them will be [illegible] through senators and representatives.

Three parties of men sent [illegible] north of Alaska last spring by the geological survey have returned, [illegible] touring thousands of miles and constantly facing all sorts of [illegible] Members of the party will proceed once to Washington, where the information secured on the trip will be embodied in government [illegible] maps and reports.

Rear Admiral Francis M. [illegible] United States Navy, retired, died Saturday at his home at Hartford, from cancer of the tongue.

Senator Bailey, of Texas, who has been ill in this city, is much [illegible] and left for home last Friday.

The marine guard which [illegible] dered such conspicuous service at the Pan-American exposition at Buffalo, will be sent by the navy department to the forthcoming exposition at Charleston, S. C. The only [illegible] to be made in the guard when [illegible] to Charleston is the detail of officers to its command.

The sum of $8,000 became due [illegible] month to the United States from Venezuela on account of mixed claims and it has not been paid. The claims arise out of damages done during the revolution of 1892. Venezuela agreed to pay $32,000 [illegible] in quarterly payments. This is the first instance of default.

The sub-marine boat Holland was successfully launched at Elizabeth Saturday. The boat is one of a fleet of sub-marine warships being built by the Holland Boat Co. Miss Wainwright, daughter of Commander Wainwright, christened the new vessel.

The Arbeiter Zeitung of [illegible] makes the remarkable statement that Count Goluchowski, the imperial minister of foreign affairs, is a candidate for the president of the chamber of deputies not referring to the [illegible] President McKinley on the [illegible] bling of parliament, the [illegible] being that although it is [illegible] refer to the death of foreign [illegible] signs, President McKinley [illegible] an elected president was [illegible] to such distinction.

Children's Column

A Model Spelling.

[illegible] whose spelling is unique. [illegible] words down the "Days of the Week" [illegible] first he spelt "Sunday," [illegible] second day, "Man-day" — [illegible] now a new teacher they send. —St. Nicholas.

Father Pansy.

There is a funny old story about the pansy which many children know, but [illegible] again, do not. The pansy has five petals and five sepals. In all pansies two of the petals are of plain color and three are gay with stripes and spots of bright color. The two plain petals have but one sepal between them, while the two smallest of the gay petals have a sepal each and the one large petal has two sepals.

As the story goes the pansy represents a family—a mother, two daughters and two stepdaughters. The father is very cross and cruel to her stepdaughters, obliging them both to sit on one chair and wear homely dresses, while her daughters have a chair each and very gay dresses, in [illegible]

But why doesn't the father object to such treatment of his daughters? The question is, can you find the father? He is at home. Oh, yes. And you will have to tear the house down, taking off the wife and children, to find him. He is a little bit of a man, with a dirty wrapper on and a nightcap. But [illegible] man, he is sick, and if you will look closely, you will see that he sits with his hands on his knees, a look of despair on his face and his feet in a tub of hot water.—Cincinnati Inquirer.

Traveled Like a Princess.

A little girl came into this port on the St. Paul on Saturday. She was about 7 years of age and was traveling alone. She could speak only Swedish, had no money, was in no one's special charge, and yet no great lady traveling with a retinue of servants could have received more polite and chivalrous attention than was accorded this little kid from over seas.

A piece of sheepskin was tied about her neck and upon it were these words:

"Chris Thompson, Fort Collins, Colorado. Please forward."

She was sent by her grandparents in Sweden to her father and mother who are in the employ of Mr. Thompson, at the place above indicated. Her fare and keep had been paid in advance.

The officers on the ship, the passengers, the men in charge of the docks, the railroad officials to whom she was assigned, did everything within their power for her safety and the increase of her happiness. If she had eaten all that was offered her she could have set up as a museum freak. She seemed happy and not a bit homesick, and [illegible] for the West in a sleeping car with a conductor, a porter, a brakeman and 17 passengers hovering about her and asking if she wanted anything to eat.—New York Correspondence Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A Bear in a Trap.

There were days at a time when there was nothing doing in bear traps. The real rushing business did not begin until about the first of June when the moose calves had got big enough to run fast. Then Henry discovered to his great joy that the bears had begun marking anew their hunting trees. The trapper who takes possession of a stream by blazing trees with his ax is only imitating a custom that was old before Elisha studied bear culture. The big bears stand up as high as they can by certain trees and mark them with their teeth. Each year they bite them anew, at the beginning of summer and Henry showed me several freshly struck trees one day. "That bear is an old settler," said Henry, as we looked at the bites in the tree, higher than a tall man's head. So he rebated the nearest traps, burnt the feathers of a loon which had come too close to camp. "I think I will smell those burnt feathers a year," said Henry. Also he toasted cheese and stuck bits of it in cleft sticks about the neighborhood to get the bear interested.

This diabolism worked its spell, for on approaching the trap, three days later, we heard roars and howls a quarter of a mile away. The bear had become entangled in a snarl of blowdowns, and having fought the trap and roared for hours, lay flat on his back when we approached, wailing his despair. Henry said he never heard a bear make so much noise.

The Shark Goes into the Waters—Pictures from Hawaii—Chinese Labor—37,000,000 Packages of Seeds.

Mr. Henry E. Cooper, territorial secretary and for several months prior to his departure for the United States acting governor of Hawaii, has discussed with Secretary of Agriculture Wilson the conditions in the territory. In his conference he emphasized the seriousness of the labor problem. The natives are dying rapidly, the mortality being in a neighborhood of forty to the thousand, and foreign laborers are leaving the country more rapidly than they are coming. The encouragement of Chinese labor is regarded as the most promising solution. The sugar crop that should have been harvested at the beginning of July is not yet in the field, and will not be harvested before next month. The natives generally will not work. The coffee industry is languishing, and many things that should be raised there are bought outside of the islands. The department reports that it costs $[illegible] an acre to fertilize the cane crop in Hawaii. Secretary Wilson told Mr. Cooper of the plans the department is making for Hawaii, and said he intended to build up the coffee, sugar, rubber and other industries and help to diversify the Hawaiian industries. The department purposes, says Mr. Wilson, to make all these islands within the United States raise whatever is adaptable to them individually, and to furnish everything that is needed among themselves.

The Department of Agriculture has completed plans for the annual distribution throughout the country. Despite the fact that double the usual amount of seeds are to be sent out this year, the preliminary work is advanced further than in the past. There will be 37,000,000 packets distributed. A change has been made in the method of distributing cotton and forage crops which will be sent only to sections where they are adaptable. Havana and Sumatra tobacco will be sent only to Florida and certain parts of New England where their culture has proven successful and where it can spread over tobacco areas furnishing the necessary tropical conditions. The department will begin sending out the seeds about December 1st, and most of them will be furnished through senators and representatives.

Father Pansy.

There is a funny old story about the pansy which many children know, but most again do not. The pansy has five petals and five sepels. In all pansies two of the petals are of plain color and three are gay with stripes and spots of bright color. The two small petals have but one sepel between them, while the two smallest, of the gay petals have a sepal each, and the one large petal has two sepals.

As the story goes, the pansy represents a family of a father, two daughters and two stepdaughters. The father is very cross and cruel to her stepdaughters, treating them both to one coarse diet and wear homely clothes, while his daughters have a many each and very gay dresses, indeed.

But why doesn't the father object to such treatment of his daughters? The question is, can you find the father? He is at home, oh, yes. And you will have to tear the house down, taking out the walls and kitchen, to find him. He is a little fat of a man, with a white wrapper on and a nightcap. But, mister man, he sees, and if you will look closely you will see that he sits with his hands on his knees, a look of despair on his face and his feet in a tub of hot water.—Cincinnati Inquirer.

Traveled Like a Princess.

A little girl came into this port on the St. Paul last Saturday. She was about 7 years of age and was traveling alone. She could speak only Swedish, and no money was in no one's special charge, and yet no great lady, traveling with a retinue of servants, could have received more polite and chivalrous attention than was accorded this little kid from over seas.

A piece of shoe lacing was tied about her neck, and upon it were these words:

"Chris Thompson, Fort Collins, Colorado. Please forward."

She was sent by her grandparents in Sweden to her father and mother, who are in the employ of Mr. Thompson, at the place above indicated. Her fare and keep had been paid in advance.

The officers on the ship, the passengers, the men in charge of the docks, the railroad officials to whom she was assigned, did everything within their power for her safety and the increase of her happiness. If she had eaten all that was offered her she could have set up as a museum freak. She seemed happy and not a bit homesick, and left for the West in a sleeping car with a porter for a porter, a brakeman and 17 passengers hovering about her and asking if she wanted anything to eat.—New York Correspondence Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A Bear in a Trap.

There were days at a time when there was nothing doing in bear traps. The real rushing business did not begin until about the first of June when the moose calves had got big enough to run fast. Then Henry discovered to his great joy that the bears had begun marking anew their rubbing trees. The trapper who takes possession of a stream by blazing trees near his camp is only imitating a custom that was old before Elisha studied bear culture. The big bears stand up as high as they can by certain trees and mark them with their teeth. Each year they bite them anew, at the beginning of summer and Henry showed me several freshly struck trees one day. "That bear is an old settler," said Henry, as we looked at the bites in the tree, higher than a tall man's head. So he rebated the nearest traps, and burnt the feathers of a loon which had come too close to camp. "I think bears will smell those burnt feathers a mile," said Henry. Also he toasted cheese and stuck bits of it in cleft sticks about the neighborhood to get the bear interested.

This diabolism worked its spell, for on approaching the trap, three days later, we heard roars and howls a quarter of a mile away. The bear had become entangled in a snarl of blowdowns, and having fought the trap and bushes for hours, lay flat on his back to all appearances wailing his despair. Henry said he never heard a bear make so much noise.

There was a great difference in the way the bears acted. Some of them tried to get away, some became furious at our coming. But all of them took the final blow quietly, and died quietly.—Frederic Irland, in Scribner's.

The Duck-Hawk's Strategy.

The wild duck's lot is not a happy one at least when a hawk has singled out as its prey. How the duck effects its campaign is told in the St. Nicholas.

The wild duck possesses a large share of curiosity and may at times be brought within shot by taking advantage of this trait; but, ordinarily, it "pits its wits against theirs," and this is the great charm of the sport.

It is exciting to watch the duck-hawk in pursuit of his prey. Given a duck fowler with the quarry, it is fascinating to witness the exhibition of speed by these "thoroughbred" racers. The hawk will often overtake and strike a duck in the air, though he seems to prefer to single out from some flock, and, if possible, force him to dive. As the duck comes to the surface to breathe, the hawk is at hand and down goes the duck once more. This is repeated until the poor duck is almost exhausted; and when the duck pauses a second too long at the surface the hawk pounces and the duck is secured.

There is wonderful sagacity shown by these birds in forcing a diving duck away from the reeds into open water. They seem loathe to exert themselves sufficiently to capture their game on the wing, but will "dog him," as it were, from the shallows to deep water, where in sheer desperation the victim dives, fancying that one or two long reaches under water will bring him within the shelter of the reeds. Seldom, however, is he successful in the attempt; fear and exhaustion generally end the matter as the hawk wishes.

A great many ducks crippled by gunners will make for the marshes, where they hide; and sometimes if fortunate and not too severely wounded, they will recover. But even here they are not safe; the prowling fox or mink will strike their trail among the sedge, and often catch them when they venture too near the shore.

Out in the deeper part of the marsh ducks must exercise the greatest caution when feeding; for when the dusk of evening settles down on lake and fen, and the mystery of the twilight reigns, a most dangerous foe—the "still hunting owl"—comes from the darkening woods, and on silent wing the great bird quarters the marsh backward and forward with the thoroughness of a well-trained hound. Still hunting is the high art of sport and the big owls are experts in their way.

A Japanese Baby Prince.

The baby prince born a short time ago in the palace of the Prince Imperial in Japan has been the cause of unusual rejoicing even to the remotest corners of the kingdom, for he is the first son born to an empress for many generations, and some day, if he lives, he will become the Mikado. The Japanese have a strange legend, that the white storks which make their nests in the palace gardens never use the three topomost boughs of the tall pines to build in when a girl is to be born. This year, the Japanese declare, the storks built their nests at the top of the trees in honor of the little prince. After the birth of the royal child, the legend says, the storks rise, and spreading wide their wings, fly far away through the blue sky to carry the glad news to all Japan. That is why one sees pictures of flying storks on Japanese trays and fans and lacquer boxes, or a dozen other things, for anything bearing the likeness of one of these messengers of good tidings is believed to be a gift of good omen.

On the birthday of the prince, all through the country wherever the news had been received, the houses were gayly decorated with two Japanese flags crossed above a white lantern, on which was the motto, "Long life to the Mikado." In the palace itself many curious customs, handed down from ancient times, were repeated with solemn pomp.

One of the funniest of these ceremonies is to throw from the roof an old wooden rice boiler. Nearly three thousand years ago, when all the buildings were loosely built, tradition says that when the Emperor's son was born the roof of the palace let in the snow and rain and the Empress was in danger of catching cold. Then the Emperor took a rice boiler, which is made of several layers of thin wooden boxes, and made a covering to keep out the wet. From this idea roof thatching was invented, and to show that the old boiler is no longer in use it is thrown to the ground.

Another time honored custom is that of sending a messenger as soon as the baby is born to carry the news to the temple of the Mikados. A woman always performs this duty. She takes a box of beautiful white wood, decorated with the sixteen leaved chrysanthemum, which is the symbol of the Mikados. The box is bound with long purple cords, which mean congratulation, and contains a letter announcing the birth. This is given to the priestess, and then read aloud in the most holy place. Ever since the days of the tenth Mikado, nearly 2000 years ago, the same ceremony has been repeated whenever a little prince came into the world, and the priestess of this temple has always been a sister of the Mikado, or a royal princess.

The eighth day of the prince's life was set apart for the ceremony of naming and hair shaving, and in this he is like all other boy babies in Japan, for they too have their heads shaved on the eighth day. The hair shaved from the baby prince is carefully kept as long as he lives, but when he dies it will be placed with other relics in a little silken bag and tied about his neck to be buried with him.—New York Tribune.

The Deepest Natural Well.

There is a man in France, M. Marcel by name, who devotes his time and his energies to the exploration of caverns and other underground places. Many of the discoveries that he has reported have attracted much attention, but none more than that of a natural well in the department of Hautes Alpes, of which he recently gave a description. It is the deepest cavity of its kind known. He has sounded it to a depth of 1017 feet, but believes that he has not yet reached the bottom.

GARDEN AND FARM

ADVANTAGES OF CROP ROTATION.

Rotation of crops not only enables the farmer to get the best results, but largely aids in preventing diseases of plants. Rotation, which includes clover, distributes the plant foods to advantage and prevents loss of any particular element required by plants.

THE FLAVOR OF MILK.

The flavor of milk is not always due to the food. On hundreds of farms there is an utter lack of cleanliness in the handling of milk, although it is well known that sickness and death are caused by the germs which enter into milk through lack of cleanliness in milking and carelessness in other details.

KEEP THE BEST BRED ANIMALS.

The best bred animals are better than culls, even of pure breeds. They may cost more, but they also sell for more, and their increase adds value to the herds and flocks. Quality is a factor at the present day that must be recognized by every farmer, as competition is close, and the farmer must keep in line and endeavor to have the best.

THE MILK PAIL.

Many people who have the care of cows and milk do not realize how much of their trouble with milk souring too soon, with bad flavors in cream or butter, is due to the milk pail. Wooden or paper pails should never be used for milk as they can not be so perfectly cleansed as tin. The white iron pail is preferable as it has no seams to serve as germ-catchers, but a tin pail can be kept perfectly clean if a whisk broom or small brush is used in washing it. A suds of warm water and soap should be used for washing the pail after the milk has been rinsed out with a dash of cold water. This will remove all impurities and with a scalding in boiling water will insure good milk and butter, provided the other vessels are as carefully cleansed as the pail. The strainer also is often at fault as regards the keeping qualities of the milk. If a cloth strainer is used it should be well rinsed in cold water to remove the milk before being scalded in a soap suds and rinsed for drying. A wire strainer sometimes becomes clogged by pouring hot water into it before the milk has been rinsed out, thus cooking a cheeselike substance into the meshes. This can be removed by scouring with salt and a brush, then wash well with soap and warm water, and be more careful next time.

SHALL WE RAISE OUR OWN HONEY?

The bee business is a business of details, which must be looked after just at the proper time; if we neglect them success will not be ours. There is already a great deal of lottery associated with bee keeping, and the chances are very much more against the man who makes bee keeping a side issue.

The man who wants to go into bee culture should make it a business, and go into it heavy enough so the business will support him, or else let it alone.

My theory, I admit, may be disputed, but it will be hard work to dodge the facts as I have observed them during the last quarter of a century. Time and again have I seen neighbors and friends invest money in bees and hives in the hope of adding to their revenues by the labors of the little industrious insect; the result has been failure almost without exception. The hives stand around empty, or are used for hens' nests or for storing apples, etc., and the combs are eaten up by moths. The humming of the bees is not heard any more. Indeed, the exceptions are so rare they only prove the rule. I am very loath now to advise any man to engage in bee keeping without I am satisfied he is willing to give much time and study to the pursuit.

The real difficulty lies in the wintering problem, which is the cause of many a bee keeper giving up the business in disgust, even those who have posted themselves and are up to the times. If there was an easy and sure method of wintering bees everybody could have them and raise some honey; but as it is it is only a question of time before the ordinary bee keeper is forced to give up.—Friedemann Greiner, in Farm and Fireside.

SHOCKING CORN.

Two men should work together, and the shocks should be started on a jack, which is made by putting two legs, well braced together, near one end of a ten-foot scantling, and having an auger hole near the upper end for a broom handle. As soon as four armfuls are set up against the jack the shock should be loosely tied with a stalk and the jack removed. In commencing, each cutter should take two rows, and all the shocks should be started that the cutters expect to cut during the day, so that when they again start the shock has wilted and cured out all that is possible. They should now take only one row each and cut from shock to shock, making each armful go half way around the shock, in order to allow it to wilt and cure out. After they have cut clear through, they should again go back to the beginning and cut another row each, continuing this until the shock row is completed always having in mind the perfect curing of the corn.

The shocks should not be violently compressed, as is the usual practice, but loosely tied with a cornstalk to prevent the outside stalks blowing down. An average shock that weighs three hundred pounds when cured will weigh one thousand to twelve hundred pounds when green; and who is there who would put in a shock twelve hundred pounds of gre[illegible] expect it to cure out perfectly, especially if heavily weighted? Anyone knows better than to do this; so why treat a corn shock that way? Just as sure as a green corn shock is tied up tight, without any chance to cure it out, just so sure will a chemical change take place that unfits it for feed, even if it does not turn black or moldy. To avoid this chemical change in newly cut corn fodder, green, most farmers delay cutting until the leaves on the stalk have cured out standing, and thereby secure a very poor grade of fodder.—J. C. Norton, in American Agriculturist.

WHEAT CROPS AND SOILS.

The wheat crop is the most important at this season, farmers making preparations in plowing and harrowing. Although the West is considered the principal wheat-producing section, yet Pennsylvania is one of the leading wheat-growing States. The rotation of wheat with clover and corn is largely practiced, and the fact that farmers still make wheat a prominent crop is evidence that it is not exhausting the soil of this State. Several years' experimental work, however, demonstrates that when wheat was grown continuously upon the same soil for eight years there was a loss of 1,700 pounds of nitrogen per acre, about 300 pounds being used as plant food and 1400 pounds lost by the decay of animal and vegetable matter of the soil and liberation of the nitrogen as gaseous and soluble compounds. During the eight years of continuous wheat cultivation there was a loss of over twenty-one per cent. of the total nitrogen of the soil, equivalent to an annual loss of 175 pounds per acre, in addition to that used as plant food. When wheat was grown in a rotation with clover and oats, five crops of wheat being removed in eight years, larger yields per acre were secured and the total loss of nitrogen from the soil was reduced to 800 pounds, or about 450 pounds in excess of that utilized as plant food. When corn was grown with clover and oats, in a rotation, and farm manure used, the total loss of nitrogen from the soil in eight years was less than 100 pounds in excess of that removed as plant food. When oats and barley were grown continuously the losses of nitrogen from the soil were nearly as large as when wheat was grown continuously. When corn was grown continuously the loss of nitrogen from the soil was less than half as large as with wheat, and when corn is introduced into the rotation the losses of nitrogen are less than if wheat were grown.

There is a loss annually of over 2000 pounds of humus per acre when wheat is grown continuously, due to the decay and fermentation of animal and vegetable matter; but no material loss of humus occurs when wheat is grown in rotation with clover and oats. The loss of humus changes the physical properties of the soil, causing it to be less retentive of moisture, makes the color lighter and increases the weight of the soil per cubic foot. When wheat is grown without rotation the land is less able to supply moisture during times of drought. It is more detrimental, however, to practice bare summer fallowing than to grow wheat continuously, as summer fallowing favors the decay of humus and the loss of nitrogen. While larger crops of wheat are produced after a year of fallow this increase is followed by a heavy loss of the total nitrogen of the soil, but summer fallowing rapidly exhausts the soil of its supply of nitrogen. This is an important fact which is not known to some, as it has been the practice in certain sections where clover does not enter into the rotation to grow corn one year and wheat the next, leaving the land idle the third year, which is really a system of fallowing or resting the soil, and for hundreds of years it has been believed that by resting the land the soil was improved, but it is now known that while the soil did really make an increase in nitrogen, the loss, when wheat followed the fallow, was greater than the gain. Farmers now aim to keep the soil covered at all seasons with some kind of growth.

It is not the growing of a crop that removes the fertility so much as failure to rotate. Wheat is not an exhaustive crop when grown in a rotation, but when grown continuously on the same land the loss of plant food is very great. It is not the crop itself that reduces fertility, but the lack of systematic methods. When the nitrogen and humus of the soil were conserved by the rotation of crops, and the production of clover, as demonstrated by the experiment, an increase of twenty bushels of corn and over 5½ bushels of wheat per acre were secured. Old wheat soils readily recuperate when humus-forming materials are returned to the soil, and by rotation of crops the use of barnyard manure and the growing of clover the heavy losses of humus and nitrogen from the soil can be checked and larger yields and a better quality of grain secured.

No farmer should rely entirely upon barnyard manure or rotation, however, in order to retain fertility of his soil. There are so many losses of plant food from rains, snows, heat and failure to properly care for manure, that to attempt to discard fertilizers may prove disastrous from the fact that it is much easier and cheaper to keep the soil fertile than to endeavor to restore fertility after the soil has become more or less impoverished. The danger to our farmers is that they do not appreciate the fact that fertilizers repay their cost by giving increase of crops, and that every dollar expended for fertilizer is one of the best investments the farmer can make. It is claimed that if a farmer must go in debt and mortgage his farm he can do so safely only by going into debt for fertilizer, but while this claim may not be relied upon, yet when a farmer expends capital for fertilizer he buys the very best raw material for manufacturing salable crops on the farm.—Philadelphia Record.

FOR WOMAN'S BENEFIT

Large Muffs to Be the Style Again.

The "Give Away" Sleeve.

A good judge of lady's dress says she can tell by a glance whether a gown be a true tailor-made or whether it has been fashioned by feminine fingers. The sleeves are supposed to give the information. Tailors, as we all know, cling to the masculine ideal of a coat sleeve, not tight, indeed, but sufficiently close fitting. On the other hand the dressmaker, French, Irish, English or American, is strongly prejudiced in favor of flowing sleeves, undersleeves, balloon puffs on shoulder or elbow—in short, of every possible vagary in the name of a sleeve.

For the "Muddy Skin."

Of the many remedies for skin blemishes the one that is simple, easily obtained and efficacious, without tedious waiting for a cure, is the one sure to be appreciated. Nothing frets a woman like a rough, muddy skin, but with this simple cure-all relief may be obtained at short notice. Wash the face in very salty sweet milk every night, and let it dry without wiping. A mixture made of one small tablespoonful of milk and a teaspoonful of salt applied to the most obstinate blemish of the skin will cure it almost like magic. This is the remedy prescribed by one of the best authorities in England, and it is said that the use of milk and salt is half the secret of the Englishwoman's smooth, beautiful skin.

The Winter's Wraps.

From Paris comes the intimation that pelerines are to be the mode next winter. Some are to be long and draped, having one end thrown over the shoulder and fastened with a gold buckle. They may be lined with white or black taffetas and be cascaded to show the lining. Some of these mantles will have no collar, but will be bordered with a shaped strapping of black and gold embroidery or velvet around the throat. Bell-shaped sleeves will be worn or the mantle may have a cascaded drapery from the shoulders. Then there will be fichu-like wraps which will cross in front and fasten behind with sashes of mousseline. To bridge the chasm between such radical departures from the present mode of wraps there will be jacket mantlettes in white or colored taffetas incrusted with lace.

Individuality in Dress.

It is difficult to resist putting in a plea for a little more individuality in dress, yet the tendency toward an irritating sameness seems more apparent than ever. Taking an average assembly at the present moment, the backs of the heads of nine women out of ten look almost identical, the hat tilted back to the same angle, with the black velvet bow assuming the same droop on the hair. And every neck that is not dressed plain and low has the inevitable ruff of black and white tulle, with long ends, which leads one to believe these articles are turned out by the gross. Yet just now there is an endless variety in pretty ruffles, and nimble fingers might achieve excellent results by manufacturing one somewhat out of the common instead of accepting a hard and monotonous pattern.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Queen Alexandra's Former Governess.

Queen Alexandra, in her early days, in her royal father's home in Copenhagen, was instructed in and carefully taught English by a Danish West Indian lady. That lady, Miss Mathilde Knudsen, was born 70 summers ago in one of King Christian's lovely West Indian colonies, the island of St. Croix, where her father was a planter.

Miss Knudsen, though not English by birth, speaks that language with perfect ease, and on the recommendation of the late Admiral Zarthman's wife, whose husband belonged to the Danish navy, she was selected to teach the English language, not only to the present Queen of England, but also to the Dowager Empress of Russia, the Duchess of Cumberland, Prince Waldemar, and four of the crown prince's children, a very distinguished and highly agreeable task, in which she acquitted herself in the most creditable manner, and the tokens of esteem which have since been bestowed upon her by her royal and imperial pupils have been numerous.

On her frequent visits to England she has always been honored as a guest at the Princess of Wales's table. Miss Knudsen, now in the evening of her life, still resides in the fashionable quarter of Copenhagen, near the royal palace of Amalienborg.—Leslie's Weekly.

Some Pretty Tea Gowns.

A beautiful tea gown is of wing accordion-pleated crepe de chine, with its shaped flounce, deep collar and elbow sleeves, worked with soft silk in harmonizing shades. Ribbon of the same pattern is passed under the arms and used in the hair. Another tea gown is made entirely of butter-colored china insertion about three inches wide. Between each insertion is placed slightly gathered bands of alternately plain and polka-spotted ecru silk mull. The hem is finished with a very deep band of spotted mull, featherstitched on, and the same finish appears on the wide bell sleeves. The gown is worn over a slip of pale lilac oriental satin. There are three collars to the tea gown. They are like the triple capes of an Empire coat and are made of the two kinds of muslin and lace, featherstitched with pale lilac silk. A third gown is of ecru spotted net on deep cream-colored chiffon, edged with Cluny lace. The oversleeves and lining are of soft silk. There is a fichu edged with the lace, and a black chiffon scarf passes under the arms and is fastened with a green enamelled buckle, the long ends of the sash reaching to the ground. A tea gown of gray satin is decorated with clusters of crushed roses in panne and chiffon and the undersleeves and chou are of black chiffon. Tea gowns should have a low neck, but long sleeves.

The Advantages of Sandals.

Sandals are being worn by English women and children to some extent a fact which calls forth the following communication to the London Daily Mail:

I can speak with 10 years' experience of sandals. The chief objection I have seen urged against them is that they will enlarge the feet. Now, I do not believe that any footwear, short of such as has inflicted cruelty in infancy, can possibly alter the size of the foot, which necessarily depends on the bone structure of the individual. It will invariably be found that the person with neat, well-shaped hands has feet to correspond. If allowing the feet to have the free play that nature intended them to have is apt to make them large and ungainly, then sailors, who spend most of their time and do most of their work on bare feet, and who hitherto have always been famous for their neat and well-shaped ones, will have to abandon their claim to this coveted possession.

I have heard it objected that sandals tend to make the foot sensitive and unfit to bear a boot when the latter has to be worn. I have found in my own case and in the cases of friends that feet accustomed to sandals grow a healthier skin, their nerves become less sensitive to pressure and their muscles and tendons gain more power of contraction.

Everyone will allow that sandals are the coolest foot-covering for summer, but doubtless most people will be surprised to learn that they are the warmest wear in winter. If persons suffering from cold feet or chilblains would wear sandals over good thick woolen socks they would soon find themselves cured of these afflictions.

Women's Work.

In many respects southern women seem less afraid of being called radical than their eastern sisters, and it will not be surprising if the ballot should come to them long before it is wielded by the women of the central eastern and New England states. That it will come is as certain as that the republic is to endure. It is impossible to doubt one without questioning the other.

The experience of Georgia women during the past year is such as to drive them pollward, willynilly. They had three pet measures which they advocated in their legislature as ably as they could, and when it is remembered that Rebecca Douglas Lowe, the gracious and accomplished president of the General Federation, lives in Atlanta, as does also Mrs. John K. Ottley, one of the most brilliant club women of the whole country, it is not to be supposed for an instant that "influence" did not have an opportunity to show its work.

The bills were strictly humanitarian in character, except, possibly, that to admit women to the state textile school. The other raised the age of consent (it is now ten years), and the third prohibited the employment of children under 12 years of age in the factories. All three bills were defeated.

In Illinois the women passed a bill for the better accommodation of women students at the state university and the colleges, and it was vetoed by the governor.

In Vermont the federation had a bill introduced asking that women be appointed on boards of control of the asylums where women are confined. This unreasonable (?) demand was slain forthwith.

If men wish to keep women out of the pool of politics they will do well to make haste and give them all they ask along these lines, for there is no other way to stay their advance.

Already the small edge of the wedge has made its way far into the oak of resistance.

In Wyoming, Colorado, Utah and Idaho women have full suffrage, including a vote for presidential electors.

In Arkansas and Missouri women may vote on petition on the granting of saloon licenses.

In Delaware municipal suffrage exists in several towns.

In Kansas there is full municipal suffrage.

In Montana women may vote on local taxation.

In a number of cities in New York they may vote on the issuance of bonds for public improvements.

In Pennsylvania women may vote on local improvements by petitioning for or against them.—Alaska's Magazine.

Hon. S. J. Bowie will speak at Clanton on Saturday morning next at 11 o'clock, and at Verbena the same night at 7:30. His subject will be the new constitution. Mr Bowie is a good speaker, and will be well worth hearing on this particular question. We expect to see large audiences.

With this issue THE BANNER commences its tenth volume with brighter prospects than ever before We are grateful for the liberal patronage that has been bestowed upon us, and will leave nothing undone to merit its continuance. We had prepared a lenghty article of thanks, but have been compelled to leave it out to make room for other matter.

In course of conversation with a number of citizens from various parts of the county this last few days we find, in nearly every instance, that the only objection they had to the new Constitution was the suffrage clause—nay, not even to the clause itself, but to their own fear that under its provisions they were to be deprived of their right to vote. That fear is groundless and without foundation. Not a white man who votes in the coming election, but who will also be able to vote in all future elections. Disabuse your minds of that false idea, gentlemen, and vote for the ratification of the new Constitution.

We repeat, that every white man will be duly registered, and have the privelige of voting in all future elections. If we had the slightest fear that one solitary white man in Chilton county would be deprived of his right to vote, we would oppose ratification as strongly as we knew how, but as it is we earnestly urge every man to study the Constitution himself and then vote on November 11 for its ratification.

Following is the report of the special examiner, appointed by the County Commissioners to examine the books and accounts of the Probate office:

Hon. S. M. Adams,
Judge of Probate Chilton Co.:

Dear Sir:—At your request I examined and checked your books, with reference to your collection and payment of moneys into the State and County Treasuries, in your official capacity, beginning with Nov. 1898, and bringing it up to July 10, 1901.

Your records show that you have issued warrants only as allowed by commissioners court.

Your receipts and records show that you have promptly paid over all moneys coming into your hands, from whatever source received.

In the matter of land redemptions, which lands were sold for taxes and bid in for the State, I find a few small errors in calculation, which errors when balanced, show that your collections and payments into the State and County Treasuries, as a whole, are nearly correct. In the matter of redemption of the lands, known as the Cullahorn lands, sold for the taxes of 1892, and bid in for the State, the records in the Auditor's office show that one hundred and twenty acres of said lands were purchased by A. L. Patrillo, on the 16th of August, 1899, when the entire sum of the original tax and cost, for which said lands were sold, with the pro rata share of subsequent taxes due on the lands sold, were collected leaving only the subsequent taxes due on the unredeemed lands to be collected. As I am informed, the value placed on the remaining lands by yourself, and the assessor of the county, was $1.00 per acre. Under this valuation, the total tax, with interest due the State, on the remaining lands, to the date when redeemed, April 6, 1900, including special tax is $57.70. The sum collected by you and paid into the State Treasury is about $10.00 in excess of this sum, showing that as a whole you have amply protected the public interest in the matter of land redemptions, as well as in other trusts, devolving upon you.

Respectfully submitted,
John Purifoy, Spec'l Ex'mr.

SUFFRAGE PROVISIONS OF THE NEW CONSTITUTION EXPLAINED IN BRIEF.

Under the temporary plan the following male citizens of this State having the necessary residence qualifications can vote: "First—All who have honorably served in the land or naval forces of the United States in the war 1812, or in the war with Mexico, or in any war with the Indians, or in the war between the States, or in the land or naval forces of the Confederate States, or of the State of Alabama in the war between the States; or Third—All persons who are of good character and who understand the duties and obligations of citizenship under a Republican form of government.

It is to be noted that these qualifications are in the alternative. If a man possesses either of them he can vote. He need not, as has been charged by the opposition possess all or more than one of them There is not a white man in the State of Alabama, unless he be a criminal, who cannot register under one or the other of these provisions. Having once registered he is a voter for life If he removes from his precinct it is only necessary to take his registration certificate with him or if he has lost it to apply for and obtain a new one. Ample opportunities are furnished for registration under temporary plan. The registrars are required to give adequate notice visit each precinct at least once and oftener if necessary to make a complete registration of all persons entitled to register and to remain as long as it is necessary for that purpose. They are also required to be at the court house on Friday and Saturday next preceding the day of the election in November 1902 and then and there register all persons entitled thereto who may have become of age since the previous registration or who by reason of physical disability or unavoidable absence from the county were not registerd by the registrar when going through the beats. They are also required to remain at the court house during the entire third week of November 1902 and for six working days next prior to the 20th day of December 1902, to register all persons then entitled to registration or who may not have been registered for any reason during the former registration.

Under the permanent plan to be entitled to vote one must have been registered under temporary plan, or be able to read and write a section of the Constitution of the United States in the English language, or pay taxes on Three Hundred Dollars worth of real, or personal property, or on forty acres of land, or be the husband of a woman who pays taxes on on forty acres of land, or owns Three Hundred Dollars worth of real, or personal property.

The first state election held under the provisions of the permanent plan will be in November 1906. Every white man in the State can register next year under the temporary plan and then vote for life. The permanent plan, therefore, applies only to minors or, those moving into the State after next year. These minors have more than five years in which to lear to read and to write or to acquire three hundred dollars worth of real, or personal property. With the liberal provisions in favor of the common schools the great extension of educational facilities throughout the State, there is not a white child in the State who cannot acquire sufficient education to at least read and write in five years. The next national election is over three years off and the amplest time is allowed every white boy in the State to learn how to read and write by that election. This very provision of the new Constitution, while just in itself, will be a great stimulus to the cause of general education.

Our permanent plan is framed almost word for word from the South Carolina plan. In South Carolina every white man in the State is registered. Hon M. B. McSweeney, Governor of South Carolina on the 2nd instant telegrapped Hon Sidney J. Bowie, Chairman of the Democratic Campaign Committee of this county as follows:

"Columbia, S. C., Oct. 2, 1901.

"Sydney J. Bowie: Very few negroes registered in this state. All of the whites are registered. No complaint against our elections."

(Signed) "M. B. McSWEENEY."

Like causes produce like effects, and no white man now entitled to vote, and no white child in the future has any cause for apprehension with reference to his vote. The opponents of the new Constitution charge that boys coming on in the future must be able to read and write and own Three Hundred Dollars worth of property. Attention is called to the fact that this is not true. If he is able to read and write or if he pays taxes on this amount of property, he can vote. It is only necessary to have one of these qualifications.

It is charged that registrars have a discretion as to who they will register. This is not true. They must register every man possessing either of the qualifications named. Every state in the union, including this state, has a system of registration. The registrar has no more power under the new Constitution than the present law, and we have never heard of any person, entitled to registration under the present law, being denied it. Indeed, the right of the voter is better protected under the new Constitution, if additional protection were needed, than under the existing law, since provision is made for an appeal from the action of the registrar without bond to a jury, in case a person applying for registration is refused. No right of appeal exist under the present law nor has one been found necessary, but it is given as an additional precaution in the new Constitution.

The registration feature of the new Constitution is in force only next year. All subsequent registrations must be provided for by the Legislature The sole purpose for providing for the temporary registration next year in the constitution was to save the necessity of an extra session of the Legislature. If registration had not been provided for, an extra session of the Legislature, at a cost of probably forty thousand dollars, would have been necessary. That extra session would have provided for registration just as the new constitution does, and there is no probability that the plan of registration devised by the Legislature would have been wiser or fairer than that devised by the new constitution, In either case registration would have to be made by men of somebodys appointment It has been said by one of our most distinguished that:

"In nearly all the States the right to vote at elections is made to depend upon a previous registration made by officers appointed according to law. This precaution is really vital to the sovereign power of self government."

Fraudlent registration under the new constitution by registrars, is prohibited, under a penalty of from one to five years in the penitentiary. The list is required to be filed in the office of the Judge of Probate of each county, by the first day of February, 1903, or as soon thereafter as practicable, and in the office of Secretary of State by the first day of March, 1903, or as soon thereafter as practicable, and the Legislature is required to provid for purging the list of all who may have been fraudulently registered or who die or become insane. Under these safe-guards every right of the voter is fully protected

The poll tax is required to be paid only by those who are now liable to pay it under the existing statutes. In fact under the old constitution, poll taxes could be required of every citizen, no matter how old. Under the new, it can only be required of those over forty-five years of age, unless the Legislature should see fit to extend it, in which case it could not be extended to those over sixty years of age Moreover, under the old constitution there are no exemptions from poll taxes provided for, but under the present constitution all persons are exempted from poll tax who are permanently disabled, and whose taxable property does not exceed $500.00.

"Something New Under The Sun."

All Doctors have tried to cure CATARRH by the use of powders, acid gases, inhalers and drugs in paste form. Their powders dry up the mucous membranes causing them to crack open and bleed. The powerful acids used in the inhalers have entirely eaten away the same membranes that their makers have aimed to cure, while pastes and ointments cannot reach the disease. An old and experienced practitioner who has for many years made a close study and specialty of the treatment of CATARRH, has at last perfected a Treatment which when faithfully used, not only relieves at once, but permanently cures CATARRH, by removing the cause, stopping the discharges, and curing all inflammation. It is the only remedy known to science that actually reaches the afflicted parts. This wonderful remedy is known as "SNUFFLES" the GUARANTEED CATARRH CURE and is sold at the extremely low price of One Dollar, each package containing internal and external medicine sufficient for a full month's treatment and everything necessary to its perfect use.

"SNUFFLES" is the only perfect CATARRH CURE ever made and is now recognized as the only safe and positive cure for that annoying and disgusting disease. It cures all inflammation quickly and permanently and is also wonderfully quick to relieve HAY FEVER or COLD in the HEAD.

CATARRH when neglected often leads to CONSUMPTION—"SNUFFLES" will save you if you use it at once. It is no ordinary remedy, but a complete treatment which is positively guaranteed to cure CATARRH in any form or stage if used according to the directions which accompany each package. Don't delay but send for it at once, and write full particulars as to your condition, and you will receive special advice from the discoverer of this wonderful remedy regarding your case without cost to you beyond the regular price of "SNUFFLES" the "GUARANTEED CATARRH CURE."

Sent prepaid to any address in the United States or Canada on receipt of One Dollar. Address Dept C 935 EDWIN S. GILES & COMPANY, 2336 and 2332 Market Street, Philadelphia.

FOR HARNESS and Saddle Sores Mexican Mustang Liniment is just what you need. It relieves at once, and you will be astonished to see how quickly it heals sores.

It's this way:

You can burn yourself with Fire, with Powder, etc., or you can scald yourself with Steam or Hot Water, but there is only one proper way to cure a burn or scald and that is by using

Mexican Mustang Liniment

It gives immediate relief. Get a piece of soft old linen cloth, saturate it with this liniment and bind loosely upon the wound. You can have no adequate idea what an excellent remedy this is for a burn until you have tried it.

A FOWL TIP. If you have a bird afflicted with Roup or any other poultry disease use Mexican Mustang Liniment. It is called a STANDARD remedy by poultry breeders.

THE HOME GOLD CURE.

An Ingenious Treatment by which Drunkards are Being Cured Daily in Spite of Themselves.

No Noxious Doses. No Weakening of the Nerves. A Pleasant and Positive Cure for the Liquor Habit.

It is now generally known and understood that drunkenness is a disease and not weakness. A body filled with poison, and nerves completely shattered by periodical or constant use of intoxicating liquors, requires an antidote capable of neutralizing and eradicating this poison, and destroying the craving for intoxicants. Sufferers may now cure themselves at home without publicity or loss of time from business by this wonderful "HOME GOLD CURE" which has been perfected after many years of close study and treatment of inebriates. The faithful use according to directions of this wonderful discovery is positively guaranteed to cure the most obstinate case, no matter how hard a drinker. Our records show the marvelous transformation of thousands of Drunkards into sober, industrious and upright men.

WIVES CURE YOUR HUSBANDS! CHILDREN CURE YOUR FATHERS!! this remedy is in no sense a nostrum but is a specific for this disease only, and is so skillfully devised and prepared that it is thoroughly soluble and pleasant to the taste, so that it can be given in a cup of tea or coffee without the knowledge of the person taking it. Thousands of Drunkards have cured themselves with this priceless remedy, and as many more have been cured and made temperate men by having the "CURE" administered by loving friends and relatives without their knowledge in coffee or tea, and believe today that they discontinued drinking of their own free will. DO NOT WAIT. Do not be deluded by apparent and misleading "improvement." Drive out the disease at once and for all time. The "HOME GOLD CURE" is sold at the extremely low price of One Dollar, thus placing within reach of every body a treatment more effectual than others costing $25 to $50. Full directions accompany each package. Special advice by skilled physicians when requested without extra charge. Sent prepaid to any part of the world on receipt of One Dollar. Address Dept. 143 Market street,
Memphis, Tenn., April 14, 1901.

In February, 1901, I took one bottle of Wine of Cardui and one package of Thedford's Black-Draught. I had been married fifteen years and had never given birth to a child until I took Wine of Cardui. Now I am mother of a fine baby girl which was born March 31, 1901. The baby weighs fourteen pounds and I feel as well as any person could feel. Now my home is happy and I never will be without Wine of Cardui in my house again. Mrs. J. W. C. SMITH.

BILL ARP'S LETTER

Discusses a Visit of Mrs. Arp to Daughter and Grandchildren.

TALKS IN A HIGHLY PLEASING STRAIN

Reverts to Many Matters that Will Rejoice His Better Half When She Returns Home.

My wife went off to the country to spend the day with one of our daughters and her children. We expected her to return that evening, but got a message that she would spend the night and the next day and maybe longer. Thinks I to myself, she wants me to send her word to come home, and I won't. It has been a long time since the runaway. We missed her, but made no sign. Her chair was vacant. Her familiar voice was no longer heard. The pantry keys hung silent on the nail. Nobody called me from the window to stop working in the garden and rest while the sun was so hot. Nobody to say the flour is out or the hominy or the lard or something else, for something is always out at our house. Little grandchildren come to see us and don't stay long "cos granma ain't here." Everything looks like a funeral. Lonesome isent the word for it. There isent any word for the feeling when the maternal ancestor is not cruising around; when we cant hear the rustle of her dress, nor the sound of her voice nor see her stitching away on some infantile garment or reading over again the last letter from the far away boys.

But the girls gave me a hint and said now was a good time to paint the kitchen and surprise her, for she has been talking about those old dirty, dingy, smoky walls ever and anon once or thrice in awhile. So I opened my big heart and little purse and sent for the painter to come early in the morning. He came and did a nice job of it in a day. The kitchen looks like a parlor. The cook woman caught on to the surprise party and scoured the tables and the tinware and then went home and put on a clean, new dress. My wife came home this morning. We gave her a kind welcome, but made no sign. She was glad to get home and indulged in more hilarity than usual. She cruised around looking at familiar things and places. Soon she wandered toward the kitchen and we kept in hailing distance and watched her. Suddenly there was a scream of delight as she looked in at the open door. "Well, I do declare. Did I ever." That is all she said just then, for she turned and came hastily to me and kissed me. She took me by surprise, for she quit kissing me years ago. That kiss more than paid for the paint and the painting. These little sweet surprises are the best part of domestic life. They beat wealth and high life and political honors and fame, and are the next thing to religion, for they are founded in love.

"All thoughts, all passions, all delights
Whatever stirs this mortal frame,
All are but ministers of love
And feed its sacred flame."

These are the songs of birds in the trees—the flowers by the wayside that comfort us in the journey of life. Song birds and flowers! There is nothing in the wide world that gives such emphasis to the love of God for His creatures. We need food and raiment and, of course, the human family would perish without them. But the birds and flowers are extra gifts to minister to our senses, our emotions. How fortunate for us that as we grow older we love them better. When I was a very busy man and had ambition to rise in the world and advance my wife and children I cared little for birds or flowers, but now they are my especial pleasure. Now I understand the meaning of that beautiful verse, "Consider the lilies how they grow. They toil not, neither do they spin, yet Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these." He who provideth food for the ravens and takes notice of every sparrow that falls to the ground will surely take care of us if we trust Him. I believe there are but two kinds of flowers named in the Bible—the rose of Sharon and the lily of the valley—and these two stand pre-eminent today for beauty and fragrance. Of late I have been watching the rosebuds as they unfold their leaves and open into beauty. How wonderfully they are folded upon the little cone and every layer is waiting for its time and turn to come forth and breathe the air and take on colors from God's sunlight. No human fingers could refold them and make a bud again. The birth of a beautiful rose is a miracle. It passeth comprehension and excites our wonder only. Just so is the feather of a bird. The microscope shows the most wonderful mechanism in its delicately woven fabric—its strength and its gossamer lightness. Then look carefully at the frame work of the seed pods that shoot up from the dandelion. Human fingers cannot approach them in structure. They are exquisite and must come from the hand of God. There is a limit to the perfection of everything that is made by man, but there is none of the works of nature. The finest cambric needle looks like a blunt polated file under the microscope, but the point of the bee's sting is invisible. I wish that the young folks would sometimes stop and think and study nature. It would refine them in thought and feeling and excite a reverence for their Creator.

How beautifully the great poets wrote about flowers. One says, "The humblest flower that blooms sometimes gives thought too deep for tears." "And 'tis my faith that every flower enjoys the air it breathes." Some flowers seem vain and some are modest. From my window I see the rainbow cannas and the proud and lofty dahlias strutting to the morning sun and not far away are the humble violets half hiding from the light. Tennyson says, "Any nose can ravage the scent of a flower, but only the pure in heart have a right to." I am an early riser, and every bright morning I visit the garden and inspect the flowers that the night has opened and cut enough for a fresh vase at the breakfast table. The neighbors' chickens annoy me, for my garden is their feeding ground and they scratch the barn yard manure from my plants. So on yesterday I got some chicken wire and stretched it along the fence. But I forgot to shut the gate and they came in, and when I got after them they put their heads through the meshes and got fast. I had fun with those chickens and they will not come back any more. The gardens are fine this fall. The second crop of beans and potatoes are on hand. Turnip greens and mustard abound. A few tomatoes are still left, and my good neighbor, Yarbrough, the preacher, sends us some of his fine ones every few days. His Crimson Whirlwind is the finest variety I have ever seen. Verily the lines have fallen to us in pleasant places. Day unto day uttereth speech and night unto night showeth knowledge. Miss Stone will be rescued, I reckon, not because she is a missionary in a barbarous country, but because she is an American woman. The best opinion is that she had no business going there. Our people have got more sense and are not drumming up women for missionaries to uncivilized countries. It is strange what a passion some people have for long distance charity. The statistics show 65,000 arrests in Boston the last fiscal year, and yet Boston sends missionaries to Turkey and preachers and teachers for the negroes in the south. Georgia has only 330 white convicts in her penitentiary, while Massachusetts, with only a little larger population, has 1,600, and New York state, with three times the population of Georgia, has 3,600 convicts, besides numerous reformatories with several thousand inmates. The truth is, that every state and every large city has enough of the lawless, the ignorant and the destitute to care for, and it is mistaken charity to overlook them and hunt for misery afar off. But we are getting along fairly well in this blessed land and have much to be thankful for that our northern brethren have not. May the Lord bless and guide the president is our prayer. The south does not expect him to Tylerize his party on the protective tariff or any other republican principle, but it does expect him to appoint the best men to office, regardless of their politics. And if his party kicks and threatens as the whigs did John Tyler, let him say as Tyler said to Clay and others, "Gentleman, you cannot scare me. My back is against the wall and I will veto these bills." Tyler was a noble man and a conscientious statesman, but he was too pure a man to please either party, and, of course, was not nominated for the next presidency. That may be Roosevelt's fate. We shall see.—Bill Arp, in Atlanta Constitution.

The extent to which irrigation has been carried by private enterprise in some portions of the West may be a revelation to those in other portions of the country whose impressions that little in this line has been done may have been gathered from the reports of the persistent agitation for Government aid in this work. Nebraska alone has 3924 miles of irrigating canals, those ditches existing in fifty-four of the ninety counties in the State. One county has 386 miles of irrigating canals, and in several other counties the mileage is from one to two hundred. These ditches have been dug at an estimated cost o. $4,773,984, and they bring water to nearly two million acres of land. The fact that the increase in value of these lands, due to irrigation alone, is estimated by the State Engineer at about $17,000,000, is a good argument for the contention that the lands to be irrigated should bear all the cost of the improvement. A profit of $17,000,000 from an expenditure of less than $5,000,000 is good business.

The relation of the railroads to famines in India is treated exhaustively by The Friend of India in a recent issue. This journal blames the Indian Government for permitting the exportation of grain to such large extent. Something, it declares, should have been done to stop this. It says at the conclusion of a severe arraignment: "That a country the population of which are mainly dependent upon agriculture for their subsistence, which is even ordinarily liable to drought, and which can not import food except at famine prices, can economically or safely export its surplus production from year to year without restraint of any sort, is a proposition which seems to us, on the face of it, little less than insane."

SCIENCE AND INDUSTRY.

There is to be a rival to margarine as a substitute for butter, according to the British Consul-General at Marseilles. He says it is to be called "vegetaline," and is nothing else than the oil extracted from coprah (dried cocoanut); refined, and with all smell and taste neutralized, it becomes like sweet lard.

A London paper announces that the sum of $7,500 has been placed at the disposal of Professors Haeckel, Conrad and Fraas, of Jena, Halle and Stuttgart, respectively, as a prize for the best work on the theme "What do we learn from the principles of the theory of heredity in reference to the inner political development and legislation of States?" Manuscripts must be in German and are to be delivered to Professor Haekel not later than Dec. 1, 1902.

At the Hodbarrow Mines, at Millom, on the Cumberland coast, England, work is being carried out to enable mining to proceed still further under the sea. The company's first lease only extended to ordinary high-water mark on the south. Through the surface caving in when ore was extracted, it was necessary to leave a barrier of 360 feet wide, to protect the mines, as the sea would otherwise have filled the hollows on the surface and eventually have flooded the mine. This barrier was ultimately found to contain over 5,000,000 tons of ore. A second sea wall going beyond the older one has been commenced.

The wholesale slaughter of kangaroos for their valuable hides has resulted in the practical extinction of these remarkable animals except in the remoter regions of Australia, and most visitors make their only experience of the continent's typical quadrupeds in the zoological gardens of the principal cities. In the "back blocks," as the interior parts of Australia are called, they are still to be found in considerable numbers, and afford exciting sport to the hunter. The tribe of Australian kangaroos includes, besides these animals proper, a constantly dwindling succession of related species—wallaroos, wallabies, paddymelons, and so on, ending with the diminutive and dainty kangaroo rat.

Everybody has observed the habit that some insects have of hovering or dancing on the air, generally in a group, with every manifestation of enjoyment. There is a species of two-winged flies that are particularly fond of this sport, for sport it undoubtedly is. They assemble in some spot sheltered from the wind, and indulge in their dance for hours at a time. Their motions consist of alternate rising and falling in periods of a few seconds, and over a distance varying from one foot to four. They become so much interested in the dance that they cannot be scattered. If disturbed for a moment they at once reassemble, and continue the sport as if nothing had interfered with them. Much has been written about this habit, but the naturalists agree, we believe, in considering it real play.

According to a paper recently read by Dr. Aron before the Berlin Medical society the inhalation of oxygen for the relief and cure of certain lung and heart affections, in which it is commonly recommended, is of little value. The atmosphere, he said, contained a sufficient proportion of oxygen to saturate the haemoglobin of the blood, and as the haemoglobin when saturated was, of course, unable to absorb more oxygen inhalations of oxygen were evidently useless. He had found that the results of practical experience were in accordance with these views. The few instances in which the oxygen seemed beneficial were cases of dyspnoae (difficulty in breathing), in cardiac and pulmonary diseases, but the improvement was maintained only while the inhalations were actually in progress. In the treatment of apparent death from drowning artificial respiration was just as efficacious. In poisoning by carbolic oxide and in rarefied air, where the amount of available oxygen was less than the normal, the administration of oxygen was desirable.

Apoplexy and Brain Workers.

The number of deaths from apoplexy daily among prominent business men is a matter for comment. It almost appears that the disease has a special predilection for brain workers who have passed the life meridian.

Some explanation for this may be made by taking into account the stress of mental work to which the ambitious and untiring American so willingly yields himself. The brain is the last organ that seemingly feels the strain, and the ultimate breakdown is usually more or less sudden.

The latter was particularly the case in the death of Bishop Littlejohn. For a long time the mine was being prepared for the final explosion. In a person of his years, temperate habits, vital force and persistent mental activity the gradual wear and tear upon the blood vessels of the brain directly invited the ultimate issue. The arterial supply was evidently quite extensively involved in the gradual degenerative process that occurs late in life. The hemorrhage was consequently quite extensive, involving the deeper portions of the centres, tearing their tissues and overwhelming pain and consciousness in a quick stroke.

Melancholy as is the fact, this mode of death is the best of all that are caused by apoplexy, and the patient is spared a life of subsequent misery and comparative helplessness while awaiting and dreading an inevitable ending.

REV. DR. TALMAGE.

DISCOURSE BY THE EMINENT DIVINE LAST SUNDAY.

Subject: The Way of Destruction—Pitfalls For the Unwary in the Great Cities—The Third Watch of the Night—A Drama in Five Acts.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—In this discourse Dr. Talmage describes some of the scenes to be witnessed late at night in the great cities and warns the unwary of many perils; text, Isaiah xxi. 11, "Watchman, what of the night?"

When night came down on Babylon, Nineveh and Jerusalem, they needed careful watching, otherwise the incendiary's torch might have been thrust into the very heart of the metropolitan splendor, or enemies, marching from the hills, might have forced the gates. All night long, on top of the wall and in front of the gates, might be heard the measured step of the watchman on his solitary beat; silence hung in air, save as some passer-by raised the question, "Watchman, what of the night?"

It is to me a deeply suggestive and solemn thing to see a man standing guard by night. It thrilled through me as at the gate of an arsenal in Charleston the question once smote me, "Who comes there?" followed by the sharp command, "Advance and give the countersign." Every moral teacher stands on picket or patrols the wall as watchman. His work is to sound the alarm, and whether it be in the first watch, in the second watch, in the third watch or in the fourth watch to be vigilant until the daybreak flings its "morning glories" of blooming cloud across the trellis of the sky.

The ancients divided their night into four parts—the first watch from 6 to 9, the second from 9 to 12, the third from 12 to 3 and the fourth from 3 to 6. I speak now of the city in the third watch, or from 12 to 3 o'clock.

I never weary of looking upon the life of the city in the first watch. That is the hour when the stores are closing. The laboring men, having quitted the scaffolding and the shop, are on their way home. It rejoices me to give them my seat in the city car. They have stood and hammered away all day. Their feet are weary. They are exhausted with the tug of work. They are mostly cheerful. With appetites sharpened on the swift turner's wheel and the carpenter's whetstone they seek the evening meal. The clerks, too, have broken away from the counter and with brain weary of the long line of figures, and the whims of those who go a-shopping seek the face of mother or wife and child. The streets are thronged with young men setting out from the great centres of bargain making. Let idlers clear the street and give right of way to the besweated artisans and merchants! They have earned their bread and are now on their way home to get it. The lights in full jet hang over 10,000 evening repasts—the parents at either end of the table, the children between. Thank God, "who setteth the solitary in families!"

A few hours later and all the places of amusement, good and bad, are in full tide. Lovers of art, catalogue in hand, stroll through the galleries and discuss the pictures. The ballroom is resplendent with the rich apparel of those who on either side of the white, glistening boards await the signal from the orchestra. Concert halls are lifted into enchantment with the warble of one songstress or swept out on a sea of tumultuous feeling by the blast of brazen instruments. Drawing rooms are filled with all gracefulness of apparel, with all sweetness of sound, with all splendor of manner. Mirrors are catching up and multiplying the scene until it seems as if in infinite corridors there were garlanded troops advancing and retreating. The outdoor air rings with laughter and with the moving to and fro of thousands on the great promenades. The dashing span, adrip with the foam of the long country ride, rushes past as you halt at the curbstone. Mirth revelry, beauty, fashion, magnificence, mingle in the great metropolitan picture until the thinking man goes home to think more seriously and the praying man to pray more earnestly. A beautiful and overwhelming thing is the city in the first and second watches of the night.

But the clock strikes 12, and the third watch has begun. The thunder of the city has rolled out of the air. The slightest sounds cut the night with such distinctness as to attract your attention. The tinkling of the bell of the street car in the distance and the baying of the dog. The stamp of a horse in the next street. The slamming of a saloon door. The hiccough of the drunkard. The shrieks of the steam whistle five miles away. Oh, how suggestive, my friends, the third watch of the night!

What a stupendous thought—a whole city at rest! Weary arm preparing for to-morrow's toil. Hot brain being cooled off. Rigid muscles relaxed. Excited nerves soothed. The white hair of the octogenarian in thin drifts across the pillow, fresh fall of flakes on snow already fallen. Childhood, with its dimpled hands thrown out on the pillow and with every breath taking in a new store of fun and frolic. Third watch of the night! God's slumberless eye will look. Let one great wave of refreshing slumber roll over the heart of the great town, submerging care and anxiety and worriment and pain. Let the city sleep.

But, my friends, be not deceived. There will be to-night thousands who will not sleep at all. Go up that dark alley, and be cautious where you tread lest you fall over the prostrate form of a drunkard lying on his own doorstep. Look about you, lest you feel the garroter's hug. Look through the broken window pane and see what you can see. You say, "Nothing." Then listen. What is it? "God help us!" No footlights, but tragedy ghastlier and mightier than Ristori or Edwin Booth ever enacted. No light, no fire, no bread, no hope. Shivering in the cold, they have had no food for twenty-four hours. You say, "Why don't they beg?" They do, but they get nothing. You say, "Why don't they deliver themselves over to the almshouse?" Ah, you would not ask that if you ever heard the bitter cry of a man or a child when told he must go to the almshouse. "Oh," you say, "they are vicious poor, and therefore they do not deserve our sympathy!" Are they vicious? So much more need they your pity. The Christian poor. God helps them.

Pass on through the alley. Open the door. "Oh," you say, "it is locked!" No, it is not locked. It has never been locked. No burglar would be tempted to go in there to steal anything. The door is never locked. Only a broken chair stands against the door. Shove it back. Go in. Strike a match. Now look. Beastliness and rags. See those glaring eyeballs. Be careful now what you say. Do not utter any insult, do not utter any suspicion, if you value your life. What is that red mark on the wall? It is the mark of a murderer's hand! Look at those two eyes rising up out of the darkness and out from the straw in the corner, coming toward you, and as they come near you your light goes out. Strike another match. Ah, this is a babe, not like those beautiful children presented in baptism. This little one never smiled. It never will smile. A flower flung on an awfully barren beach. O Heavenly Shepherd, fold that little one in Thy arms! Wrap around you your shawl or your coat tighter, for the cold wind sweeps through.

Strike another match. Ah, is it possible that the scarred and bruised face of that young woman ever was looked into by maternal tenderness? Utter no scorn; Utter no harsh word. No ray of hope has dawned on that brow for many a year. No ray of hope ever will dawn on that brow. But the light has gone out. Do not strike another light. It would be a mockery to kindle another light in such a place as that. Pass out and pass down the street.

Do you know it is in this third watch of the night that criminals do their worst work? It is the criminals' watch. At half past 8 o'clock you will find them in the drinking saloon, but toward 12 o'clock they go to their garrets, they get out their tools, then they start on the street. Watching on either side for the police, they go to their work of darkness. This is a burglar, and the false key will soon touch the store lock; this is an incendiary, and before morning there will be a light on the sky and a cry of "Fire! Fire!" This is an assassin, and to-morrow morning there will be a dead body in one of the vacant lots.

During the daytime these villains in our cities lounge about, some asleep and some awake, but when the third watch of the night arrives, their eye keen, their brain cool, their arm strong, their foot fleet to fly or pursue, they are ready. Many of these poor creatures were brought up in that way. They were born in a thieves' garret. Their childish toy was a burglar's dark lantern. The first thing they remember was their mother handaging the brow of their father, struck by the police club. They began by robbing boys' pockets, and now they have come to dig the underground passage to the cellar of the bank and are preparing to blast the gold vault.

Just so long as there are neglected children of the street, just so long we will have these desperadoes. Some one wishing to make a good Christian point and to quote a passage of Scripture, expecting to get a Scriptural passage in answer, said to one of these poor lads, cast out and wretched, "When your father and your mother forsake you, who, then, will take you up?" And the boy said, "The perlice!"

I rejoice before God that never are sympathetic words uttered, never a prayer offered, never a Christian almsgiving indulged in but it is blessed. There is a place in Switzerland, I have been told, where the utterance of one word will bring back a score of echoes, and I have to tell you that a sympathetic word, a kind word, a generous word, a helpful word, uttered in the dark places of the town will bring back 10,000 echoes from heaven.

I could give you the history in a minute of one of the best friends I ever had. Outside of my own family I never had a better friend. He welcomed me to my home at the West. He was of splendid personal appearance, but he had an ardor of soul and a warmth of affection that made me love him like a brother. I saw men coming out of the saloons and gambling hells, and they surrounded my friend, and they took him at the weak point—his social nature—and I saw him going down, and I had a fair talk with him, for I never yet saw a man you could not talk with on the subject of his habits if you talked with him in the right way. I said to him, "Why don't you give up your bad habits and become a Christian?" I remember now just how he looked, leaning over his counter, as he replied: "I wish I could. Oh, sir, I should like to be a Christian, but I have gone so far astray I can't get back!" So the time went on. After awhile the day of sickness came. I was summoned to his sickbed. I hastened. It took me but a very few moments to get there. I was surprised as I went in. I saw him in his ordinary dress, fully dressed, lying on top of the bed. I gave him my hand, and he seized it convulsively and said: "Oh, how glad I am to see you! Sit down there." I sat down, and he said: "Mr. Talmage, just where you sit now my mother sat last night. She has been dead twenty years. Now, I don't want you to think I am out of my mind or that I am superstitious, but, sir, she sat there last night, and she said, 'Roswell, I wish you would do better, I wish you would do better.' I said: 'Mother, I wish I could do better. I try to do better, but I can't. Mother, you used to help me; why can't you help me now?' And, sir, I got out of bed, for it was a reality, and I went to her and threw my arms around her neck, and I said: 'Mother, I will do better, but you must help me. I can't do this alone.'" I knelt and prayed. That night his soul went to the Lord who made it.

Arrangements were made for the obsequies. The question was raised whether they should bring him to the church. Somebody said, "You cannot bring such a dissolute man as that into the church." I said: "You will bring him in church. He stood by me when he was alive, and I will stand by him when he is dead. Bring him." As I stood in the pulpit and saw them carrying the body up the aisle I felt as if I could weep tears of blood. On one side of the pulpit sat his little child of eight years, a sweet, beautiful little girl, that I had seen him hug convulsively in his better moments. He put on her all jewels and gave her all pictures and toys, and then he would go away, as if hounded by an evil spirit, to his cups and the house of iniquity, a fool to the correction of the stocks. She looked up wonderingly; she knew not what it all meant; she was not old enough to understand the sorrow of an orphan. On the other side sat the men who ruined him. They were the men who had poured the wormwood into the orphan's cup; they were the men who had bound him hand and foot. I knew them. How did they seem to feel? Did they weep? No. Did they say, "What a pity that so generous a man should be destroyed?" No. Did they sigh repentingly over what they had done? No; they sat there, looking as vultures look at the carcass of a lamb whose heart they have ripped out. So they sat and looked at the coffin lid, and I told them the judgment of God upon those who had destroyed their fellows. Did they reform? I was told they were in the places of iniquity that night after my friend was laid in Oakwood cemetery, and they blasphemed and they drank. Oh, how merciless men are, especially after they have destroyed you! Do not look to men for comfort or help.

But there is a man who will not reform. He says, "I won't reform." Well, then, how many acts are there in a tragedy? I believe there are five acts in a tragedy.

Act the first of the tragedy: A young man starting off from home; parents and sisters weeping to have him go; wagon rising over the hill; farewell kiss flung back. Ring the bell and let the curtain fall.

Act the second: The marriage altar; full organ, bright lights; long white veil trailing through the aisle; prayer and congratulation and exclamation of "How well she looks!"

Act the third: A woman waiting for staggering steps; old garments struck into the broken window pane; marks of hardship on the face; the biting of the nails of bloodless fingers; neglect and cruelty and despair. Ring the bell and let the curtain drop.

Act the fourth: Three graves in a dark place—grave of the child that died for lack of medicine, grave of the wife that died of a broken heart, grave of the man that died of dissipation. Oh, what a blasted heath with three graves! Plenty of weeds, but no flowers. Ring the bell and let the curtain drop.

Act the fifth: A destroyed soul's eternity; no light, no music; blackness of darkness forever. But I cannot look any longer. Woe! woe! I close my eyes to this last act of the tragedy. Quick, quick! Ring the bell and let the curtain drop. "Rejoice, O young man, in thy youth, and let thy heart rejoice in the days of thy youth, but know thou that for all these things God will bring you into judgment." "There is a way that seemeth right to a man, but the end thereof is death."

RAILROAD NEWS.

If reports be true the 'Frisco Sys has obtained control of the Kan City, Memphis and Birmingham road, and the Seaboard Air Line is interested in recent purchases and the purchases mean the coming of the Seaboard Air Line and its connection with the Kansas City, Mem & Birmingham railroad. This will give the Seaboard Air Line its long desired entrance into Birming and it will also give the western and its prayed-for outlet to the East. The deal Birmingham gets another through line from east to west and another outlet for its freight.

FIRE BUGS.

Monday morning an attempt was made to burn the plant of the Hunts Lumber Co., and though the buildings were saved from total destruction, the loss will amount to considerable. Fire was applied to the mill in two places by the incendiaries, and while the fire department was at work some unknown person dropped a line of hose through with an axe.

EUFAULA BANK SUSPENDS.

On Monday the comptroller of the currency received a telegram announcing a suspension of the Eufaula National Bank. The comptroller appointed National Bank Examiner Jorge R. DeSaussure as temporary receiver. The condition of the bank shown by its report at the close of business September 30, 1901, was as follows: Liabilities: $360,213, of which $125,072 was borrowed money. Resources: $360,213. It seems the bank suffered losses on loans, which impaired the capital stock about 65 per cent.

AFTER OIL.

The Mobile Development Co. has purchased or leased 5,500 acres of land and will begin boring for oil about November 1st. Derricks are now building and one well is down some distance. Gov. Johnston is interested in another oil company there which will develop the value of oil claims in and about the gulf city.

CIRCUS MAN KILLED.

J. C. B. Mattox, agent of the Ringling Bros.' circus, met death Monday morning at New Castle. He was crossing the yards of the track of the L. & N. as trains were moving. It seems he had gotten out of the way of a train and stopped in front of another, and before the engine could be stopped was caught under the wheels. Those who witnessed the accident say the train men were not to blame. The deceased was about 25 years of age, married and lived in Chicago.

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTARY FOR OCTOBER 27.

Subject: Joseph and His Brethren, Gen. xlv. 1-15.—Golden Text, Rom. viii. 31.—Memory Verses, 4-7.—Commentary on the Day's Lesson.

Introduction. The chapter, which contains the unveiling of the plot, illustrates the mysterious providences in one of its most striking forms in the whole account. The events which the brethren were conducting that they were strong in recent power and they thought themselves free and thereby deceived themselves. It was necessary to cut their hearts should be made mellow with overmuch anxiety. Hypocrite and finely wrought is the lesson he makes for them. What a lesson concerning his father shows the personal feelings of a benevolent character.

1. "Joseph." Joseph is now (the) ruler. He had been in Egypt two years and half-been governor of the nine years. "Could not refrain." The Hebrew word is very emphatic. It signifies forbearance with difficulty. "Cause every man to go out." Literally, "Joseph could not restrain himself." The sovereign magistrate gives way to the feelings of the moment and cries out, "Let every man go out." That is all. Exit the Egyptians. The was in a good sense free and full. "While Joseph was made himself known unto his brethren." Joseph was the first of the brethren to recognize the author of the brethren.

2. "And he wept." Joseph's heart was full of tender emotions. This is the usual way in which Oriental excess expresses itself. "Hear." This may mean (1) "Hear and obey." Joseph may have spoken within (2) "Hear" in the sense of "Let it be known that the report was brought." "Pharaoh's house." Verse 16.

3. "I am Joseph." The natural question, "Is my father yet alive?" Joseph could not answer it. The sight of his brethren overcome the long remembered feelings and all at once strike the recognition of the brothers. "Troubled." They trembled their terror he shrinked from as they could from a reward. The memory of the sins they had committed against Joseph came upon them with great force. They were greatly troubled to find their brother on an Egyptian throne. They knew they were in his power. If he should treat them as they had treated him there would be no hope for them.

4. "Come near to me." He invites them to a free favor. So our Joseph in the gospel bids us come to Him. The gospel message is, "Come unto Me." It is a free entreaty of love. "Sold into Egypt." It was impossible to evade allusion to the early wickedness, but this Joseph does in a spirit not of angry upbraiding, but of elevated piety and tender charity. Christ reminded Peter of his sin in order to show how full and complete was the forgiveness. John 21: 15-17.

5. "Be not grieved." He spoke of their having sold him, not to wound their feelings, but to convince them of his identity, and then to reassure their minds by the agency of an overruling providence in his exile and present lot. "Did send me." God used their evil to accomplish His purpose. He did not make their evil. He has a thousand ways of accomplishing His ends. "To preserve life." Not only your lives, but the Egyptians and the people of the neighboring countries. The principles laid down by Joseph are: 1. That while sinners are encouraged to hope in God's mercy, they are left without excuse for their sin. 2. That God is able to make use of the wicked actions of wicked men for the advancement of His work.

6. "Neither be earing." "Shall neither plowing nor harvest." (R. "Ear" is an old English word meaning to plow.

7. "Great deliverance." That is, that you, who are now but a handful, escaping the danger, might grow into a vast multitude.

8. "Father to Pharaoh." "His principal counselor of state, and to have the dignity, respect and power of a father with him."

9. "Go up to my father." "He desires that his father might speedily be made glad with the tidings of his life and honor."

10. "Land of Goshen." Probably a district had been allotted to Joseph by the king of Egypt, else we can scarcely think he could have promised it so positively, without first obtaining Pharaoh's consent. Goshen was a part of Egypt east of the Nile, well watered and fit for cattle and therefore most proper for the Israelites, not only for present use, but also that in God's time they might suffer the least disadvantage return to Canaan. It was very fertile, for it was stated to be the best of the land of Egypt.

11. "Nourish thee." It is the duty of children, if the necessity of their parents does at any time require it, to support and supply them to the utmost of their ability. "And thy household." In verse 18 Joseph speaks of "their household," showing that each of the patriarchs was now his own family, besides the still large family belonging to Jacob.

12. "My mouth." Up to this time Joseph had spoken to them through an interpreter, but now he speaks in the Hebrew tongue.

13. "All my glory." He enjoins them not out of pride, but from love to his father, knowing what pleasure it would give him. It would also be an assurance to his father that the promises made would be carried out, and it would make his return easier for the ten sons to confess their crime and deceit of the past. "Ye haste." It had been twenty-two years since Joseph had seen his father, and it was only natural for him to ask them to hasten their journey.

14. "His brother." Benjamin was the only one who was full brother to Joseph.

15. "Kissed all his brethren." In token of love and forgiveness. "Talked with him." "They were now at ease as to the past forgiven, the present full of joy, and they could now tell the brother things Joseph wished to know about the father and learn his history from him and repeat the marvelous tale to their children."

It is an interesting fact that a wireless message can be sent through fogs and storms, and is not only to be affected by electrical disturbances of the atmosphere, and seriously even by those. The effect of the earth's curvature is also said to materially interfere with the work. That we shall at some not far distant date communicate through the air with Europe from ship-to-shore stations, so that the breaking of the connection will be of no account, is by no means a wild dream. The ocean liners are already being equipped with the necessary apparatus.

New Orleans insurance experts tell the people that the city may be burned down any time if the present methods of handling oil are kept up.

LATEST STATE NEWS.

RAILROAD NEWS.

It appears to be true the 'Frisco System has obtained control of the Kansas City, Memphis and Birmingham railroad and the Seaboard Air Line is interested in recent purchases and the purchases mean the coming of the Seaboard Air Line and its connections with the Kansas City, Memphis & Birmingham railroad. This will give the Seaboard Air Line its long desired entrance into Birmingham and it will give the western and the prairie states an outlet to the East. So the new Birmingham gets another through line from east to west and another outlet for its freight.

FIRE BUGS.

Monday morning an attempt was made to burn the plant of the Huntsville Lumber Co., and though the buildings were saved from total destruction, the loss will amount to considerable. Fire was applied to the lumber while the incendiary was at work with the fire department and at work with the unknown person dropped and ran off in the through with the fire.

REPUBLIC BANK SUSPENDS.

On Monday the Comptroller of the Currency received a telegram announcing the suspension of the Republic National Bank of Louisville. MAN ON THE CORNER of the Sights He Saw, and Some he Saw Not.

For the life of me I cannot see why any white man can hold up to in the new constitution. A good many others I was in favor of the holding of the convention, because we were fearful the convention might do the convention was held and of the dreadful things of which we were scared happened and they went to work and made a new constitution which unquestionably is decided improvement on the old one. I want to say that can be said, and therefore I want the new constitution and shall vote for it.

It seems to me that the man who will take a copy of the new constitution and sit down and carefully read it—not with his mind already made up that it is bad and he is going to find it, but with a determination to find out for himself what it means—that man, I believe, will become a better and wiser man, and will then and there make up his mind to vote for the new constitution.

There is always two sides to every question and no man ever knows anything by hearing both sides. For my part I would rather go and hear a man talk on the opposite side to which I was than to hear one who was in sympathy with my views. It is pleasant to have your friends endorse your opinions, but if we are both looking the same way you are pretty sure to see things in the same light. But if you hear a man talk upon the other side it will give you new ideas, and if you are a sensible man, if the eye is good, you will alter your opinion. It is the worst way to hear only one side of any question. Hear both and then form your own opinion.

W. L. Kemp of Waugh spent Sunday here with friends.

DIED

Mrs. Boeckholdt passed peacefully away on Monday at her home near Clanton. The funeral took place on Tuesday at the Mills cemetery. A good woman has gone to her reward. Our sympathies are with the bereaved family.

Death of Mr N. L. Meron y

The home of Bro. N. L. Meroney was made very sad by his being hurt with a piece of broken saw in a saw mill near Vine Hill on Oct. 16, 1901. His remains were brought to his home at Kingston and then carried to Pleasant Grove church, where they were interred with masonic honors by Jemison Lodge. He had been a member of the Baptist church ever since 1876. Resolved, that in his death the masonic fraternity has suffered a great loss. We extend to the bereaved wife and children our condolence and commend them to the care of God who has recently called our brother from his labors below to his reward above, and that this be sent to the Banner for publication.

LET THE PEOPLE RULE

VOL. X — CLANTON, ALA. THURSDAY OCTOBER 31, 1901 — NO. 3

MAN ON THE CORNER

He Sees What He Saw, and Some He Saw Not.

At the last election I cannot see why some man can find to write in the new constitution. As good citizens I was opposed to the adopting of the constitution, but when we were afraid of what the convention might do, the convention was held and all of the dreadful things of which we were scared happened. Then they went to work and made a new constitution which I supposed would be decided unfavorable to the people. I want what is fair and honest, and therefore I want the new constitution shall vote for it.

Seems to me that the man who makes a copy of the new constitution and sits down and carefully reads it—not with his mind already made up that it is bad and he is going to be a determinate to find in it himself what it may or may not contain, I believe, he will be a better and wiser man, and will come out and there make up his mind to vote for the new constitution.

There always two sides to every question and I do not know man ever thoroughly considering both sides, would not rather go and hear a man who is on the opposite side which I was than to hear one who was in sympathy with my views. It is pleasant to have your own views and opinions, but when we are both looking the same way you are pretty sure to see things in the same light. But if we can talk upon the other side we may get new ideas, and if you are a reasonable man, if they are good, you will alter your opinion. It is the worst way to be on only one side of any question. Hear both and then form your own opinion.

TO CURE A COLD IN ONE DAY

Editor Banner—Some of the opponents of the new constitution ridicule the idea that there is any menace to the white people, growing out of the negro vote, but in days past the cloud that threatened our horizon from this quarter was dark and ominous, and it is a true saying that "history repeats itself". The time has been when the halls of Alabama legislature were afflicted with as many as forty negro members at a time, selling their votes for a bottle of whiskey or a mule, and under the leadership of vicious white men, adopting the enactments of laws, that inflicted millions of dollars of indebtedness on our State, that we are now paying, and will pay for fifty years to come. Under the constitution now in existence a similar state of affairs might be inaugurated; all they need is courage and leadership. For a third of a century the negro has voted in Alabama, and always votes solidly against the interest and welfare of the state. His racial instincts and low moral status, prompt him to ally himself against everything that is elevating.

Alabama, in round numbers, contains 51,000 square miles, with a population of 1,000,000 whites, and 827,000 negroes. In thirteen central counties of the State, in one of which is the capitol, is embraced 9786 square miles, or one-fifth of the State, and is the most productive portion of it. In this area there reside 373,000 negroes, and 100,000 whites, or three-seventh of the black population, and one-tenth of the white population. 433,000 blacks, and 900,000 whites live in the other counties of the State, containing 42,000 square miles. In eight counties of the fifty-three, the white and black population is nearly equal, and in forty other counties of the fifty-three, the negro holds the balance of power. In only five counties he cuts no figure. So in 61 counties of the 66 of the State he holds the balance of power and may become a potent factor for evil, consider these facts and act the part of wisdom. Restrain him and treat him kindly, and he becomes a useful citizen. Remove restraint, and he reverts to barbarism and lust. The adoption of the new constitution injured no race and order under constitutions fixed by law, rejection, and white supremacy can only be maintained by continuing those method, which are repugnant to our feelings, and justified only by the intolerable alternative, of total submission to the rule and inferior and servile race.

Is Your Life Worth 25 Cents?

Consumptives, we know that you have been disappointed many times, but make one more effort to be cured. Gooch's Mexican Syrup has cured thousands and it will cure you. Consumption is the result of the food material that should go to support the body and sustain life being absorbed and thrown off in tuberculous matter. To overcome this waste of vital force and restore the nourishment to the system in its natural course, is to cure. This is accomplished by Gooch's Mexican Syrup. It controls coughs, night sweats, spitting of blood, soreness in chest, inflamed throat and lungs, difficulty of breathing, heavy coughs accompanied with expectoration and parched lips. We know you have been disappointed many times, but make one more effort to save yourself. You can buy a bottle of Gooch's Mexican Syrup for 25 cents. It cures a simple cough as if by magic, and is the best remedy for whooping cough.

For inflamed eyes, sore throat, sore mouth, use Dr. Tichenor's Antiseptic. Pleasant to taste and smell and will give quick relief.

UNIVERSITY SCHOOL
PLANTERSVILLE, ALA.

Is a training and strictly private school for boys and girls.

Correlated to the University of Alabama and to the Alabama Polytechnic Institute.

Has fitted more pupils for college, more pupils for teaching, more pupils for advanced business positions than all other schools in Chilton county combined. It is the only school in Chilton county whose pupils have a First Grade Certificate under the present school laws.

Its course of instruction is the best arranged, its methods the soundest, most thorough and up-to-date; its scholarship the most advanced; its location, buildings, grounds, furniture, equipments, the most attractive and best adapted of any school in Chilton county.

Its pupils enter any college in the South on certificate of the Principal. It deals honestly with the public, adheres to professional courtesy, and performs its promises. Its mission is to build up, not to pull down. It is not, as some are, a mere common school called "College," "Normal," etc., by which misnomers the uninformed are misled.

$101 pays all expenses of board, tuition, fuel, lights, etc., for session of nine months. School opens September 25, 1901. Write for catalogue.

Of course it is perfectly natural that a horse laugh came up from the pastures when announcement was made that an electric vehicle company has failed for $5,000,000.

The vanity of human intelligence seeks various outlets. One man seeks to devise a perfect government and another is in search of perpetual motion. Neither has succeeded as yet, and both are still hopeful in spite of the strictly practical people who shake their heads and declare it can't be done.

A novel way of administering justice and bestowing impartial punishment on juvenile offenders was shown in a Chicago court the other day. Two boys were on trial for fighting, accompanied by their respective mothers. The Justice simply had the mothers swap sons and then administer spankings. The punishment the urchins received was vigorous.

Naturally the ambitious young Canadian, hungry for metropolitan opportunities, goes to New York, or Philadelphia, or Chicago, or Boston. The drift in this direction is as inevitable as that of bright Scotchmen to London. And so Canada loses every year her best brains and her most vigorous energy, says the Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post.

The professional Anarchists in the United States have almost without exception been of foreign birth. If the family history of the individuals forming this body of malcontents could be traced, it is probable that they would prove to belong to a class of unfortunates who have passed through generations of poverty, depravity and perhaps oppression, with the result that they have, perhaps, inherited a bent of mind which is distinctly abnormal. It is possible, even probable, that such a bent would not be recognized by the psychologist, the medical student, or the alienist as a distinct form of mental disease. When the mind reaches the point of depravity at which it is unable to distinguish the difference between right and wrong—nay, more, that it mistakes wrong for right, even to the point of conceiving the murder of an innocent and unoffending individual to be an act of heroism—what further proof do we need of mental aberration? queries the Scientific American.

Perhaps the most curious result of a popular health fad is the sharp conflict of opinion which it has excited among the physicians. Some members of the profession, adopting the popular theory, maintain that the barefoot habit not only is healthful, but insures the proper development and consequent beauty of the exposed member; while others hold that it is a dangerous and needlessly risky experiment, which, in any event, must produce large, ungainly, splay feet. In support of their theory they argue that the feet of savage races are generally of vast and unsightly proportions. This is a question for the anthropologists; but any one with eyes in his head may be convinced that there are plenty of well formed feet among the shoeless urchins of the cities. The point is not at all likely that the world in general will desert the shoemakers; but it may be asserted very confidently that it is better to wear no shoe at all than one that is too tight or too narrow.

The succession of the Vice-President to the Chief Magistracy of the Republic gives no occasion for the convention of Congress. The notion that an extra session would or should be called is probably the consequence of a recollection of the public mind that existed at the time of the demise of President Garfield, when the question arose as to who would succeed in the event of the death of President Arthur and nobody, not even the most eminent of the interpreters of the Constitution, could give an answer. The law since then passed by Congress leaves no room for uncertainty on this point. It included into the line of succession to the Presidency the members of the Cabinet in the following order: The Secretary of State, the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of War, the Attorney-General, the Postmaster-General, the Secretaries of the Interior, of the Navy Department and of Agriculture. Under this law the possibility of an interregnum, so to speak, is too remote to be considered.

SAFE ROBBERY.

One of the boldest safe robberies occurred at Berea, O., Saturday. The hardware store of Lawrence & Brightman was entered, the large safe wrecked and the robbers made good their escape, carrying with them booty of more than $100,000 in value. Baldwin university bears the heaviest loss. C. C. Brightman, the junior member of the firm, is treasurer and a trustee of Baldwin university, and all of the available papers of the institution, which were left in Brightman's custody, were kept in the safe. Bonds, deeds, notes and mortgages of the university aggregating $100,000 in value were secured by the robbers. A diligent search for the thieves has been instituted, but as yet no clew has been established. A singular fact is that the explosion was heard a half mile north and more than that distance southwest of the center of the town, while those residing in the business districts were unaware of it. The force of the explosion was terrific. The heavy safe doors were twisted from their hinges as if made of paper and large pieces were imbedded in the walls of the building one section weighing 50 pounds being blown into an adjoining room. Six men are believed to have been engaged in the affair.

WILL KEEP IT AWHILE.

Suspicious circumstances surrounding a big shipment of arms and ammunition on the Chilian steamer Lea, now lying in San Francisco, has led to action by the United States officials to prevent any possibility of the warlike goods reaching the hands of Central American insurgents. The cases contained 4,500 Remington rifles and bayonets and 2,500,000 ball cartridges. The bills of lading show that the guns and ammunition came to this city from El Paso, where they are supposed to have been reshipped from Mexico. The ship's manifest stated that the munitions of war were for Salvador, and to be landed at Acajutilla. The consul-general of San Salvador here disclaims knowledge of the shipment, though Schwartz Brothers, the ostensible shippers, claim to be acting for Bloom Brothers, of New York, who are agents for the government of Salvador. The steamer will be held pending an investigation by the United States authorities.

FOUR MINERS ENTOMBED.

A bad cave-in occurred in the Highland Boy, at Salt Lake City, Utah, Friday night, in which four miners were entombed. After working for twelve hours rescuers succeeded in reaching and getting two of the men out alive. The other two miners are still entombed. They are still alive, however, for their signals can be heard distinctly by the rescuers, who are bending every effort to rescue their comrades.

IRRIGATION SCHEME.

Buffalo Bill and Nate Salisbury are at the head of a company of eastern men who are preparing to build a power and irrigation canal 45 miles in length, which will irrigate 100,000 acres of land in the vicinity of Garland and Cody, Wyo. The canal will have its source at the Shoshone river near Cody, where the power plant will be located. The cost of the power plant and canal will aggregate $700,000.

COTTON SWINDLE.

L. J. Guymas, of Mexia, Texas, and W. J. Hume, of New Orleans, who, in 1896, made a contract with a Liverpool firm to ship them cotton, were convicted in the federal court, at Waco, Texas, Saturday. The cotton was shipped with drafts attached to bills of lading which were cashed. When the cotton was examined it was found to be linters. The Liverpool people are said to have lost $50,000.

RUSSIA AND JAPAN.

According to advices received by the steamer Olympia, arrived from the Orient, three more Japanese sealing schooners have been seized by Russia for sealing within the limit around the Copper and other Russian islands. This makes six schooners and a boat's crew of another which have been seized this year, or about seventy-one men, most of them Japanese, but some Americans and Canadians.

ALABAMA RAILROADS.

The annual report of the Alabama railroad commission is issued. The commission has secured reductions in freight tariffs on coal, and the general coal rate in Alabama is lower now than ever before. Many improvements in station accommodations have been brought about. For the year ended, June 30, 1901, the gross earnings of railroads in Alabama were $21,778,220.26; the operating expenses $16,076,838.08, leaving the net earnings $5,696,382.18. The average gross earnings per mile were $4,353.74. The operating expenses per mile were $3,198.05, leaving net earnings per mile $1,155.74. The total mileage of main line tracks is 4,145.44; double track 10.06 and of sidings 845.53; total railroad mileage, 5,001,03. During the year ending June 30, 1901, 151.77 miles of new track were built.

FRUITHURST'S PLUM.

The Fruithurst Inn and 15,00 acres of town lots and vineyard have been sold to Dr. Charles Elbert Eastman, of Old Orchard, Me., and that gentleman will establish a sanitarium there. The hotel will be open December 1st, at which time Dr. Eastman will bring fifty invalids from the North with him. The hotel contains eighty rooms and is a large, handsome and commodious structure. It cost $40,000. It was the property of the original Fruithurst Co., as also were the vineyards which Dr. Eastman acquires. He expects to make a winter resort of Fruithurst. It is understood that ample capital is back of Dr. Eastman and that his coming means the imparting of fresh vigor into the vineyard city.

POSSIBLY SUICIDE.

Rev. Otto P. Lenk, of Cullman, who was a member of the German immigration convention, while handling a pistol Friday, discharged it while lying on a lounge. The ball entered his left breast inflicting a fatal wound. About three months ago his fiancee, Miss Minnie Hartung, died and he has been brooding over it ever since. He leaves a mother and two brothers in Patterson, N. J., Mr. Link was only 25 and greatly beloved by his congregation, and his loss will be keenly felt.

BURIED TREASURE.

Jerry Sanders, a negro farm worker of Limestone county, in making an excavation for a cellar dug up an iron chest 23x14 inches, of antique pattern and massive. The chest had to be broken open with siege hammers, and was found to contain a large number of coins, all of them of dates more than a hundred years ago. There were also several pieces of silver plate. The chest was found at a depth of five feet, the spot evidently having been the foundation of a house.

CAUGHT BY THE CARS.

Burley Nabors, a resident of Montevalla, employed in the mines at Maylene, was caught by the cars going down the slope Friday night, and it is reported probably fatally hurt. The cars caught him in a stooping position and his back was broken.

THE FEUD CONTINUES.

Eugene Wall was shot to death Saturday by unknown parties near San Antonio, Tex., and the county is in a furore. Wall is the sixth man to die in the Wall-Brooks feud and his faction has contributed five of the victims, two of them sheriffs of the county. Wall was shot from ambush and fell within a few yards from where his brother was assassinated a few weeks ago. The first person to discover the body was his mother, and when the negro mail carrier came up she was sitting in the road nursing her dead boy's head.

ADMIRAL RESIGNS METROPOLITAN CLUB PRESIDENCY

GEN CHAFFEE ASKS FOR MORE MEN

Greeley Home from Philippines—Changes in Navy—Third Assistant Secretary of State Resigns—New Torpedo Boat.

The resignation of Admiral Dewey as president of the Metropolitan Club has caused a considerable flutter in Washington social circles. The Metropolitan is a most exclusive club, its membership numbering officers of army, navy and government officials. It is stated that Dewey resigned because he found the Schley court took so much of his time that he was unable to keep fully abreast of his club affairs. The true inwardness of the case, however, seems to be that he resigned on account of criticisms made against him by club men, who allege that his rulings in the Schley case were too favorable to Schley. There appears to be a strong sentiment against Schley in the club.

Sec. Long announces that Admiral A. S. Crowninshield, chief of the navigation bureau, would be detached from the position and take command of the European squadron next March, being relieved of his present duties by Admiral Henry C. Taylor. The secretary said that this plan had been arranged last April, when upon the expiration of Admiral Crowninshield's four year's commission as chief of the navigation bureau, he was recommissioned for another term. The date fixed was March 8, next, because on that day Admiral Crowninshield, who now holds the title ex-officio as head of navigation bureau, will become rear admiral in fact, through the ordinary course of retirement and promotion.

General Greely, chief of the United States signal service in Washington, returns to New York on Wednesday. General Greely expressed himself pleased to get back from the Philippines and has no intention of returning. During his stay there he completed a network of telegraph lines from one end of the archipelago to the other. The value of this installation was shown by the fact that over ten thousand messages a day were transmitted between the various military posts on the islands.

The estimates for the department of agriculture for the next fiscal year aggregate $4,789,540. This is against $3,862,420 for the current fiscal year, showing an increase of almost a million dollars for next year. This includes $10,000 for silk investigation, which is to be entered upon for the first time.

A cablegram has been received from General Chaffee at the war department asking that 600 recruits be sent at once to Manila to fill vacancies in several regiments. General Chaffee reports that the effective strength of the army in Northern Luzon is 8000 less now than on January 1.

It is understood here that Nicaragua, Honduras, San Salvador, Guatemala and Costa Rica have signed treaties for free trade and agree to arbitration of differences. They purpose holding an international congress every five years.

President Roosevelt was 44 years of age Sunday. According to the custom in the family the event was celebrated with a dinner, in which the children participated.

The last Congress appropriated $10,000 for examination and surveys for the location of four sites to be utilized as permanent maneuver grounds for the instruction of troops. Alabama members are making determined efforts to secure one of the locations.

The department is about to lose the services of Thomas W. Cridler, third assistant secretary of state. He has accepted the position of European commissioner of the Louisiana Purchase exposition. It is understood that Mr. Cridler's successor as third assistant secretary of state will be Herbert H. D. Pierce, at present secretary of embassy at St. Petersburg.

The civil service commission will no longer require female applicants for postoffice positions to hop on one foot for twelve feet as a test of physical endurance.

President Roosevelt will write his messages himself, doing away with the detailed statement of the affairs of each department. He will devote his message to only such topics as he chooses to lay particularly before the attention of Congress.

GARDEN AND FARM

THE SECRET OF SUCCESS

The Maryland Experiment Station has been for several years giving extra food and care to a herd of common cows and watching the results. The first year no material changes were made in average production and but little in individuals, but since that time there has been a steady improvement, and they suggest that the quality of dairy cow may not depend wholly on breeding, but that the feeding may influence. Long ago we said that the secret of success was to feed milk and feed for milk, feed for beef. While there may be a waste of time to feed and refine a cow of the beef breed to produce much milk or much butter, we believe that it can be done even with this breed if we would take a pure bred heifer calf and feed it that it would produce milk instead of increasing the quantity of beef. The report we have [illegible] whether the improvement [illegible] in quantity or quality of milk, it should expect it to be more than [illegible].—The Cultivator.

SUBSTITUTE FOR BONE

We see a great deal in the papers about feed for chickens. It is agreed that they should have a proper ration of grains, also meat in some form. Green cut bone is all right but we do not live near enough to the butchers to get what we should use. I want to tell how we do. Of course we use all the bones we have, but some years we do not have enough to feed all our chickens, for some times we keep more than others. If the bone supply is scarce we gather shells in the river. These we make hot enough to boil water when it is poured on them. They will then easily crumble. The fowls will eat them readily, and while we feed the shells we give them a feed, two or three times a week, of bran and shorts with a small lump of tallow for each fowl. Sometimes we use cracklings. I use tallow because it is cheaper. Of course we do not use so much grease in the summer only to break up hens wanting to set. We get good sharp sand for ten cents a wagon load.—E. J. Hart, in The Epitomist.

VALUE OF WOOD ASHES

Wood ashes should be carefully saved under shelter. They are rich in both potash and lime. When purchasing wood ashes do not overlook the fact that dry ashes absorb moisture from the atmosphere and the weight varies according to the weather. No estimate of wood ashes can be considered reliable, as much depends upon the kinds of wood from which they are obtained, but it is not far out of the way to claim that 100 pounds contain about forty pounds of lime, six pounds of potash and two pounds of phosphoric acid.

MANIPULATING BEES.

Any person with fairly steady nerves and some patience and courage can easily learn to control and manipulate bees. There are, it is true, a few exceptional individuals whose systems are particularly susceptible to the poison injected by the bee, so much so that serious effects follow a single sting. Such cases are, however, very rare. In most instances where care is not taken to avoid stings the system eventually becomes accustomed to the poison, so that the pain momentary pain a sting causes no inconvenience. To a certain extent the belief exists that bees have, without apparent cause, a violent dislike for some people, while others, without any effort, are received in their favor. The latter part if this proposition has a better foundation than the first part, for it is our actions, rather than any peculiarity of the individual himself, that anger the bees. Bees prefer, of course not to be disturbed, hence they usually keep guards at the lookout for intruders. When visitors approach the hives these guards are very apt to fly toward them as if to inquire whether harm is intended or not, and should the visitor not inspire them with fear by using smoke or some similar means, but should himself show fear and nervousness, he will be very likely to arouse their suspicions still further, even to anger them should he strike at them or endeavor to dodge their approach. Indeed, one not accustomed to the notes of bees is very likely, unconsciously, to dodge his head about when another buzzes uncomfortably close to his face. It may be a movement of but an inch or two, perhaps a quick jerk, and being noticed by the suspicious guard is resented; a sting follows, and yet the sufferer declares that he did nothing to provoke the attack, but that bees merely like him and always sting him when he approaches them. On the other hand, an equally unprotected person who moves about deliberately may generally, under the same circumstances, be let off without receiving a sting. It is in this case not so much what he does as what he does not do.

FARM DAIRYING.

"Is dairying profitable as a farm industry?" is the practical question proposed some time ago by a certain journal. My answer is unhesitatingly yes, if properly conducted. Let us see why it. Rightly considered, the cow is the very basis of agriculture. She converts her food into milk, butter and cheese for man's physical support. Her excrement manure is constantly enriching and building up the soil. Her calves are all the while replenishing the farmer's pockets with money if he sells them. If he does not sell them, it is only because he is confident of being able to make them more profitable to him by keeping them. All this, which amounts to a great deal, is always the inevitable result

While it may be a difficult task to breed and educate a herd to produce much milk, we have no doubt it can be done, even as we can breed a Jersey calf and fatten it and put on fat instead of butter fat in its milk. We have does not say anything about noticed was a decrease of milk, but we have found it noticeable in butter fat.—Exchange.

SUPPLY FOR BONE.

We read in the papers that it is agreed that a proper ration of bone should be in some form. Green cut bone, we do not all feed it, but the butchers to get rid of it. I want to tell how we give all the bones we can spare. For years we do not feed our chickens, but we keep more than we can supply is scarce. We gather them in the river. These, we make boil enough to boil water when we want to feed them. They will then crack easily. The fowls will eat them greedily. VALUE OF WOOD ASHES.

Wood ashes should be carefully saved as they are rich in both potash and lime. When purchasing wood ashes do not overlook the fact that they absorb moisture from the atmosphere and the weight varies according to the weather. No estimate of wood ashes can be considered reliable as it depends upon the kinds of wood from which they are obtained but it is safe to say that out of the way places that two pounds contain about half a pound of potash, six pounds of lime and two pounds of phosphoric acid.

MANIPULATING BEES.

Any person with fairly steady nerves and some patience and courage can easily learn to handle and manipulate bees. There are at the same time a few exceptional individuals whose systems are particularly susceptible to the poison injected by the bee's sting, so that serious effects follow a single sting. Such cases, however, are rare. In most instances where care has been taken to avoid the stings the system eventually becomes immune to the poison, so that being stung by a bee or a sting causes no more than a certain extent the skin may have, without apparent cause, a different dislike for some people, while it is taken without any effort, and received in good favor. The latter part of this proposition has a better foundation than the first part, for it is not to be disputed that any peculiarity of the individual, insofar as it may be perceived, that anger the bees, is usually kept guards against intruders. When one approaches these guards they will treat them as if to know whether harm is intended or not, and should the visitor not inspire them with fear by using smoke or some similar means, but should himself show fear or nervousness he will be very likely to arouse the suspicions still further, and even to arouse them should he strike them or endeavor to dodge their approach. Indeed, if one is not accustomed to bees it is very likely, unconsciously, to bring the head about when it is uncomfortably close to them. On the other hand, the person who knows they may generally, under similar circumstances, be let off without receiving a sting. It is in this that he does as what he does not do.

FARM DAIRYING.

The dairying industry as a farm industry is a practical question proposed years ago by a certain class of people and unhesitatingly accepted. Let us see if it is considered, the cow is the very basis of agriculture. She furnishes her food and milk, butter and cheese for man's physical support. Her excellent manure is constantly enriching and building up the soil. Her calves are all the while replenishing the farmer's pockets with money if he sells them. If he does not sell them, it is because he is confident of being able to make them more profitable to him. All this, which amounts to a great deal, is always the inevitable result of farm dairying if properly conducted. Of course, it can be so conducted as to degenerate into a very unprofitable undertaking just as any other enterprise can. But, we are treating the subject on the hypothesis that effort will be made to get all out of it that is attainable. It is to be supposed that the farmer would not think of pouring high priced food into cows that cannot transform it into either milk or beef and then wonder why "dairying don't pay." If he hopes to make dairying pay, he will begin and continue with cows known to be the kind good for dairying purposes. Then he will look well to the food and care necessary to encourage hope of success. Shelter in bad weather and kind treatment of the animals at all times, are absolutely required. Nor is it less important that the proper care be taken to feed only the best milk producing kinds of provender. Of course, we mean the kinds that produce the greatest quantity of rich milk. Bran middlings and cotton seed meal are all excellent for combining to make rich milk, and also good for producing the highest grade manure. Corn, clover and peas are just the articles to make the most milk. Corn fodder, either green or dry or preserved in the form of ensilage, is the very cheapest roughage for cows. Hay, especially clover hay, is choice for roughage. With these combinations and pursuing the course briefly outlined, farm dairying would undoubtedly prove the equal, if not the superior, of any undertaking the farmer could engage in both as to the per cent. of profit and pleasantness of occupation. And the nice thing about it is that money is coming in constantly at all seasons of the year. "Is dairying profitable as a farm industry?" It certainly is and needs only to be tried fairly to prove it. —T. E. Richey, in Agricultural Epitomist.

POULTRY KEEPING AND DIVERSIFIED FARMING.

The subject is ably discussed in a recent report of the Massachusetts Board of Agriculture by John H. Robinson, who says: It has been a serious and too common error of poultry farmers in recent years that they have made themselves poultrymen, and nothing more. Many have gone even further in the wrong way, and have tried to make themselves specialists in a single branch of poultry keeping. With a few notable exceptions, those who have limited their effort to narrow special lines have not made their operations with poultry financially successful.

Single, separate branches of poultry culture have rarely been made profitable as all-year-round exclusive occupations. While it is true that man special poultry growers have succeeded with poultry, while neglecting the crop-reducing possibilities of their farms and buying practically all food for their fowls, the experience of those who grow a part or all of their food convinces me that such a combination is desirable. Poultry keeping readily enters into combination with almost every branch of agriculture and the attempt to keep it separate generally does violence to its development along natural lines.

A large stock of fowls makes in the course of a year a great deal of very valuable manure, the greater part of which is lost to the poultry keeper, unless applied to crop-producing land on the same farm. The night droppings, which can easily be collected and kept in condition to sell, constitute but a small part of the manure made. The most of it falls either on the earth floor of the poultry house, or is deposited on the ground outside. None of the manure is salable, but every bit of it can be utilized. Moreover, if it is not utilized, it will sooner or later poison the land wherever deposits of it are very abundant, making it unfit for poultry and often causing disease and loss to such an extent that the poultry ceases to be profitable.

To secure the best possible development of the growing chicks they must be given good, clean range from the weaning age until maturity. They will do well on light sandy or gravelly soil that is washed clean of their droppings by every heavy rain, or on a field so full of bowlders that it can neither be tilled nor mowed, but the loss of manure under such conditions is considerable. They do as well or better on good grass land.

The most difficult matter to regulate when poultry keeping is combined with other farm lines of work, is the labor. The key to the problem is found in the right combination of farm methods and poultry keeping. Three things will be found of prime importance in bringing about this result: the hens must be kept in larger flocks than is usual with the intensive method, they must be given more yard room, and the system of feeding must be such that feeding will take as little time as possible. Much less time is required to care for 200 hens in two flocks of 100 each than to care for the same number in flocks of twelve to thirty each. One of the most successful small poultry farmers I know keeps 600 to 700 hens in flocks of about 100 each, each lot occupying its own house, but all running in the same field.—New England Homestead.

FARM AND GARDEN HINTS.

Good tools are always the cheapest in the long run.

At the age of four months the cockrels should be separated from the pullets.

Iron nails thrown into the drinking water will make a good tonic for the fowls.

Farmers should strive to make their farms just a little more productive each year.

Don't compel fifty birds to roost in a hen-house where there is but room for twenty-five.

Don't forget to make the horse familiar with the currycomb. But do not rub too hard.

A little extra care is oftentimes the means of securing an extra cent a pound on butter.

Feed the milch cows liberally. They divide their food between themselves and their owner.

Give cows salt, bran and fine meal. Too much dry and rich food will make ropy or stringy milk.

Young stock can be wintered upon ensilage, but to make a total feed of it is not to be recommended.

Don't allow your churn to stand in the sun too long. As soon as it is thoroughly aired put it in the shade.

Remember that poor butter does not sell as readily as good butter, and the longer butter is kept the worse it gets.

Four or five applications of kerosene ought to cure any case, no matter how bad, of scaly leg on poultry.

Milk at the same time every day. Milk thoroughly to the last drop, because the last milk is the best. Always keep the hands clean, and also the cow's udder and the dairy utensils.

Gasoline as a cure for stomach worms in sheep is considered very satisfactory. One tablespoonful of gasoline is emulsified in four ounces of flaxseed tea. This is given as a drench to each lamb. Out of 1,000 animals treated in some Ohio experiments, only one was lost.

To keep rabbits from injuring young fruit trees, mix pine tar and grease, equal parts, warm and apply it with a cheap paint brush to the lowest two feet of the trunks. This coating will also go far toward keeping out borers if applied in the spring.

A Common Malady.

"I wonder if John Gordon has any trouble with his throat," mused Mrs. Payne, as a friend of her husband passed by her window. "I've seen him day after day with his coat collar turned up, when the mercury was 'way up in the sixties."

"There's nothing the matter with his throat," said Mr. Payne, with an unfeeling grin. "It's his engagement that's made all the trouble."

"What do you mean, Robert?" demanded Mrs. Payne, indignantly. "You know that Mary Wills is one of the sweetest girls that ever lived, and one of my best friends, too."

"That's all very true, my dear," said her husband, "but it doesn't alter her taste in neckties."

"Taste in neckties!" faltered Mrs. Payne.

"Yes, ma'am," said her husband, "that is what I said. She gave the helpless and enamored Jonathan one dozen neckties for a Christmas present, and what is more, she expects to see them adorning his person every day. John confided in me, as a married man, and said he was unwilling to hurt Mary's feelings. But I know how much a man can and ought to bear in the way of criticism from his fellow men, and after I'd seen the ties I counselled John to keep his coat collar turned up when he took his walks abroad."

"Why, I never heard of such a thing in my life!" said Mary Wills's defender, weakly. "Robert! Robert! I believe now I think of it, that you wear your collar turned up when you have on that lovely pink and blue plaid tie I gave you for our anniversary present. Robert—"

But Mr. Payne was already in the hall and front door closed behind him the next moment.—Youth's Companion.

Economy on the Cattle Ranch.

The changes in the methods of cattle ranching in the Southwest during the last ten years have removed a large element of romantic picturesqueness. The financial disasters which dethroned many a rich cattle king from 1887 to 1893 have necessitated economies where prodigal waste once prevailed. Tricks of saving, once thought contemptible, are in vogue in all up-to-date ranges. Nowadays the bones of cattle are saved and sold. No one thinks of leaving the pelt on an animal found dead on the range. Time was when such economy was despised and left for the poor half-breed Indians. Even the piles of horns left after dehorning operations were over are now collected and made a source of revenue. The fertilizer that went to waste on the ranges is shipped at so much a ton to horticultural districts in California and Colorado for use in the orchards. Cowboys are fined for drunkenness on the range nowadays. A generation ago the cattle kings bought whiskey and brandy by the barrel for the cowboys to help themselves to.

A half-dozen horses and cowboys do twice as much work and cover twice as much territory as formerly. The branding of calves is done by time-saving contrivances. A dozen inventions have been made in cattle cars, whereby the loss from the trampling to death of animals while in transit to market has been diminished, and also by which more stock may be put in a car.

One of England's Generals.

There is no gold lace or cocked hat about General Mahon. He is in attire probably the strangest figure in the campaign. Picture to yourself a square-built man wearing an ordinary brown cap (not a service one), a khaki coat with one odd sleve, breeches and box-cloth gaiters, carrying a hooked cherry stick and you have General Mahon. And now listen to this little story about him. A few days ago a Tommy was chasing a chicken near a farm on the line of march. Suddenly the cackling, fluttering feathered one dashed in the direction of a plainly-dressed stranger, "Go it, mate; you've got 'im!" yelled the excited Tommy. Then, to his horror, he recognized the General, and, confused, tried to apologize. "Not at all," said the chief, and helped him to kill the bird. Then telling him if he liked he could take it to his colonel and say the General had helped to kill it, he sauntered away.—From "A Yeoman's Letters."

TALKS ABOUT WOMANKIND

The Garter Petticoat.

Quite the latest novelty in lingerie is the "garter petticoat," occasioned by the sheath-like character of the new fall gowns. The new petticoat really belongs to the genus pantalettes, and comes in pairs, to be fastened just above the knees. Thence the garments descend to the bottom of the skirt in many frills of taffeta, this supplying the needed background for the flounced skirt, without interfering with the close-fitting effect of the skirt around the hips which fashion demands.

Hints for Unlined Skirts.

In planning out the wide ruffle of a skirt it is usual to lay centre back and front to a fold, joining on where occasion requires and pressing all such seams out of visible existence. Acting on this method; the right swing and curve is inevitable. Then, as a hem is always a troublesome matter on any sort of curve and not completely satisfactory at the best, to finish the base of the ruffle it is best to apply a shaped facing, one not more than two inches in depth. And if the stitchings are not employed as an ornamental detail, then the upper edge is neater sewed by hand and the result kept as invisible as possible.

A Popular Fad.

The fad of wearing long bead chains to match the gown is rapidly spreading, and may soon be as popular as it has been for some time in London. The chains fall almost to the knee, and are of every conceivable color. Chains of vivid blue beads, ornamented at intervals by larger beads of yellow or terra cotta, yellow and black, or even bright carmine, are all favorites. Many fanciful colors and designs are found in the Japanese and Oriental shops, where dull carved woods are used as additional ornaments on the chain of bright beads. These chains are not considered suitable for outdoor wear, except on country lawns and piazzas, and they are too slender to support any article heavier than the decorative tassels at the end. One particularly fanciful chain worn recently had bright yellow beads strung on either side of long oval black ones, which were painted in Dresden pattern.

Dress for a Debutante at Court.

There are certain stringent rules and regulations about presentation frocks to be worn at the Court of St. James—so that individuality must be shown in detail rather than in the ensemble.

There must be a court train (mantle it was once called) depending from one or both shoulders. The train of a court gown is its very special feature, for it gives the gown its cachet. It must be specially arranged with regard to the fact that, after the actual presentation is over, upon retiring from the throne room, the train is carried over the left arm; thus the left corner of the train should be specially adorned with a large and elaborate spray of artificial flowers, bunch of feathers, or other effective decoration. Formerly, trains were made exclusively of heavy silk, brocade or gold and silver damascene; but last year, at the last drawing-rooms held by the late Queen Victoria, there were a number of exquisite trains worn contrived of tulle, chiffon and other gauzy and perishable materials.

The hair is dressed with three white feathers and a graceful white veil. Formerly, real lace lappets were worn, but these are now the very rare exception.

White shoes, gloves and stockings are absolutely en regle, even for those who, having been presented previously, are wearing colored dresses.—The Criterion.

The Girls of Holland.

In Holland, the mass of every class go to public schools and all mix together. Education begins at six years of age in the public schools, and at 12 a girl is examined and passes on for a five years' course in the higher burgher schools, of which Holland possesses 72. The coeducation of the sexes is an admitted principle. In the primary schools boys and girls are brought up together, they learn side by side, and are on familiar terms from early childhood without the smallest ill resulting. A great point is made of languages, and no Dutch girl of the upper or middle classes is considered educated who cannot speak English, French and German more or less fluently.

Probably owing to the system of education in force, the womenfolk are inclined to grow up somewhat independent; we are told that the prejudice against women working for a livelihood has almost disappeared, and even rich women sometimes choose a profession. They include doctors, dentists, many of them first-rate, photographers and gardeners. About 1000 girls hold posts as assistant chemists, some 3000 are nurses, trained in the White Cross Homes, and on a par with the very best of their profession. A woman is curator of the Natural History Museum in Haarlem, and another holds the same post at Utrecht, while a third is head dispenser at a hospital in Amsterdam. The railway, post and telegraph offices are largely served by female clerks, who altogether outnumber the male.

Girls in Holland have a great deal of liberty. They pay calls, shop and go to parties at the houses of friends without a chaperon, walk and travel alone, cycle, and have tennis and wheeling clubs in company with young men. They enjoy their fun and freedom, and are in no hurry to find husbands. Marriages are not arranged, and the parents' consent is only asked after a proposal is made and accepted. —The Humanitarian.

Things Worth Knowing.

Cleanliness is essential to the care of the hair. Use a stiff brush, but not one which scratches the scalp. Many people labor under the impression that a vigorous brushing of 100 strokes at night and morning will have the effect of making the hair grow. The brush should only be applied with a gentle, caressing motion. The scalp, it is true, needs exercising, but that is best given by finger massage. The two objects in brushing the hair are: First, to polish, and, second, to clean. The bristles distribute the natural oil and remove the surface dust, rendering the hair glossy and smooth. Frequent massage of the scalp will do much to promote the growth of the hair. The motion should be rotary, beginning in front, over the forehead, and going back to the crown, then forward to the temples and back and forth, till the fingers of the two hands meet at the nape of the neck. When brushing the hair part it down the centre with a comb, then brush straight across each side of the head from the parting. Never brush the hair from forehead to nape of neck; that is an incorrect movement. Continue to part the hair lengthwise or diagonally, in small sections, holding one side back and brushing the other side. Go over the head in this manner—twice if your strength doesn't give out. When this is finished, brush the hair straight up from the forehead with several long strokes; then twist the hair loosely in the left hand, throw it up and over the head and brush the roots at the outline of the hair on the neck, from ear to ear.—Montreal Star.

Good Enough for an Old Friend.

"I find being too intimate with people rather a disadvantage than otherwise," remarked a popular woman recently. "If you are, there is always apt to come a time when you are no longer a persona grata, but merely a friend that can be treated anyhow—'Just like one of the family'—and yet be relied upon never to take offence. When your hostess begins to seat herself in the most confortable chair, leaving you to take what you can get, and puts you in the small bedroom when you visit her, because she 'knows you will not care,' you may know that the point I have spoken of has been reached. At their very nicest and most exclusive dinners, too, you are generally left out. 'Dear Katie,' they will say, 'knows how it is herself, certain people must be asked, there are so many "pay backs" to be invited.' Of course, you have to say you quite understand it, but you are not particularly pleased to be written to at the 11th hour by your dear Emily, saying: "What a comfort to have a true friend! I know you will come over this evening and fill Mrs. Lofty's place, who has just given up!' Or to be asked the next week 'because you know them so well' to 'help leaven the lump' of a distinctly frump dinner party. 'I am having old Mr. and Mrs. Winter from the country,' writes dear Emily, 'and poor Miss Wither, who goes out so little, and a few others like that. I know you will not mind coming to enliven things for them. There are not many I could ask such a favor of (I should think not! I ejaculate mentally), but I feel that I never need stand upon ceremony with my dear Katie.' This she certainly never does, but I am beginning to wish she would!"—New York Tribune.

FOR WOMAN'S BENEFIT

Pink, blue and white ribbon are the only shades used for adorning lingerie.

A black coat has a yoke effect of white and is fastened over this with two bows of black.

Yokes, boleros and sailor collars are still all seen upon nightgowns, but the bolero is the newest.

Celestial blue is the latest addition to the list of variations of this popular hue. It is a more beautiful shade than baby or turquoise blue.

White satin or taffetas will be the correct lining for jackets and automobile coats, and it is the best possible material for the protection of a silk waist.

A dainty and chic novelty is the bedroom slipper, made to suit the peignoir. A pretty example is of pink flowered silk with ruching and bows edged with narrow Val, exactly like the material of the lounging robe.

Little tails will be a feature of some of the smartest boleros and short sacque coats with double-breasted fronts fastened with horn or crystal buttons have been given to some of the serge frocks.

A dressy wrap for chilly evenings is a coat of grey beige and white crepe de sole, lace and chiffon hanging loose back and front with exquisitely embroidered collar and a double row of beautifully enameled buttons for decoration.

The woman who wears black underwear, or at least petticoats, with her black gowns buys the little under petticoats in soft, light India silk, trimmed with black lace. They are cool and comfortable, and add but little to the circumference of the wearer, which is one of their greatest charms.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

Most of us attribute the success of others to luck.

The Mexican Government proposes to start work in economic entomology, under official auspices, at an early date. The first investigation will be that of the distribution of the Mexican orange worm.

Governor Stanley has withdrawn his offer to give silver cups to all triplets born in Kansas during his administration. After having purchased twenty sets of cups he decided that he would have to call a halt owing to the expense of the scheme.

The smallest exhibit at the Buffalo Exposition is the California fig wasp, which can be seen only with a microscope. The insect is an important aid in producing the fruit, and the United States Government spent $16,000 in establishing it in the Pacific coast fig region.

In old countries, where snow prevails during a long winter, many of the animals change the hue of their coats to a white tint. The Arctic bear and fox are white throughout the year. The northern hare is brown in summer and white in winter. The weasel is especially curious; it retains its brown coat until the first snow appears, and then whitens in a few hours.

It is said the pearl button industry is dying out on account of the scarcity of clam shells. The failure of the clam shell crop is due to the relentless search that is made for pearls along the Mississippi and other western rivers by men who don't mind opening several hundred clams to find one pearl. The man who killed the goose that laid the golden egg has his imitators in all ages and climes.

Of the 12,000,000 letters annually distributed by the postoffices of the world 8,000,000,000 are addressed in English, 1,200,000,000 in German and 1,000,000,000 in French. All the other languages have less than 2,000,000,000 between them.

It is declared by a British Judge that any one could assume whatever name he liked, and did not require a royal license. He quoted cases in point, one being that of a man named Bugg, who, being displeased with that appellation, assumed the name of Norfolk Howard—as a result of which, added the Court, certain insects came to be called "Norfolk Howards."

Among the session laws of Colorado is the following: "Section 1. The white and lavender columbine is hereby made and declared to be the State flower of the State of Colorado. Sec. 2. Whereas, in the opinion of the General Assembly, an emergency exists, therefore this act shall be in force from and after its passage." By this prompt action the State was saved from insidious propaganda in favor of other flowers.

Andrew Carnegie is spending his money that he may not "die in disgrace," and W. K. Vanderbilt says of himself that he has nothing to hope for and nothing definite to seek or strive for. The miseries of the very rich should not be given so much publicity. Many young men may be deterred from saving their earnings.

In five years past there has been an increase of 1,357 in the number of public, society and school libraries in the United States, and there are now 5,383 such libraries with 44,591,851 volumes, a against 33,051,872 in 1896, and one library to every 14,118 people and 59 books to every 100 of population, and last year over $16,000,000 was given or bequeathed, for library purposes.

Out of the petrified forests of Arizona may yet be traced the changes of temperature that have undoubtedly taken place in the several zones of the world since the inception of time. These forests were recently examined anew under the direction of the general land office. The silicified logs lie in the greatest abundance with an area of eight square miles in the Apache country. In some places they lie more thickly than they could have stood while living as trees, and it is thought they must have been carried there by a swift current of water in the mesozoic age.

It is probably true that the average death rate in the United States is declining through a lessened infant mortality, incident to smaller families, wiser feeding of children, and the multiplication of agencies for the care and rearing of foundlings, orphans, and the neglected offspring of the improvident and vicious. The progress of medicine and surgery has also had its influence, and so have more intelligent and liberal measures of public and domestic sanitation, says the New York Times.

Dr. L. O. Howard, Entomologist of the Department of Agriculture, has made public some startling statements of the property losses caused by insects. He believes they aggregate over $300,000,000 worth of growing crops. The chinch-bug alone has eaten $300,000,000 worth of corn and wheat in the western States since 1850. As for the mosquito, apart from the losses believed to be due to its pernicious activity in the spread of yellow fever and malaria, it is an immense depreciator of real estate values. A New Jersey scientist estimated that its extermination in that one state alone would add to its real estate valuation not less than $100,000,000.

Hon. Sydney J. Bowie made a very interesting speech at the court house Saturday, which we regret we are unable to report in full owing to lack of space. He spoke for two and a half hours, reviewing the causes which led to the framing of the old constitution and the necessity for the new. At night he spoke at Verbena to a large and enthusiastic audience

The registrars will be white men, and they will register their white neighbors who are not outright hoboes. Practically and plainly speaking, they will register all white men, and white supremacy will be fully established. This is the new constitution means. It was written for the purpose of establishing white supremacy in every county of the State. It will do this even in Lowndes county. Deserving negroes will also be registered, but the registration of next year—the permanent registration of the State—will be largely composed of the whites Misrepresentation upon this point is simply demagogical All white persons will be registered upon their appearance at places of registration No evidence will be required Each one's application at a place of registration will suffice "I desire to be registered," is all the speech or evidence that will be required in any county of the State Misrepresentation as to this is wickedly misleading It is preposterous, and no man of any degree of intelligence should be misled by it It simply shows to what extremities the anti-ratification have been driven Do not be deceived by such talk All white men will be registered, and white supremacy in the State will be forever established by an overwhelming vote on the day of ballots now fast approaching—Age-Herald

Over two hundred in all departments is the number with which the Jacksonville State Normal School opened. Twenty-nine counties are represented in the enrollment. The Normal has eleven teachers. It occupies three buildings worth probably $100,000. The school is sustained by the State for the preparation of teachers for its public schools. The Jacksonville school in addition to its professional work prepares teachers for the State examination in January and July each year, thus placing itself in line with the State Board of examiners and the Department of Education. We give these facts as matters of general information to our readers.

Why suffer with that painful Wound when Dr. Tichenor's Antiseptic will stop the pain and heal it so quickly and cost so little? One application will convince and convert you. Price 50c.

POINTS OF SUPERIORITY IN THE NEW CONSTITUTION OVER THE OLD.

First. The limit of State taxation has been reduced ten cents on the $100 00. This is not only a direct benefit to every tax payer now residing in the State, but is bound to encourage immigration and the establishment of new manufacturing enterprises. The first question asked by one contemplating moving into the State or making investments or building new industries, is the rate of taxation.

Second. Under the old Constitution the legislature can confer upon county commissioners and boards of aldermen unlimited power to create debts and issue bonds. Under the new Constitution, a limitation is placed on the amount of debt which can be incurred by county or city authorities, and no bonds can be issued until the matter has been submitted to a direct vote of the people and endorsed by them at an election held for that purpose.

Third. The new Constitution provides for the public examination of all State and private banks and bankers and these institutions are requested to make public statements of their assets and liabilities at least twice a year.

Fourth. The legislature will hereafter meet only once every four years saving to the State Treasury about $15,000.00 per annum.

Fifth. Local and private legislation which has heretofore blocked general legislation of a nature in which the entire public was interested, has been almost entirely abolished by the new Constitution. Hereafter such local legislation as may be needed will be made directly by the people affected by it.

Sixth. Under the old Constitution when a vacancy occurs in a public office the Governor appoints the successor to fill out the unexpired term. Under the new Constitution the Governor appoints a successor to hold until the next general election for State officers, and the people themselves at such general election fill the vacancy for the balance of the term.

Seventh. Circuit Solicitors are now elected by the legislature, and the the people of the circuit have but little voice in the matter. Hereafter they will be elected directly by the people to whom they are responsible as are the Judges and other officers.

Eight. In case of the death of a Governor elect before taking the oath of office there is great doubt, under the old Constitution as to who would be his successor. Only last year the State came very near being plunged into the vortex of serious trouble, growing out of the question of the successor to the office at the time when it was thought that Governor elect Samford would probably die before he could qualify. Under the new Constitution this doubt is cleared up and the officer elected by the people will take the position instead of the old Governor holding over.

Ninth. Under the old Constitution the President of the Senate or Speaker of the House succeeds to the office of Governor on the death or resignation of the Governor elect by the people. The President of the Senate is now acting Governor of this State. He was elected by the people of one county to represent them in the State Senate. Under the new Constitution the people elect a Lieutenant Governor who, in case of the death or resignation of the Governor fills the position. Under the new Constitution the people of the whole State elect their own Governor to fill out the unexpired term The office carries with it no increase of salary, nor any duties other than as President of the Senate, unless there is a vacancy in the office of Governor.

Tenth. All State elections occur hereafter only once in four years. As it has been the invariable custom to give State officers two consecutive terms of two years each, the framers of the new constitution decided that it would be best to elect these officers only once every four years, thereby saving us many unnecessary elections

Eleventh The new constitution abolishes the August elections entirely, thereby saving directly, nearly Forty Thousand Dollars every other year to the people of the State and giving the people themselves great relief in the matter of time and convenience

Twelfth The power is conferred upon the legislature to consolidate the seperate courts of law and chancery, thereby doing away in many cases with unnecessary officers and preventing new ones except where imperatively demanded by the public service

Thirteenth Members of the legislature and judicial officers are prohibited from using free passes, or securing tickets or transportation at a reduced rate under heavy penalties

Fourteenth The power to refund the State's present indebtedness under the old constitution is doubtful Under the new constitution this power is expressly conferred. The public credit is strengthened and fortified and in a few years the State will be able to save in the mere matter of interest alone on its borrowed indebtedness nearly Two Hundred Thousand Dollars per annum or double the amount of the cost each year of holding the convention.

Fifteenth The old constitution requires the legislature to appropriate One Hundred Thousand Dollars per annum, the interest upon the sixteenth section fund, and the poll tax to the support of the public schools. Under the new constitution the interest upon the sixteenth section fund, the poll tax and a special tax of three mills on the dollar, or six-thirteenths of the total State taxes, is appropriated perpetually to the support and maintainence of the public schools of the State. And it further provides: "It shall be the duty of the legislature to increase the public school fund from time to time as necessity therefor and the condition of the Treasury and the resources of the State may justify" Under the liberal provisions of the new constitution more than one million dollars annually are devoted in perpetuity to the support of the public schools and the same is increased in proportion as the taxable property increases A free common school education is thus put within the reach of every child within the State. Sixteenth As an additional aid to education the people of any county by a three fifths vote may, if they choose, levy an additional tax of ten cents on the one hundred dollars for the support of the public schools in the county where levied

Seventeenth For twenty-six years it has been impossible to amend the old constitution in any manner affecting the general public no matter how great the need for relief may be and has been, it could not be obtained by amendments under the old constitution If any provision of the new constitution is found to be imperfect or works unsatisfactory, or if a change is thought desirable, it can easily amended without putting the people to the great cost and expense of holding a new constitutional convention

Eighteenth The principal of negro equality is firmly imbedded in the old constitution This is stricken down by the new constitution and in its place white supremacy is written in the fundamental law No white man is disfranchised except for crime and the vote of the vicious, incompetent and corrupt negro is stricken down now and forever more

Nineteenth The old constitution makes force or fraud in many localities essential to the protection of white supremacy In others where the negro holds the balance of power, bribery and corruption have been resorted to by all parties in an effort to divide his vote The new constitution removes the cause and provides a plain and sure path to honest elections in the future The opponents of the new constitution suggests no plan of their own to remedy these admitted evils

Twentieth The old constitution was written in haste with federal soldiers surrounding our ballot boxes and a hostile Republican administration in Washington The new constitution was written after full reflection Adequate debate was had upon every provision No federal troops were near us and in our efforts to secure the supremacy of our race and write it in the fundamental law, it had the full sympathy of all good citizens throughout the civilized world

Twenty-first Copies of the new constitution were printed by the Democratic newspapers and can be had at Democratic headquarters No copies of the new constitution have been printed by the opposition to its ratification, nor any copies distributed by its opponents

Under these circumstances how can any man hesitate between the old and the new?

"Something New Under The Sun."
All Doctors have tried to cure CATARRH by the use of powders, acid gases, inhalers, and drugs in paste form. Their powders dry up the mucous membranes causing them to crack open and bleed. The powerful acids used in the inhalers have entirely eaten away the same membranes that their makers have aimed to cure, while pastes and ointments cannot reach the disease. An old and experienced practitioner who has for many years made a close study and specialty of the treatment of CATARRH, has at last perfected a Treatment which when faithfully used, not only relieves at once, but permanently cures CATARRH, by removing the cause, stopping the discharges, and curing all inflammation. It is the only remedy known to science that actually reaches the afflicted parts. This wonderful remedy is known as "SNUFFLES" the GUARANTEED CATARRH CURE and is sold at the extremely low price of One Dollar, each package containing internal and external medicine sufficient for a full month's treatment and everything necessary to its perfect use.
"SNUFFLES" is the only perfect CATARRH CURE ever made and is now recognized as the only safe and positive cure for that annoying and disgusting disease. It cures all inflammation quickly and permanently and is also wonderfully quick to relieve HAY FEVER or COLD in the HEAD.
CATARRH when neglected often leads to CONSUMPTION—"SNUFFLES" will save you if you use it at once. It is no ordinary remedy, but a complete treatment which is positively guaranteed to cure CATARRH in any form or stage if used according to the directions which accompany each package. Don't delay but send for it at once, and write full particulars as to your condition, and you will receive special advice from the discoverer of this wonderful remedy regarding your case without cost to you beyond the regular price of "SNUFFLES" the "GUARANTEED CATARRH CURE."
Sent prepaid to any address in the United States or Canada on receipt of One Dollar. Address Dept C 986 EDWIN B GILES & COMPANY, 2340 and 2342 Market Street, Philadelphia.

FOR HARNESS and Saddle Horse Mexican Mustang Liniment is just what you need. It takes out the sore, and you will be astonished to see how quickly it heals sore.

it's this way:
You can burn yourself with Fire, with Powder, etc., or you can scald yourself with Steam or Hot Water, but there is only one proper way to cure a burn or scald and that is by using Mexican Mustang Liniment.
It gives immediate relief. Get a piece of soft old linen cloth, saturate it with this Liniment and bind loosely upon the wound. You can have no adequate idea what an excellent remedy this is for a burn until you have tried it.

A FOWL TIP. If you have a bird afflicted with Roup or any other poultry disease use Mexican Mustang Liniment. It is called a STANDARD remedy by poultry breeders.

THE HOME GOLD CURE.

An Ingenious Treatment by which Drunkards are being Cured Daily in spite of Themselves.

No Noxious Dose. No Weakening of the Nerves. A Pleasant and Positive Cure for the Liquor Habit.

It is now generally known and understood that drunkenness is a disease and not weakness. A body filled with poison, and nerves completely shattered by periodical or constant use of intoxicating liquors, requires an antidote capable of neutralizing and eradicating this poison, and destroying the craving for intoxicants. Sufferers may now cure themselves at home without publicity or loss of time from business by the wonderful "HOME GOLD CURE" which has been perfected after many years of close study and treatment of inebriates. The faithful use according to directions of this wonderful discovery is positively guaranteed to cure the most opstinate case, no matter how hard a drinker. Our records show the marvelous transformation of thousands of Drunkards into sober, industrious and upright men.

WIVES CURE YOUR HUSBANDS!! CHILDREN CURE YOUR FATHERS!! this remedy is in no sense a nostrum but is a specific for this disease only, and is so skillfully devised and prepared that it is thoroughly soluble and pleasant to the taste, so that it can be given in a cup of tea or coffee without the knowledge of the person taking it. Thousands of Drunkards have cured themselves with this priceless remedy, and as many more have been cured and made temperate men by having the "CURE" administered by loving friends and relatives without their knowledge in coffee or tea, and believe today that they discontinued drinking of their own free will. DO NOT WAIT. Do not be deluded by apparent and misleading "improvement." Drive out the disease at once and for all time. The "HOME GOLD CURE" is sold at the extremely low price of One Dollar, thus placing within reach of every body a treatment more effectual than others costing $25 to $50. Full directions accompany each package. Special advice by skilled physicians when requested without extra charge. Sent prepaid to any part of the world on receipt of One Dollar. Address Dept. C 935, EDWIN B. GILES & COMPANY, 2330 and 2332 Market Street, Philadelphia.

BILL ARP'S LETTER.

Political Events of the Past Engages Bartow Man's Attention.

EXPECTS GOOD THINGS OF ROOSEVELT

William Says Now Is a Propitious Time For a Political Reformation and Cementing of National Friendship.

"To the victors belong the spoils." This was an old war maxim of the Romans in Julius Caesar's day—and was akin to that other one, "vae victis," woe unto the conquered. In 1831, when General Jackson was sweeping the field and removing from federal office everything whig who had been appointed, William L. Marcy, who was in the United States senate, defended him in a great speech and promulgated that maxim, "To the victors belong the spoils." Marcy was a very brilliant statesman, but a very bitter partisan. He was governor of New York three terms, judge of the supreme court, secretary of war under Polk, secretary of state under Pierce, and he used this maxim just as far as he was allowed to. He detested the whig party and defined an old line whig to be "a conceited gentleman who took a drink when he pleased and never voted the democratic ticket." This reminds me of an old man I met in Arkansas, who said to me, "Mr. Arp, I'm gwine onto 80 years old—me and my old o'man have lived together fifty-nine years and jined the same Baptist church the year we was married and every year since then I have voted the democratic ticket." His politics was a good part of his religion. I remember when the alienation between the whigs and democrats was quite as bitter for many years as it has been between republicans and democrats at the south—social equality even in small towns was strained by politics. This alienation got into the churches and colleges. There was no outward breach of good manners, but it was manifested in various ways that the whigs felt they were better than the democrats, for they were generally wealthy and educated and owned slaves. Out of 165 students in our state university in 1845, 130 of them were sons of whigs. I am still a democrat, and my father was before me, but I have always respected the grand old whig party of the south, and lamented its disruption. I still remember with pride and admiration the names of Toombs, Stephens, Ben Hill, Jenkins, Dr. Miller, Crawford, Berrien, the Hulls and Holts and Underwoods and Doughertys, for I knew them all personally and heard them on the stump and in the forum. But the disruption had come both in church and state. The whigs could not any longer stand the company they were in—northern whigs became republicans and affiliated with abolitionists in their political platforms. They precipitated the civil war, and from that was born plunder and corruption. I do not mean to say that all democrats are patriotic and honest—nor that all republicans are unprincipled and dishonest. When our unsophisticated preacher, Ed Axson, said to Judge Underwood that he could not believe Tweed was guilty of stealing all that money in New York city, for Tweed was a democrat, the judge smiled and said: "My dear sir, you are too innocent and unsuspecting to live in this wicked world. I am twice as old as you are and my observation has been that it is within the range of possibility for a democrat to steal." But what I do say is that the democratic party has more conscience and is less greedy than the republicans. Shortly after the war a Dutchman in Chattanooga killed his fat shote and hung it up in the back yard to cool during the night, next morning he was horrified to find that one half of the hog was gone. He ran around wild and was very much excited and declared that some mean old stinkin' democrat had carried off one-half of his beautiful shote. "What makes you think he was a democrat?" a neighbor asked. "Vy, of course he vas a dimocrat—of course he vas—for a republican vould haf stole de whole hog."

That's it exactly. They want it all.

But now is the time for a great reformation. Martin Luther brought one in the church and I believe that Roosevelt will bring one to the management of our national affairs. He knows of the corruption and has determined to purge it. He will appoint good men to office, regardless of their political principles. He will not be governed by that maxim of Marcy's. He is an ardent believer in civil service reform. General Grant had the law passed in 1872 to stop the public plunder, but he couldn't enforce it and it became a dead letter. In 1876 and 1880 both parties pretended to favor its revival and they put it as a plank in their platforms. In 1883 congress passed the present vigorous law on the subject, but party pressure evades it as much as possible and that unchristian, uncivilized maxim of "to the victors belong the spoils" still prevails. The civil serivce reform does not apply to all the little offices, but is pretended to be enforced in the important ones. Thirty thousand railway postal clerks are subject to it and the law is more rigidly enforced in the postal department than any other. Now we hope and have a right to expect that Mr. Roosevelt will see to it that no objectionable postmaster shall be appointed in any town, north or south. The postoffice is emphatically the people's office. It ought really to be an elective office in every town and village. It is close akin to home and home affairs, and the sacred and secret things of our homes. Men, women and children have a share in it and no one but a kind-hearted, accommodating man or woman of good, respectable social standing in the community should be appointed. There is an eternal fitness of things that cannot be disregarded with impunity and no broad-minded man would appoint a negro as postmaster at Athens or Augusta or any white man's town. Why not try one at Canton, Ohio, or Dayton, or any other cultured city of the north? Why insult our people with such federal officials. They say that we are all brethren now, but as the poet says:

"I know that you say that you love me,
But why did you kick me downstairs?"

Now just think of it—and ponder it—what an oportunity for Mr. Roosevelt to win to him many millions of good people who have been long estranged. He can do this and not strain his republicanism. What a great thing it is for a king or an emperor or a president to be loved by his subjects or his people. What a glorious reform it would be for all the conservative citizens of the north and the south, the east and the west to wipe out the party lines and with one heart and one mind, say to Mr. Roosevelt, sir, your high-toned, pure, patriotic and unprejudiced administration since the death of Mr. McKinley has commanded our respect and admiration. We, therefore, nominate you to succeed yourself. I believe it to be possible for this to happen. Keep on that line, Mr. Roosevelt. Put the best men in office, regardless of party lines and my old friend, Evan Howell, and I will back you, but we will not flop over to the republican party all of a sudden as Bob Lowry did. It will have to repent and apologize a long time before I will trust them and shake hands across the bloody chasm. I've got such a long habit of being a democrat that I'm too old to change. Bob Lowry is much younger, and so is Roosevelt. Lowry can turn republican if he chooses and Roosevelt can turn democrat; we don't care.—Bill Arp, in Atlanta Constitution.

HINT TO COUNTRY MERCHANTS.

The Local Weekly His Defense Against Mail Order Houses.

The country merchant is making a great talk about the mail order houses in the big cities who are getting trade away from him, but with all his outcry he is really making no serious effort to prevent it, says the Advertising World. You can't stop people from buying where they think they can buy the cheapest, simply by the use of invective. The only way the country merchant can hope to compete with the mail order houses is by meeting them on their own ground—by advertising.

There is absolutely no hope for the business of the country merchant until he corrects a few of his time worn views about advertising. Advertising is simply telling what you have to sell and the price. It makes no difference if your ads. are not written by an expert or illustrated by a high-priced artist, you can make them effective and result producing if you bear in mind the one point that an ad. should tell about what you have to sell and not simply about yourself.

The advertising done by the average country merchant is usually something frightful. He does not consider advertising a force by which he is to directly increase his business, but as a kind of leg-pulling proposition on the part of the local newspaper. Any old thing will do him in the way of an announcement, and the smaller the space the editor will let him down with the better the bargain he imagines he has made. Some merchants carry nothing but a stereotyped card, year in and year out, yet if they stopped to think, they find that they have dozens of things they could sell at less than regular prices and which, if made known, would attract many buyers who would otherwise send to the big cities for them. The secret of the success of the mail order firms is simply because their advertisements tell something.

Any kind of advertising is of course better than none. All advertising pays in some way or another, but the merchant who does no advertising at all, because he is not able to afford big pages, makes one large mistake. If you can't do the best advertising, do the best you can. What the best is that you can do may seem very small, but advertising is something that pays for itself and it increases right along.

His Scale of Prices.

An Oklahoma editor, who is a deep thinker, has fixed a table of rates for publishing things "not as they seem," says the Jefferson (Texas) Jimplecut, as follows: "For calling a man a successful citizen when every one knows he is lazier than a government mule, $2.75; referring to a deceased citizen as one who is sincerely mourned by the entire community, when we know he will only be missed by the poker circles, $1.08; referring to some gallivanting female as an estimable lady whom it is a pleasure to meet, when every business man in town had rather see the devil coming, hoofs, horns and all, than to see her coming towards them, $3.19; calling an ordinary pulpit pounder an eminent divine, 90 cents; sending a tough sinner to heaven with poetry, $5.00."

Education is the best cure for crime. It costs less to build additions to schoolhouses than it does to enlarge our jails.

CHINESE LAUNDRYMEN

Steam Work at Lower Prices is Driving Them Out.

"Steam and the Chinamen seem to be eternally at variance," said a Chicago laundryman, "and steam is winning. Not only is it gradually encroaching on the Chinaman's home country, but here in Chicago it is driving him out of his favorite occupation. Steam laundries are everywhere taking the white man's washing out of the hands of the celestials and are rapidly forcing them out of the washing business."

A reference to the business directory of Chicago for a score of years past verified the statement. In 1889 there were but 276 laundries in Chicago, and of these but sixty-six were run by Chinamen. John caught the popular fancy right then, however, and, as he was beginning to come into Chicago in large numbers he began to drive out of business the hard workers of Caucasian blood. In a decade, while the number of laundries were a little more than doubling, the Chinese washermen increased fourfold, so that in 1890 there were 633 laundries in the city, of which 263 were conducted by Asiatics. In 1892 there were 278 of the latter, and in the world's fair year and the year immediately following they increased rapidly to 333.

That was the limit, however. Steam machinery displayed at the world's fair made a great impression on Chicagoans, and there were many new enterprises started as a direct result of the influence of some exhibit on the spectators. In no branch was this more marked than in the laundry machinery, and after the fair steam laundries began to be started. Popular prejudice was against them for a time. The steam machines were said to tear the garments, to do rough work, to wear things out faster, and to rub the buttons off. They were even said to be used with chemicals which injured the fiber, and the public was slow to patronize them. When the various laundries began to fight for trade, however, and cut the price of washing a white shirt down to four cents, and to deliver the next day after collection, the people came to their doors in flocks and more new laundries were started. As a result, John Chinaman's trade fell off. One by one the Celestials took in the red signs that had kept the devils away from their front doors, and either moved into Chinatown or went back to the flowery kingdom to spend their old age in affluence worshiping at the tombs of their forefathers.

So rapidly have their numbers fallen off that in the new directory, while there are shown 459 laundries conducted by white people, most of which are steam, of a total of 707 but 249 are conducted by Chinese, a number smaller in itself and in proportion than that of ten years ago and greatly less than that of half a decade ago.

It is figured by laundrymen that if the Chinese recede as fast as they gained they will in another ten years have practically disappeared, and the white laundry will again be doing all the washing. The shop of the mysterious yellow man will be only a tradition. And a strange tradition it will be for even now, when everybody goes past a Chinese laundry some time during the day, there is much that is unknown and little that is known about them. When does John Chinaman sleep? That is a question many ask and few can answer. Go by his door at any time of day or night and you will see him busy over tub or washing board, or seated on the front steps gazing at the same stars he used to gaze at in his home 10,000 miles away.

What do the marks on a Chinese laundry ticket mean? It is doubtful if John himself can answer that. Tradition asserts that the only requisite for the checks is that they be red, and that the hieroglyphics on each half be alike. Meaning is unnecessary. But it may be that John has a way of describing in his own language the peculiarities of each of his customers in this way, and knows when a man presents a check just what sort of a man he is and whether there is already a grudge against him outstanding.

And are all of the workers in the Chinese laundries Johns, or are some of them Mrs. Johns? And this will never be answered unless some law be devised to require that John wear a label which will enable the Caucasian to distinguish between the two when they are clad in the same style of suits of loose blue stuff.

With all the questions, however, John is doomed. Already the bulk of the business is handled by the big steam machines, and soon they will have it all. And then Chicago may have a run of Chinese cooks, or may take to patronizing Chinese restaurants—or may lose her Chinese population altogether.—Chicago Tribune.

Fatality Among Presidents.

The Republican Party, in its Presidents elected by the people, may be called a party of martyrs. There is no other political party in the history of the constitutional government that has paid so heavy a cost in the murder of its chosen leaders. Every President elevated by the Republicans, or who formerly succeeded to office by death, has passed away. Of the Vice-Presidents elected, only Morton and Roosevelt survive. Yet the Republican Party is less than fifty years old. The extent to which its Presidents have suffered from assassination is startling, whatever the analysis of the causes may be.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The Germans are just beginning (in Bavaria) to introduce the American style of railway seats that can be reversed.

REV. DR. TALMAGE.

DISCOURSE BY THE EMINENT DIVINE LAST SUNDAY.

Subject: The Persuasive Word—It Calls All People to Gladness—What We Most Need—The Star of Faith—There is Pardon For All.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—In this discourse Dr. Talmage calls all people to gladness and opens all the doors of expectancy; texts, Genesis vi. 18, "Come;" Revelation xxii. 17, "Come."

Imperial, tender and all persuasive is the word "come." Six hundred and seventy-eight times is it found in the Scriptures. It stands at the front gate of the Bible, as in my first text, inviting antediluvians into Noah's ark, and it stands at the other gate of the Bible, as in my second text, inviting the postdiluvians of all later ages into the ark of a Saviour's mercy. "Come" is only a word of four letters, but it is the queen of words, and nearly the entire nation of English vocabulary bows to its sceptre. It is an ocean into which empties ten thousand rivers of meaning. Other words drive, but this beckons. All moods of feeling hath that word "come." Sometimes it weeps and sometimes it laughs. Sometimes it prays, sometimes it temots and sometimes it destroys. It sounds from the door of the church and from the seraglios of sin, from the gates of heaven and the gates of hell. It is confluent and accrescent of all power. It is the heiress of most of the future. "Come!" You may pronounce it so that all the heavens will be heard in its cadences or pronounce it so that all the woes of time and eternity shall reverberate in its one syllable. It is on the lip of saint and profligate. It is the mightiest of all solicitants either for good or bad.

To-day I weigh anchor and haul in the planks and set sail on that great word, although I am sure I will not be able to reach the farther shore. I will let down the fathoming line into this sea and try to measure its depths, and, though I tie together all the cables and cordage I have on board I will not be able to touch bottom. All the power of the Christian religion is in that word "come." The dictatorial and commendatory in religion are of no avail. The imperative mood is not the appropriate mood when we would have people savingly impressed. They may be coaxed, but they cannot be driven. Our hearts are like our homes—at a friendly knock the door will be opened, but an attempt to force open our door would land the assailant in prison. Our theological seminaries, which keep young men three years in their curriculum before launching them into the ministry, will do well if in so short a time they can teach the candidates for the holy office how to say with great emphasis and intonation and power that one word "come." That man who has such efficiency in Christian work, and that woman who has such power to persuade people to quit the wrong and begin the right went through a series of losses, bereavements, persecutions and the trials of twenty or thirty years before they could make it a triumph of grace every time they uttered the word "come."

You must remember that in many cases our "come" has a mightier "come" to conquer before it has any effect at all. Just give me the accurate census, the statistics of how many are down in fraud, in drunkenness, in gambling, in impurity or in vice of any sort, and I will give you the accurate census or statistics of how many have been slain by the word "come." "Come and click wine glasses with me at this ivory bar." "Come and see what we can win at this gaming table." "Come, enter with me this doubtful speculation." "Come with me and read those infidel tracts on Christianity." "Come with me to a place of bad amusement." "Come with me in a gay bout through the underground life of the city." If in this city there are 20,000 who are down in moral character, then 20,000 fell under the power of the word "come." I was reading of a wife whose husband had been overthrown by strong drink, and she went to the saloon where he was ruined, and she said, "Give me back my husband." And the bartender, pointing to a maudlin and battered man drowsing in the corner of the barroom, said: "There he is. Jim, wake up. Here's your wife come for you." And the woman said: "Do you call that my husband? What have you been doing with him? Is that the manly brow, is that the clear eye, is that the noble heart that I married? What vile drug have you given him that has turned him into a fiend? Take your tiger claws off of him. Uncoil those serpent folds of evil habit that are crushing him. Give me back my husband, the one with whom I stood at the altar ten years ago. Give him back to me." Victim was he, as millions of others have been, of the word "come."

Now, we want all the world over to harness this word for good as others have harnessed it for evil, and it will draw the five continents and the seas between them—yes, it will draw the whole earth back to the God from whom it has wandered. It is that wooing and persuasive word that will lead men to give up their sins. Was skepticism ever brought into love of the truth by an ebullition of hot words against infidelity? Was ever the blasphemer stopped in his oaths by denunciation of blasphemy? Was ever a drunkard weaned from his cups by the temperance lecturer's mimicry of staggering step and hiccough? No. It was, "Come with me to church to-day and hear our singing;" "Come and let me introduce you to a Christian man whom you will be sure to admire;" "Come with me into associations that are cheerful and good and inspiring;" "Come with me into joy such as you never before experienced."

With that word which has done so much for others I approach you to-day. Are you all right with God? "No," you say, "I think not. I am sometimes alarmed when I think of Him. I fear I will not be ready to meet Him in the last day. My heart is not right with God." Come, then, and have it made right. Through the Christ who died to save you, come! What is the use in waiting? The longer you wait the farther off you are and the deeper you are down. Strike out for heaven! You remember that a few years ago a steamer called the Princess Alice, with a crowd of excursionists aboard, sank in the Thames, and there was an awful sacrifice of life. A boatman from the shore put out for the rescue, and he had a big boat, and he got it so full it would not hold another person, and as he laid hold of the oars to pull for the shore, leaving hundreds helpless and drowning, he cried out: "Oh, that I had a bigger boat!" Thank God I am not thus limited, and that I can promise room for all in this gospel boat. Get in, get in! And yet there is room. Room in the heart of a pardoning God. Room in heaven.

I also apply the word of my text to those who would like practical comfort. If any ever escape the struggle of life, I have not found them. They are not certainly among the prosperous classes. In most cases it was a struggle all the way up till they reached the prosperity, and since they have reached these heights there have been perplexities, anxieties and crises which were almost enough to shatter the nerves and turn the brain. It would be hard to tell which have the biggest fight in this world, the prosperities or the adversities, the conspicuities or the obscurities. Just as soon as you have enough success to attract the attention of others the envies and jealousies are let loose from their kennel. The greatest crime that you can commit in the estimation of others is to get on better than they do. They think your addition is their subtraction. Five hundred persons start for a certain goal of success. One reaches it, and the other 499 are mad. It would take volumes to hold the story of the wrongs, outrages and defamations that have come upon you as a result of your success. The warm sun of prosperity brings into life a swarm full of annoying insects. On the other hand, the unfortunate classes have their struggles for maintenance. To achieve a livelihood by one who had nothing to start with and after awhile for a family as well and carry this on until children are reared and educated and fairly started in the world and to do this amid all the rivalries of business and the uncertainty of crops and the fickleness of tariff legislation, with an occasional labor strike and here and there a financial panic thrown in, is a mighty thing to do, and there are hundreds and thousands of such heroes and heroines who live unsung and die unhonored.

What we all need, whether up or down in life or half way between, is the infinite solace of the Christian religion. And so we employ the word "come." It will take all eternity to find out the number of business men who have been strengthened by the promises of God and the people who have been fed by the ravens when other resources gave out and the men and women who, going into this battle armed only with needle or saw or axe or yardstick or pen or type or shovel or shoelast, have gained a victory that made the heaven resound. With all the resources of God promised for every exigency no one need be left in the lurch.

I like the faith displayed years ago in Drury lane, London, in an humble home where every particle of food had given out and a kindly soul entered with tea and other table supplies and found a kettle on the fire ready for the tea. The benevolent lady said, "How is that you have the kettle ready for the tea when you had no tea in the house?" And the daughter in the home said: "Mother would have me put the kettle on the fire, and when I said, 'What is the use of doing so when we have nothing in the house?' she said: 'My child, God will provide.' Thirty years He has already provided for me through all pain and helplessness, and He will not leave me to starve at last. He will send us help though we do not see how. We have been waiting all day for something to come, but until we saw you we knew not how it was to come." Such things the world may call coincidences, but I call them Almighty deliverances, and, though you do not hear of them, they are occurring every hour of every day and in all parts of Christendom.

Those who follow the advice of this world in time of perplexity are in a fearful round, for it is one bewildered soul following another bewildered soul, and only those who have in such time got their eye on the morning star of our Christian faith can find their way out or be strong enough to lead others with an all persuasive invitation.

"But," says some one, "you Christian people keep telling us to 'come,' yet you do not tell us how to come." That charge shall not be true on this occasion. Come believing! Come repenting! Come praying! After all that God has been doing for 6000 years, sometimes through patriarchs and sometimes through prophets and at last through the culmination of all the tragedies on Golgotha, can any one think that God will not welcome your coming? Will a father at vast outlay construct a mansion for his son and lay out parks white with statues and green with foliage and all a-sparkle with fountains and then not allow his son to live in the house or walk in the parks? Has God built this house of gospel mercy and will He then refuse entrance to His children? Will a Government at great expense build life-saving stations all along the coast, and boats that can hover unhurt like a petrel over the wildest surge and then, when the lifeboat has reached the wreck of a ship in the offing, not allow the drowning to seize the life line or take the boat for the shore in safety? Shall God provide at the cost of his only Son's assassination escape for a sinking world and then turn a deaf ear to the cry that comes up from the breakers?

"But," you say, "there are so many things I have to believe and so many things in the shape of a creed that I have to adopt that I am kept back." No, no! You need believe but two things—namely, that Jesus Christ came into the world to save sinners and that you are one of them. "But," you say, "I do believe both of those things. Do you really believe them with all your heart? "Yes." Why, then, you have passed from death into life. Why, then, you are a son or a daughter of the Lord Almighty. Why, then, you are an heir or an heiress of an inheritance that will declare dividends from now until long after the stars are dead. Hallelujah! Prince of God, why do you not come and take your coronet? Princess of the Lord Almighty, why do you not mount your throne? Pass up into the light. Your boat is anchored, why do you not go ashore? Just plant your feet hard down, and you will feel under them the Rock of Ages.

I challenge the universe for one instance in which a man in the right spirit appealed for the salvation of the gospel and did not get it. Man alive, are you going to let all the years of your life go away with you without your having this great peace, this glorious hope, this bright expectancy?

Are you going to let the pearl of great price lie in the dust at your feet because you are too indolent or too proud to stoop down and pick it up? Will you wear the chain of evil habit when near by you is the hammer that could with one stroke snap the shackle? Will you stay in the prison of sin when here is a gospel key that could unlock your incarceration? No, no!

As the one word "come" has sometimes brought many souls to Christ, I will try the experiment of piling up into a mountain and then send down in an avalanche of power many of these gospel "comes." "Come thou and all thy house into the ark;" "Come unto Me, all ye who labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest;" "Come, for all things are now ready;" "Come with us, and we will do you good;" "Come and see;" "The Spirit and the bride say 'come,' and let him that hearsth say 'come,' and let him that is athirst 'come.'" The stroke of one bell in a tower may be sweet, but a score of bells well tuned and rightly lifted and skillfully swung in one great chime fill the heavens with music almost celestial. And no one who has heard the mighty chimes in the towers of Amsterdam or Ghent or Copenhagen can forget them. Now, it seems to me that in this Sabbath hour all heaven is chiming, and the voices of departed friends and kindred ring down the sky, saying, "Come!"

When Russia was in one of her great wars, the suffering of the soldiers had been long and bitter, and they were waiting for the end of the strife. One day a messenger in great excitement ran among the tents of the army shouting, "Peace! Peace!" The sentinel on guard asked, "Who says peace?" And the sick soldier asked, "Who says 'peace?'" And all up and down the encampment of the Russians went the question, "Who says 'peace?'" Then the messenger responded, "The Czar says 'peace.'" That was enough. That meant going home. That meant the war was over. No more wounds and no more long marches. So to-day, as one of the Lord's messengers, I move through these great encampments of souls and cry: "Peace between earth and heaven! Peace between God and man! Peace between your repenting soul and a pardoning Lord!" If you ask me, "Who says peace?" I answer, "Christ our King declares it;" "My peace I give unto you!" "Peace of God that passeth all understanding!" Everlasting peace!

THE SABBATH SC

INTERNATIONAL LESSON CO FOR NOVEMBER 3.

Subject: Death of Joseph Gen. [illegible] Golden Text, Psa. [illegible] Verses, 18-21 — Commentary on Day's Lesson.

Let us study carefully [illegible] history. 1. Joseph [illegible] 45. 17-28. Pharaoh and his [illegible] well pleased when the [illegible] brethren had come. The [illegible] Joseph in readiness for [illegible] ly. Great provisions were made [illegible] journey. At first [illegible] for the new, warped [illegible] but when he saw the [illegible] "good things of Egypt" [illegible] sent be believed and [illegible] ? The journey [illegible] "Immediately the wheels [illegible] to move to Egypt with their [illegible] movable property. [illegible] about 250 miles along [illegible] route, but it was a long hard [illegible] an old man, with wives and children and flocks and herds. [illegible] Beer-sheba God sent [illegible] encouragement, comfort [illegible] promises and holding [illegible] Little could Jacob see [illegible] of this journey but it was [illegible] in the chain of divine providence [illegible] which the promises were [illegible] The number of Jacob's [illegible] down into Egypt, including [illegible] was seventy-five. Acts 7. 14.

2. The meeting of Israel and [illegible] 46. 28-34. When Jacob reached the [illegible] of Goshen Joseph went [illegible] out to meet his father. Joseph fell on [illegible] father's neck "and wept on his neck a good while." It had been nearly [illegible] three years since Joseph had seen his father to go to Shechem.

4. The meeting of Israel and [illegible] 47. 1-10. "First Joseph presented [illegible] his brethren and introduced them [illegible] Pharaoh, who welcomed them and [illegible] Joseph gave official positions to men [illegible] proved themselves men of [illegible] and ability. Then Joseph presented [illegible] father to the king. Here Joseph showed [illegible] the nobleness of his character and [illegible] ashamed of his father. Jacob's [illegible] of his life to Pharaoh is very [illegible] Sin and sorrow had worked [illegible] and was bringing him to an early [illegible]

5. Jacob blessing his sons. Gen. 48, 49. The time was approaching [illegible] Jacob knew he must die. He was [illegible] nearly blind. Joseph took his two sons, Manasseh and Ephraim, to his father who blessed them. "In the [illegible] but notice the prophetic [illegible] Ephraim and Manasseh to be [illegible] and heads of tribes and the [illegible] chief blessing to Ephraim. The [illegible] Ephraim became the leading tribe [illegible] Judah. Just before his death Jacob [illegible] phesied concerning his sons and pronounced blessings upon them.

6. Jacob's death and burial. Gen. 50. 14. Jacob was 147 years of age when he died. Before his death he [illegible] solemn pledge from Joseph that he would bury him in Egypt (Gen. 50. 5). He charged them to bury him in the [illegible] where Abraham and Isaac were buried. These instructions were carefully [illegible] out. At this time Joseph recalled [illegible] scenes of his boyhood, after an absence of forty years.

15. "Saw their father was dead." This at once argues both a sense of guilt in their own consciences and a want of confidence in their brother.

16. "Thy father did command." Though this is not recorded elsewhere it was undoubtedly true. They had evidently asked their father to help them in this trouble. Jacob must have advised them to humble themselves before their brother and obtain a fresh assurance of his forgiveness.

17. "Forgive," etc. These words were wonderfully well chosen and were spoken in a way to appeal to the noble manner to Joseph's nature and affection. They cast themselves upon his mercy. "Joseph wept." How touching! He wept out of sympathy with the deep sorrow of many years which his but forgiveness and reconciliation alleviate.

18. "Fell down." They again [illegible] do we see the fulfilment of Joseph's dream in a remarkable manner. [illegible]

19. "In the place of God." I am given you and the matter is now between you and God. I am not your judge to punish you.

20. "Ye meant evil." (R. V.) [illegible] they did was just as wicked as if the results had been disastrous. They meant it for evil, and God judges according to the motive which prompts the act. "He meant it for good." (R. V.) God overruled their wickedness and made it turn out good. This fact would remove [illegible] for it would be a great relief to have the injury to Joseph which they intended had been averted.

22. "Dwelt in Egypt." He lived in Egypt until the time of his death, which was fifty-four years after the death of his father. "His father's house" [illegible] the descendants of Joseph were in Egypt 144 years after the death of Joseph. They came to Egypt seventy-one years before his death, which makes his total time in Egypt 215 years. "An hundred and ten years." He was seventeen years old when he came to Egypt, thirty years were spent in slavery and prison, and eighty years on the throne, for it is probable that he retained his high office to the close of his life.

23. "Upon Joseph's knees." Were educated by him, or under his care. His sons and their children were acknowledge him as patriarch of the family, as long as he lived.

24. "Will surely visit you." With unbounded confidence in God's [illegible] made to his ancestors. The promise of God to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. The throne had not weaned his affections from the true God. He died in the [illegible] ance of faith. "Bear up your courage, ye have everything that can make you comfortable, yet this is not given by covenant, the land which represents the rest that remains for the people of God.

25. "Carry up my bones." He [illegible] finally rest with my ancestors in the land which God gave to Abraham. This is a pledge, as it is a type of the rest of heaven. See Heb. 11. 22. This request was granted. When the Israelites departed from Egypt he took his bones (Ex. 13. 19), and Joshua buried them in Shechem. Josh. 24. 32.

26. "They embalmed him." The Egyptians had special physicians who made the embalmers themselves. "In a coffin." This was not universally used in Egypt, but only used for persons of extraordinary distinction. Joseph was not embalmed by the embalmers, in a chest of stone, as may be seen in our museums of the present day. Others think Joseph's body was placed in a stone sarcophagus.

Progressive business men of the United States have just [illegible] the importance of [illegible] which is inevitable in all [illegible] and chemical processes, but [illegible] recovering substances of [illegible] value out of [illegible] has not attained a degree [illegible] in America comparable [illegible] retirement of the same in [illegible] France.

LATEST STATE NEWS.

NO BOND REQUIRED.

[illegible] H. Dent and E. B. [illegible], president and cashier of the [illegible] Eufaula National Bank, will be required to give any bond for appearance before the United States court. It is said that Government losses of $30,000 will be indicted by the grand jury.

ANOTHER MILL.

[illegible] Garrett and H. W. Lash, members of the firm of Garrett, Crom[illegible] & Co., rod mill builders, of [illegible], Ohio, have been in the Birmingham district recently. Their presence gave rise to a rumor that a big steel rod mill to cost a quarter of a million would be built there.

KILLED BY AN OFFICER.

[illegible] night Officer Richardson, of [illegible], found three boys tampering with the rear door of a Second [illegible] store and when he attempted to arrest them they ran. The officer gave chase, but the boys being fleeter, he [illegible] killing one of them almost instantly. For several hours the boy was unidentified, but finally was recognized as Oscar Lee, of Memphis. [illegible] who identified him were two Memphis boys who were with him. These are held by the police. The officer is almost broken hearted over the dead.

RAILROAD CHASE

[illegible] afternoon an L. & N. freight had an exciting race of ten miles to get out of the way of a parted section of the train. It parted as it was coming down Hartselle hill. All the way to Decatur is down grade. The conductor signalled to go ahead at full speed and the engineers opened wide the throttles and sped down the hill at a rate of sixty miles an hour. The parted section was within 200 yards of the front section all the way down and if it had struck the results would have been serious. Hartselle is a dangerous section of the road and train men are always relieved when it is passed over in safety.

ROBBED AND BEATEN.

[illegible] City was the scene of a [illegible] robbery Monday. John [illegible], ex-policeman of Alabama City, Bob Inglett, Bob Prince and M. [illegible], attacked J. C. White, T. [illegible] and G. L. Grubbs, robbed them and seriously injuring the latter. Holland resisted arrest and was shot at three times before it was [illegible].

THE FIFTH TIME.

Let us study carefully the history. 1. Joseph sending for his about 200 miles along the usual route, but it was a long hard journey an old man with women and children

Beersheba God sent Jacob a vision for encouragement, confirming the purpose and bidding him go on to Egypt and Jacob see the real beginning of the journey, but it was one of the in the chain of divine providence that

The number of Jacob's children that was seventy-five. Acts 7: 14.

3. The meeting of Jacob and Joseph.
46: 28-34. When Jacob reached the of Goshen Joseph went forth in his chariot to meet his father. Joseph fell on father's neck and wept on his neck good while. It had been nearly twenty three years since Joseph had left his father to go to Shechem.
4. The meeting of Jacob and Pharaoh.
47: 1-10. First Joseph selected five his brethren and introduced them
Pharaoh, who welcomed them and Joseph gave official positions to any proved themselves men of activity, ability and integrity. Then Joseph introduced his father to the king. Here Joseph shows the nobleness of his character in not being ashamed of his father. Jacob's address of his life to Pharaoh is very touching.
Sin and sorrow had weighed him down and was bringing him to an early old age.
5. Jacob blessing his sons. Chap.
48: 1-20. The time was approaching when Jacob knew he must die. He is sick nearly blind. Joseph took his two sons Manasseh and Ephraim to his father who blessed them. "In this scene we but notice the prophetic adoption
Ephraim and Manasseh as his own and heads of tribes and the giving of chief blessing to Ephraim, the younger
Ephraim became the leading tribe next Judah. Just before his death Jacob blessed concerning his sons and nounced blessings upon them.
6. Jacob's death and burial. 49:
50: 14. Jacob was 147 years of age when he died. Before his death he secured solemn pledge from Joseph that he would bury him in Egypt (47: 29-31), and he charged them to bury him in the where Abraham and Isaac were buried.
These instructions were carefully carried out. At this time Joseph revisited scenes of his boyhood, after an absence forty years.
15. "Saw their father was dead," at once argues both a sense of guilt their own consciences and a want of fidence in their brother.
16. "Thy father did command" though this is not recorded elsewhere was undoubtedly true. They had probably asked their father to help them in trouble. Jacob must have advised to humble themselves before their brother and obtain a fresh assurance of his givenness.
17. "Forgive," etc. These words wonderfully well chosen, and were kely in a way to appeal in the most ble manner to Joseph's piety and fection. They cast themselves wholly his mercy. "Joseph wept." How ing! He wept out of sympathy with deep sorrow of many years which not but forgiveness and reconciliation alleviate.
18. "Fell down." Thus again and do we see the fulfilment of Joseph's dreams in a remarkable manner. 37: 5-8.
19. "In the place of God." I have given you and the matter is now between you and God. I am not your judge to ish you.
20. "Ye meant evil" (R. V.) And Bad Coughs

"I had a bad cough for six weeks and could find no relief until I tried Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Only one-fourth of the bottle cured me."
L. Hawn, Newington, Ont.

Neglected colds always lead to something serious. They run into chronic bronchitis, pneumonia, asthma, or consumption. Don't wait, but take Ayer's Cherry Pectoral just as soon as your cough begins. A few doses will cure you then.

Wheat for Farm Animals.

Elaborate experiments in feeding wheat to farm animals and swine have been made this year at the Kansas experiment station, and also in other states of the corn belt. The experts conclude that wheat has greater nutritive value than corn, and may be used either crushed, mixed with oats or corn, or in connection with straw in time of extreme scarcity.

Dinner Party of Twelve.

A charming dinner table, arranged for a party of twelve, was spread with a cloth of the finest white linen elaborately open-worked, lace-edged and inserted with Hungarian handmade lace. This cloth was laid over a slip of pale green satin. The flowers chosen were sweet peas of all colors, mingled with green and white ribbon, ribbon glass, revers arranged in delicate Greece glasses, with gold rims and gold monogram. The table glasses matched the flower glass and the linen napkins were lace trimmed and drawn to match the tablecloth.

Refitting Old Cars.

A car-refitting company in New York city buys old Pullman coaches, tears the inside furnishings out and refits them according to the wishes of its customers. Whatever kind of private car a man may wish he may order—parlors, handsomely carpeted, sitting-rooms, dining-rooms, sleeping compartments, smoking-rooms—all with equipment more or less perfect, according to the price. And cars are refitted in this way and sold for prices varying from $1,500 to $15,000. Very handsome and serviceable cars have been built from the old "castaways," and the man of moderate means can travel privately and comfortably in a home of his own.

SYRUP OF FIGS

IS AN EXCELLENT FAMILY LAXATIVE—
IT IS REFRESHING TO THE TASTE AND ACTS PLEASANTLY AND GENTLY.
IT ASSISTS ONE TO OVERCOME HABITUAL CONSTIPATION PERMANENTLY

With many millions of families Syrup of Figs has become the ideal home laxative. The combination is a simple and wholesome one, and the method of manufacture by the California Fig Syrup Company ensures that perfect purity and uniformity of product, which have commended it to the favorable consideration of the most eminent physicians and to the intelligent appreciation of all who are well informed in reference to medicinal agents.

Syrup of Figs has truly a laxative effect and acts gently without in any way disturbing the natural functions and with perfect freedom from any unpleasant after effects.

In the process of manufacturing, figs are used, as they are pleasant to the taste, but the medicinally laxative principles of the combination are obtained from plants known to act most beneficially on the system.

DEFECTIVE ORIGINAL

MAN ON THE CORNER

[illegible] Do Know, and Some Do Saw Not.

[illegible] I had a regular [illegible] from an old friend in [illegible] because we [illegible] upon the new constitution. [illegible] Says [illegible] constitution is [illegible] and you must not say there [illegible] Asked to explain [illegible] "wrong about", and all [illegible] "never mind" [illegible] Am I not to be [illegible] my honest convictions upon such an important [illegible] as the State's constitution [illegible] with div[illegible] and principles, merely because my opinion differs from some [illegible] friends? When my friends [illegible] I am with them, when they are wrong I beg leave to differ.

[illegible] believe that I have studied the new constitution as deeply [illegible] as any man in Chilton county. I state this as prejudiced [illegible] as any man could be, although (like some of my friends) [illegible] the determination not to find [illegible] good in it at all, at all. But [illegible] I did I found myself forced [illegible] there was plenty of good [illegible] and nothing to be afraid of. [illegible] suffrage clause I gave especial [illegible] to, firmly resolved to vote against ratification if by any chance [illegible] white man would be likely to be deprived of his vote. And that what I did not find. I am as [illegible] convinced that every white man will be registered as that I intend to vote for ratification next [illegible], and I hope you will, too.

[illegible] the fifteenth amendment [illegible] Federal constitution standing [illegible] way it is hard to call a spade [illegible] and this is what gives the [illegible] of ratification a peg to [illegible] their try of the disfranchisement [illegible] white man. The suffrage [illegible] had to be made to fit [illegible] conditions, and so far as the [illegible] is concerned it is a very [illegible] at indeed, but the colored [illegible] will find it a very awkward [illegible] to put on. There is not [illegible] doubt as to the result, and people will be the majority.

NOTICE

[illegible] the name of Jake [illegible] will be given if any person [illegible] would persuade [illegible] home, as his mother is [illegible] about him. He is a [illegible] boy and is anxious to go to [illegible] school. Gentlemen, please help him [illegible] home. I am living near [illegible]

TO CURE A COLD IN ONE DAY

Take Laxative Bromo-Quinine Tablets. All druggists refund the money if it fails to cure. E. W. Grove's signature is on each box. 25 cents.

Editor Banner—During the late canvass to determine whether a convention should be held in this State to frame a new constitution, some of the writers who opposed such a step, declared it would be out of similar proceeding in the States of Mississippi and South Carolina and predicted direful results from the movement, as the inevitable result of the success of the move.

The evidence of that remarkable politician, Hon. Jess Stallings, was quoted to show how a poor, ignorant, illiterate white man in Mississippi was denied the right of registration by the arbitrary and cruel Registrars, who, it was asserted, had unlimited power to disfranchise the poor white men, who was not of their political faith.

Mr. Reynolds gave his own observations during a late trip to South Carolina, of the working of the election law in that state, as administered by the Registrars under the new constitution, and the disfranchisement of poor white men, under arbitrary rulings of the Registrars, and warned the citizens of Chilton, that a similar fate would be theirs, should they vote down the proposed constitutional convention, which in his opinion was set on foot by the Democrats, for partisan purposes.

There are two sides to this question, and truth and justice demand that both be heard to reach a correct conclusion. Let us then put some other witnesses on the stand, who, to say the least, are equally as well informed, and quite as worthy of belief, as those who testified adversely.

The first witness is Hon. M. B. McSweeney, Governor of South Carolina, who differs "in toto" from Mr. Reynolds, as to the practical working of the new constitution in his State. In a communication to Hon. S. J. Bowie, our member of congress from this district, he asserts unqualifiedly, "Very few, few negroes registered in this State. All of the whites are registered. No complaint against our elections."

(Signed) M. B. McSWEENEY.

This does not tally with Mr. Reynolds' observations in his brief visit to that State.

Now, as to charges against the Mississippi law Congressman John S. Williams, of that State, declares: "Our new constitution has secured peace politically, industrially and socially. It has given honest and intelligent men a better opportunity as competitors for public office. It has secured fairness in elections. It has resulted in having a better behaved, a better contented, and more prosperous colored population. I do not suppose there is a white man within the entire limits of Mississippi, from the Tennessee line to the Gulf of Mexico, from the Alabama line to the Mississippi river, whether he be Democrat, Populist or Republican, who would have back the old order of things, existing prior to the adoption of our new constitution, and I do not suppose there are 200 negroes in the entire State, who are not satisfied that the present conditions are better in the long run, for the races and for themselves."

Whose testimony is most worthy of acceptation, that of Mr. Reynolds, who is bitterly opposed to the whole movement, and Mr. Stallings, who blows hot or cold, according to the direction in which his political interest points, both distant from the scenes of which they speak; or shall we give credence of Gov. McSweeney and Congressman Williams, men of high character, who are on the spot and know by experience the practical workings of the law, concerning which they testify?

Let the candid and honest enquirer weigh the testimony and decide which is right. Civis.

It Saved Her Life.

Gooch's Mexican Syrup has accomplished a cure in this neighborhood which has astonished the people. Miss Davis was given up to die by her attending physician. She had lung fever. The doctor said she would die before morning, and advised to discontinue his medicine, as it was doing her no good. Her parents had a bottle of Gooch's Mexican Syrup and Gooch's Quick Relief in the house. They at once began to give the syrup in doses one hour apart, and frequently bathed her chest with the Quick Relief. Before morning she was better, and after using a few bottles of each, she is almost as well as ever. It was almost like raising the dead, and has established the reputation of Gooch's Mexican Syrup here as a cough remedy; we can sell nothing else.

UNIVERSITY SCHOOL
PLANTERSVILLE, ALA.

Is a training and strictly private school for boys and girls.

Correlated to the University of Alabama and to the Alabama Polytechnic Institute.

Has fitted more pupils for college, more pupils for teaching, more pupils for advanced business positions than all other schools in Chilton county combined. It is the only school in Chilton county whose pupils have a First Grade Certificate under the present school laws.

Its course of instruction is the best arranged, its methods the soundest, most thorough and up-to-date; its scholarship the most advanced; its location, buildings, grounds, furniture, equipments, the most attractive and best adapted of any school in Chilton county.

Its pupils enter any college in the South on certificate of the Principal. It deals honestly with the public, adheres to professional courtesy, and performs its promises. Its mission is to build up, not to pull down. It is not, as some are, a mere common school called "College," "Normal," etc., by which misnomers the uninformed are misled.

$101 pays all expenses of board, tuition, fuel, lights, etc., for session of nine months. School opens September 25, 1901. Write for catalogue.

THE BANNER.

Published Weekly.

OLANTON, - - - ALABAMA.

As a matter of law, right and public safety the trial of every murderer should be as prompt and clear and decisive, if not as brief, as that at Buffalo.

The shipment of 2500 Angora goats to Southern Maryland will provide the material for an interesting experiment. While the Angora goat may be valued for its fleecy coat it is unreasonable to expect that it will supplant the opossum as a popular luxury.

Intellect can hide itself behind the grotesque face of Socrates or the high-bred features of Goethe. Similar traits of character may be associated with the lofty stature of Abraham Lincoln or the diminutive form of Lord Roberts, observes the Christian Register.

In a recent interview Count Tolstoi said: "One is so well off when ill you feel detached from all bodily things. You see only life of the spirit soul. Don't talk to me about people who never are or never have been ill. They are terrible, specially women. A woman always in health is verily a ferocious beast."

The foreign diplomats at Washington were surprised, it is said, at the simple character of the late President's funeral. In Europe an occasion of this sort partakes of the nature of a carnival week. In this instance it was too sad for pomp and display. The simplicity of the occasion was in keeping with the life and character of the man, and the silence of the people was the best evidence of their deep grief.

A woman dentist would have been a curiosity in the United States a generation ago, but she excites no surprise now. We have become used to her and have justified her entrance into one of the most useful of all professions. It is useless to oppose the progress of women in the professions as well as in industrial occupations. It is proceeding steadily and irresistibly and prejudice must stand aside before it, or be run over by it, thinks the Atlanta Journal.

All the leading meteorologists in the United States, in the Weather Bureau and out of it, in book, article, lecture and government publications for years have set out clearly and distinctly the non-existence of any such thing as an equinoctial storm. Moreover, they have also explained how, owing to the fact that September is the month of maximum development of the West Indian hurricanes, the belief originated and is from time to time seemingly confirmed by the actual weather facts.

Agriculture is the basis of American national progress. It is for the welfare of all the nation, therefore, that every benison science and love can bring to the family shall be brought to the farmer. It is for the advantage of American society that the tide shall be turned back from the congestion, moral and physical, of cities, into the freedom, the independence, and the simplicity of the farm. All other avocations depend for prosperity upon the prosperity of the farmer, reflects a writer in Harper's Bazar.

Here's an instance in which a man utilized his mouth for something even better than talking. Bertram Hines, an Englishman, became a painter in spite of the fact that he lost both his arms in an accident when he was a child. He had developed at that time a taste for drawing, and the loss of his arms did not swerve him from his determination to become an artist. He therefore set to work holding his pencil or brush with his mouth. At the age of sixteen he exhibited a water color study at the Bristol Fine Art Academy, and a little later won an art scholarship valued at 100 guineas.

Every physician knows that some people lie down and die with slight ailments who might have lived if they had cared to live or if they had been courageous enough to throw off the misgivings which prepared them for more violent disorders. One man having a cold attends to it with cheerfulness and soon recovers. Another, falling into a mood of depression, makes himself a hospitable host for the germs of pneumonia, and so dies. Science, common sense, and the ordinaray experiences of mankind furnish ample evidence of the remedial value of faith, hope, and charity, remarks the Christian Register.

THE PAN-AMERICAN OVER

AND A FINANCIAL LOSS WILL BE RECORDED.

THAT NIAGARA BARREL PROVES A BIG HIT

Threw Pepper in the Guard's Eyes—Requisitions Refused—Kiss Had Death with It—Governor in the Lock-Up—Silver Missing.

A MATTER OF HISTORY.

The Pan-American Exposition ended at 12 o'clock Saturday night, when President Milburn pressed an electric button and the lights in the famous electric tower grew dim for the last time. The exposition has not been a financial success, but it is believed the benefits derived from it will be of great value to the commercial interests of the country. The financial loss will be in the neighborhood of $3,000,000. The loss will fall upon the holders of the common stock, the holders of second mortgage bonds and the contractors who erected the buildings. The total number of admissions for the six months was close to 8,000,000. An average of 2,000,000 a month had been figured on by exposition officials. The great snow storm of last April was a severe blow to the exposition. The killing of President McKinley was another. The attendance had been increasing steadily up to the date of the assassination, but the gates were closed for two days, and when they were reopened there was a drop of 12 per cent in the attendance, and no improvement followed.

PARTIALLY SUCCESSFUL.

Mrs. Anna Edson Taylor, who went over the Horseshoe Falls in a barrel in order to secure money with which to pay off the mortgage on her home in Texas, gathered the first fruits of her daring venture when she was paid $200 for a magazine story she is to write of her terrible voyage down the rapids and over the falls. Mrs. Taylor has said since her feat that if the authorities had stopped her, she would have jumped off the suspension bridge and ended it all. It was dollars or death with her and she won. She has already proven herself to be a business woman. The money for the magazine article was at once deposited in the bank in her name and her manager has nothing to do with it. She has received an offer of marriage from a man who wrote that he was a teacher of physical culture, a science in which Mrs. Taylor has had a great deal of experience. Mrs. Taylor is threatened with brain fever.

THE GOVERNOR REFUSES.

Governor W. T. Durbin, of Indiana, in a lengthy communication addressed to Governor Beckham, of Kentucky, refuses to grant the requisition for the extradition of ex-Governor Wm. S. Taylor and Charles W. Finley, who have been indicted by Kentucky courts for complicity in the murder of Governor Wm. Goebel.

SIX INJURED.

A passenger train on the Little Rock & Fort Smith railroad was telescoped at Mayflower Friday, by a freight train. The rear coach of the passenger train was demolished and six passengers were injured.

A TON OF SILVER

Mysteriously disappeared from the criminal court room in Omaha last week. It had figured in a law suit.

LENDING MONEY NOW.

Count Esterhazy, of Dreyfus case notoriety, is now a money lender in London, and has laid himself open to prosecution for acting in that capacity without being registered. Esterhazy carries on his transactions under the name of Voilement and apparently is quite conversant with all the tricks of the trade.

NINE CHILDREN

Were bitten by a mad dog in Colorado Springs on October 26th, and were rushed to Chicago for treatment. No fatalities so far.

RECEIVER APPOINTED.

The comptroller of the currency has appointed Mark L. Crawford permanent receiver of the Eufaula National bank succeeding Bank Examiner DeSaussure, temporarily detailed. Mr. Crawford was appointed from Chicago, and has been an examiner in the comptroller's office for a number of years. The comptroller has not received a complete report on the bank's condition.

USED PEPPER.

C. A. Taylor, alias Charles Lowry, serving a ten-year sentence for robbing a bank at Chardon, O., assisted by two pals, escaped from Guard Bowman, of the Ohio penitentiary, on a Cleveland, Akron and Columbus train Saturday afternoon. Lowry had been taken to Cleveland to testify in a case, and he was being returned to the penitentiary. As the train reached the outskirts of Columbus two men suddenly grappled with the guard, one throwing a handful of cayenne pepper in his eyes. The prisoner, who was handcuffed, started for the car door, followed by his pals. The prisoner and his pals jumped from the train and started across the country with the guard in pursuit, the latter firing several shots, but without effect. Reaching a road they held up E. Horney, a prominent citizen of Chillicothe, O., and his wife, who were passing in a phaeton, and compelled them, at the point of revolvers, to surrender the vehicle. The prisoner and his pals were soon out of sight. The guard was unable to continue the chase, and came on to the city to secure treatment for his eyes.

AMERICA AT THE CORONATION.

The American exhibition in Crystal Palace to celebrate the coronation year will be strictly confined to a display of the wealth, industry, science and art of the United States. American entertainments and shows will be introduced, and in the grounds characteristic American sports will be conducted by representative teams. An American advisory committee has been formed consisting of many prominent members of American society in London, who are working in co-operation with Henry Gilman to make the exhibition the most complete and representative ever held. Earnest Schenck, the chairman of the Crystal Palace Company, has been to America in this interest and has met cordial approval of the project everywhere. The exhibition will extend from May to September.

LOCKED UP THE GOVERNOR.

Among a lot of boys arrested at Columbia, S. C., for confetti throwing was the son of a prominent citizen. He seized Gov. McSweeny, who was passing, and begged to be saved from the guard house. The police declined the fine the governor offered to deposit, and his juvenile friend held him with a death-like grip. The police started off with the boy and the boy pulled the governor. The patrol wagon came up and governor and boy were hustled in and taken to the "lock up." Hundreds followed and surrounded the station house, where the governor was kept for a half hour until the captain of the police permitted relatives to put up a forfeit for the boy, who so summarily and persistently held the chief executive prisoner.

DEATH IN THE KISS.

John Chartrand, manager of a skating rink at Hoboken, N. J., is dead from the effects of a pistol wound in the head, and his wife is under arrest pending investigation. Mrs. Chartrand's story is that she put her arm around her husband's neck to kiss him good-bye, and that the revolver which he had just given her, in some way was discharged. The bullet entered Chartrand's head behind the left ear, and he died before he could be taken to a hospital.

THE WEST will have a base ball league next year.

ATTEMPTED REGICIDE.

While the dowager empress of China was embarking to cross the river Saturday before entering Ho Nan, an assassin attempted to murder her, and killed an attendant with a spear before he was cut down. The court has left Ho Nan en route for Pekin.

FRANCE

Has dispatched a small fleet of war ships to Turkey, with the intention of securing some port probably Smyma, to collect customs until France shall obtain the amount it has long claimed from Turkey.

C. H. Hicks, one of the Birmingham Age-Herald's stereotypers, while working on the plates for last Sunday's supplement, unfortunately placed his hand in the shaving machine and suffered the loss of six fingers. The first, second and third fingers of the right hand were cut off just below the second joint, and the first, second and third fingers of the left hand were severed just above the same joint.

OIL WHERE THEY DESPAIRED

THE RACE FOR THE SECRETARYSHIP OF STATE.

BURGLARS AT WORK IN VARIOUS SECTIONS

Fatal Inattention to Repeated Warnings—Presbyterians in Session at Huntsville—Boy Loses a Foot—State News Brevities.

IN AN OLD WELL.

R. R. Zell, president of the Southern Industrial Co., has returned from Reid's Gap, in Blount county, where he has been testing an oil and gas well on his company's property at that place. He says that both oil and gas will be found in paying quantities and he brought with him samples taken from the well at a depth of 1800 feet. The well was dug twelve years ago by a company from Pittsburg, but was stopped up and the prospectors left the country and never returned. They were unfortunate," said Mr. Zell, "one of them succumbed to an attack of typhoid fever: the partner took the body back home, and sent for his men to leave the place. Since then the well has remained stopped up." The plug in the top of the well was twenty feet long. As it was drawn out a match was applied to the mouth of the pipe and gas burned with a blueish flame. Tests of the water were made, and it was found impregnated with oil. On account of the alkaline nature of the water, the oil readily mixed with it, and did not come to the surface as is usual. Mr. Zell and his associates will have the water pumped out, and if necessary will bore the well one thousand feet deeper. He says the pressure of the water is great and until this is removed it will be impossible for the gas to escape. If the gas is found in sufficient quantity Mr. Zell says it will be piped into Birmingham and more wells bored. Machinery has already been ordered with which to do the work.

AT WORK AGAIN.

Burglars have been at work in Tuscaloosa. The store of Mr. H. Gluck was entered early Friday morning and a little over $15 was taken from the safe, which had the day lock on. The cash drawer was also relieved of its contents. The office of the Tuscaloosa Laundry was entered the same night and the cash register stolen. Mr. Simpson, however, had deposited what money he had in the bank, and is only out the register.

THEY DIDN'T GET IT.

The safe of the Southern Express Company, at Hollywood, was blown open Friday night and badly damaged. Several hundred dollars belonging to local cedar companies, together with the money of the express and railroad companies, was in the safe, but the burglars were alarmed at the excessive noise of the explosion and fled.

SAD ACCIDENT.

Crawford, the 16-year-old son of D. C. Byrne, chairman of the executive committee of the democratic party of Baldwin county, accidently discharged a gun while out hunting Wednesday, the shot taking effect in his right foot. Amputation was found necessary.

J. W. PHILLIPS, a car inspector of the Alabama Great Southern, was caught between two cars at Bessemer last week and severely squeezed. His injuries are severe, but it is thought that he will recover.

IT'S ALL OVER.

Montgomery's fall festival closed Saturday. It has not been as complete a success as its two predecessors, and it is not likely that another will be attempted. The fair association may come out free of debt. The redeeming features were the boat races and the vaudeville performance at the auditorium. The latter was really a treat, and the former seems likely to eventuate in the organization of a boat club and the cultivation of the aquatic tastes of the community. The management has done remarkably well, working against a quiet opposition throughout.

CLAIMS INSPIRATION.

While in his bar at Wilson, N. C., Wade Aycock was shot and killed by his clerk, George Gay. The latter then turned his pistol upon himself and inflicted serious but not necessarily fatal injuries. The shooting is supposed to have been the result of sudden insanity, as no motive is apparent. While in an unconscious condition Gay said: "God told me to do it."

OUT OF THE RACE.

The announcement that Senator James H. Nunellee, of Dallas, had withdrawn from the race for secretary of state has caused much gossip among politicians. Senator Nunellee was considered possibly the most formidable candidate in the field and it is said that other would-be aspirants were withholding their announcement awaiting the final decision of the Dallas candidate. It had been for some weeks rumored that in case Senator Nunellee received the appointment as circuit clerk of Dallas that he would withdraw from the state canvass. The rumor now comes that Audjutant General Brandon, of Tuscaloosa, and J. C. Adams, of Dale, chief clerk in the office of the commissioner of agriculture, will enter the race. Both are strong throughout the state and their candidacy would add much interest to the contest. There are three avowed candidates for the position, Frank N. Julian, of Colbert; W. A. Givhan, of Madison, and W. C. Bibb, of Montgomery.

POSTOFFICE ROBBED.

Thieves entered the postoffice at Montevallo Friday night, and blowing open the safe, looted its contents, amounting to about $100. It has been ascertained that the robbers first entered the blacksmith shop of A. M. Cross, selected the necessary tools, and proceeded to the postoffice. The safe was blown open with dynamite, the knob having first been knocked off with a monkey wrench. The door was hurled about ten feet by the explosion and considerably damaged the opposite wall. After robbing the postoffice the cracksmen proceeded to the Montevallo Drug Company's store and rifled the cash drawer but secured only a few cents. The postmaster had placed the bulk of the postoffice funds, $210, in another place.

FELL TO HIS DEATH.

Geo. Lamb, a white employe of the steel plant at Ensley, fell through an opening in some part of the gas producer Friday and was killed, the fall breaking his neck. He had been warned of the opening and only a short time before the accident his attention had been called to it. It appears from the statement of those nearest him at the time that he was drowsy and careless at the time of the accident. He was a trusted employe of the company.

IN HUNTSVILLE.

The Alabama synod of the Cumberland Presbyterian church met in Huntsville Friday, Rev. J. W. Caldwell presiding. Rev. I. D. Steele, of Birmingham, delivered the introductory sermon. Rev. J. L. Cooper, of the Birmingham presbytery, was elected moderator. Delegates from all parts of the state attended.

THE handle mill at Francisco, owned by the Southern Handle Co., of Huntsville, was burned down one night last week entailing a loss of $500. It is thought to have been the work of an incendiary. The company will rebuild at an early day.

ENSLEY'S new post office has $1,000 worth of new furniture.

AUDITOR SOWELL on November 1st sent out the warrants for the Confederate pension money. These warrants were sent to the various probate judges for distribution among the pensioners.

PREPARING FOR BUSINESS.

Col. W. P. Pinckard and W. P. McCrossin were in Tuscaloosa recently in the interest of the DeBardeleben Coal and Coke Company. While here they purchased 160 acres of coal lands from W. D. Seed, paying therefor $880, or $5.50 per acre. Mr. Seed is probably the largest land proprietor in the western part of Alabama, owning something over 11,000 acres. The Debardeleben Coal and Coke Company has opened mines two or three miles out from Dudley on the Alabama Great Southern Railroad, and will soon have a large amount of their output on the market.

TEXAS SHOOTING.

J. W. McDonald and his wife, Susan, were shot from ambush on the banks of the Brazos river near Waco, Tex., and both were killed. They were fishing near their tent when some one fired on them. The shot that killed the wife was evidently very one, for the woman's clothing took fire and her body was burned to a crisp. The murderer was evidently after money.

THANKSGIVING DAY NOW

IN A PROCLAMATION BY PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT.

UNCLE SAM WANTS MORE NOW

Guatemala Sends Special Messenger to Express Regrets for McKinley's Death—Roosevelt to Visit Charleston—We Want Fang Called Home by China.

President Roosevelt has his Thanksgiving Day Proclamation ready for Thursday, November 28th, as the day of national thanksgiving. The proclamation is as follows:

A PROCLAMATION.

"The season is well nigh here, and according to the time honored custom of our people, the president must set a day as the especial occasion for praise and thanksgiving to God.

"This thanksgiving finds the people still bowed with sorrow for the death of a great and good president. We mourn President McKinley because we so loved and honored him, and the manner of his death should awaken in the breasts of our people keen anxiety for the country and at the same time a resolute purpose not to be driven by any calamity from the path of strong, orderly, popular liberty, which as a nation we have so far safely trod.

"Yet in spite of this great disaster it is nevertheless true that no people on earth have such an abundant cause for thanksgiving as we have. The past year in particular has been one of peace and plenty. We have prospered in things material and have been able to work for our own uplifting in things intellectual and spiritual. Let us remember that as much has been given us much will be expected from us, and thorough honesty must come from the heart as well as from the head and shows itself in the deeds. We can best prove our thankfulness to Almighty by the way in which we do our duty to his fellowmen.

"Now, therefore, I, Theodore Roosevelt, President of the United States, do hereby designate as a day of general thanksgiving, Thursday, the 28th of this present November, and I recommend that throughout the land the people cease from their worldly occupations and at their several homes and places of worship reverently thank the Giver of all good for the manifold blessings of our national life.

"In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

"Done at the City of Washington this second day of November, in the year of our Lord, 1901, and of the independence of the United States the one hundred and twenty-sixth.

("Signed) Theodore Roosevelt.

(Seal.)

"By the President,

"John Hay, Secretary of State."

The little Central American republic of Guatemala has sent a special embassy to Washington with a message of condolence to the United States upon the death of President McKinley. Dr. George Muenor is the bearer of the letter.

President Roosevelt has accepted the invitation of the South Carolina Interstate and West Indian Exposition to attend the exposition on Wednesday, February 12th, Lincoln's birthday. It is understood that President Roosevelt and all the living members of his cabinet will attend the exposition with the Presidential party.

Congress, at its last session, authorized the Secretary of the Navy Long to contract for needed additions to the navy yards, and the secretary now has let the building of about fourteen vessels in all for the navy. The bill for naval construction waste three battleships, two 14,000 ton battleships, two armored cruisers, six gunboats each of about 600 and 200 tons, and several colliers and picket boats.

The estimates for the expenses of the interior department for the fiscal year beginning next July aggregate $170,000,000, of which $28,200 is asked for pensions and the administrative work of the pension bureau.

The recall of Wu Ting Fang, the Chinese minister at Washington, has been decided upon. He will be offered, it is announced, a similar post in the foreign office by his abilities, which it is believed he will decline. Li Hung Chang's adopted daughter, Tseng, adopted son of Tseng, is a prominent social leader in the Washington mission. He is years of age and was educated in England.

BILL ARP'S LETTER

Old Darkey Man Changes Quickly From Sanguine to Sanguinary.

ROOSEVELT—WASHINGTON INCIDENT

Southern's Faith in New President Receives a Decided Shock—Wishes Editor Brann Were Among the Living Just Now.

It looks now like my old friend, Evan Howell, has lost his influence with the new president, and I have lost my faith. Hope and despair are sometimes not far apart. Last week I was sanguine, which means hopeful, confident, and now I am sanguinary, which means fighting mad.

"This world is all a fleeting show
For man's delusion given,
And you can't always sometimes must generally tell what is going to happen."

The smartest doctor can't diagnose every case, nor cure a disease if the patient does not want to be cured. My faith is shattered. I wish that Brann was alive with his iconoclast. May be he could do justice to the situation and give me the use of language. Bob Toombs said that fanaticism of our northern brethren about the negro fanned his indignation, and just so now our contempt is getting fired. The day after I read about it I couldn't realize it, nor did I believe it was as bad as pictured, and so I waited for light—more light—I had an idea that Booker Washington in some way had crept in about dinner time, and Mr. Roosevelt, having more heart than head, thoughtlessly asked him to sit down at his table. I thought that may be he sympathized with the man who had done so much for his race and was tabooed everywhere by white people and hotels and churches and white folks, cars and opera houses, and so his heart got the better of his head and he did it in haste and would repent at his leisure. I thought it was just one case, for the New York Press said it was unique. Then I remember that Cleveland invited the dusky queen of the Sandwich islands to the white house, and maybe Roosevelt looked upon Booker Washington as a kind of ambassador or chief of a foreign race, and I kept on thinking and guessing around for an explanation or palliation until it was discovered that the case was not unique, for he did a like thing before at Albany, while he was governor, and that he sent his children to school with negro children at Oyster Bay. Then I gave it up. He has sadly disappointed his friends and dishonored the state his mother came from and desecrated the president's mansion. It is no longer the white house, but, like the chameleon, takes any color that comes. Now I suppose that Miss Washington, who is at Wellesley college, will be a welcome visitor to the mansion during her vacation, and maybe Roosevelt's son will fall in love with her and marry her without leaving to elope. That is the tendency of this new departure—this unique case. But a hopeful man, an optimist, should wait a few days and ruminate. Time is a good doctor and I am not as mad this morning as I was last week. I think maybe that it is not as bad a case as I think it is. By nature I am a good deal like my good old kind hearted mother, who gently took every body's part who was abused. One day my father came home very mad with a man who had mistreated him and when he related his grievance to mother, she said: "Maybe the man didn't mean it and will make it all right after awhile." Father got irritated a little with mother and said: "Caroline, I believe you would defend the old devil if he was here on trial." And she said: "Well, I have sometimes thought that too much was laid on him."

I still believe that Roosevelt is naturally a good, big-hearted man and he didn't think that his official position limited his private and domestic rights. The white house was his home, his castle and he could ask in it or not out whomsoever he pleased. He was born and reared at the north, where a sound and amazing sympathy with the southern negro is almost universal. It monopolized the press and the pulpit, though they knew no more about the negro and his racial traits than we know about Bulgaria and the Macedonian bandits. What a foolish folly is that sympathy. Its tendency is to spoil the most contented and happiest race on earth. Sometimes I envy them their merry nature. Booker Washington seems in earnest in his efforts to elevate and refine his people, but I doubt whether he is really doing them any good. To labor is their nature and the higher education unfits them for it. I suppose that Tuskegee has turned out 2,000 or 3,000 graduates, but where are they and what are they doing? We never hear of one in this region and last year a professor from Tuscaloosa declared publicly in Atlanta that he had been to Tuskegee and investigated and could hear of only about a dozen out of 1,200 who were at work. The most of them came out mechanics or farmers, but they have been transformed into "gentlemen" and are living in their kinnolks. A few have been sent to Africa to start the cotton business, and it is to be hoped that the others will go there and stay. Brann

Education is not what the negro stands in need of. It is a reform in morals. It is the unprejudiced opinion of the most conservative observers that they are the most thievish, unchaste race upon the face of the earth, and they are infinitely worse now than they were when in slavery. In 1870 there were but 200 negro convicts in our penitentiary, and now there are 4,000 in Georgia, and the number increases as the years roll on in spite of schools, colleges and millions of northern money. The good negroes are on the farms and under the dominion of their landlords. It is safe to say that 75 per cent of the negroes about the towns and cities will steal, and that 50 per cent of the negro children are born out of lawful wedlock. Two of our negro barbers decamped to Bessemer last week—one has been keeping three wives and the other two, but they left them and took two new ones along with them. We have got so accustomed to this state of negro morals that it excites no comment. Some white men will rob banks and abduct children and hold up trains and embezzle money and cheat in trade and run blind tigers and moonshine whisky. But nearly all negro servants will take little things—little money or jewelry or a pair of scissors or stamped envelopes or a little rice or coffee or sugar. They will do this, and we submit to it, because they make kind, good-natured servants and we need them. And so the race problem goes on, but I will prophesy some good to come from Roosevelt. He is a crank about some things, but he is fearless, independent, self-reliant and will do just as he dogon pleases. Mythology tells us that King Augean had a herd of 3,000 oxen, whose stables had not been cleaned out for thirty years, and Hercules came along one day and got a whiff of the foul odors and turned two rivers through them and cleaned them out in a day. I believe that Roosevelt is for clean, honest work in the government departments and will clean out the Augean stables, if he has to turn the Potomac river through them. For thirty years this stench has nauseated us. He has just appointed Mr. Foulke to the head of the civil service commission. Foulke has long been the prosecutor of frauds, perjuries and evasions, the terror of postmasters, the watchdog of public officials, but he was handicapped by politicians. He will sweep the deck now, for he and the president are of one mind on that law. The vultures will no longer get all the spoils. But we want the president to let the negro alone. The race problem belongs to us and will be settled on a wise and humane basis if the fool yankee editors and preachers will let us alone.

But we will wait and watch and some good people will pray for deliverance—"deliver us from evil." I haven't given up Mr. Roosevelt yet. If we could only get him down here for two or three years he would become so disgusted with the negro and so exacting that they wouldn't hire to him. Our observation long has been that the northern people who come south to live soon get their eyes opened and understand the situation. Not long ago the editor of a Baptist paper in New York said that the south was not ready for it now, but the time would soon come when miscegenation would be found the best solution of the race problem. And only last week the editor of a republican paper defended Mr. Roosevelt and said that in another generation social equality between the races would be universal at the south and it was well to start it at the white house. With such malignant fools we can do nothing, for they are too far off. But they had better shinny on their own side.

P. S.—I am gratified that Mrs. Park and others have come to the rescue of Nancy Hart and have established her as a fact and heroine in our history of the revolution. We ought to have a state historian to record and preserve these things. Fifty years from now somebody will be saying that Bill Arp was a myth, and I wouldn't like it.

N. B.—We read that the American Missionary Association at Chicago have indorsed the president and commended social equality between the races. It is about time now for the blue and the gray to embrace again. Let brotherly love continue.

Later from the Front.—The unique has vanished and Roosevelt's capers have become multifarious, ubiquitous and ridiculous.

Hope for a season bids the south farewell. To your tents, Oh, Israel! Call off the dogs. I'm going out to work in my garden.—Bill Arp, In Atlanta Constitution.

With the trend of the country's progress, it may be well to note the unlimited demand for Western lumber. The supply sent to the Eastern markets has materially decreased, owing to the steady building of new Western towns. The vast, productive region beyond the Mississippi, which was marked in Peter Parley's geography as "The Great American Desert," has now become a theatre of business activity, and the dwelling place of thousands of prosperous, contented families. The trade of the Northwest has increased in the past ten years, according to Bradstreet's reports, over five hundred per cent., a statement that seems to be phenomenal. The West can also boast of hundreds of small towns, some less than a year old, and all progressing with vigor and rapidity. Their presence is due to the advance of transportation facilities into new sections, states Sun.

STATE ITEMS IN BRIEF.

J. F. HARRISON, of Abbeville Junction, Dale county, was knocked from the track and instantly killed by a Plant System train near Midland City last Wednesday night. The accident occurred about midnight and Mr. Harrison was alone at the time. His body was found lying beside the track early the following morning.

THE Presbyterian Synod of Alabama will convene at Livingston this week Wednesday and will remain in session several days. It will be called to order by the retiring moderator, the Rev. Dr. Neal Anderson, of Montgomery. All the ministers in the state and one ruling elder from each church will be entitled to sit as members of the synod.

BIG MORTGAGE.

The Knickerbocker Trust Company, of New York City, has filed for record at Florence a mortgage for $1,600,000 to secure bonds for the building of the Alabama and Tennessee River Railway on the line projected from Florence to Clifton, Tenn., a distance of eighty miles. J. L. Bell, of New York City, is President and George A. Sykes is treasurer. The road was projected by George L. Johnson, o Waynesboro, Tenn., and J. L. Bell who have been working on the project for several years. The railroad will run through one of the richest brown ore fields in the country.

A CONTRACT for four thousand new books was closed by the Dallas Manufacturing Company of Huntsville to be placed in its library for mill operatives at the Dallas Mills. The company has recently established a free library and a public park and the former will be extensive.

REPAIRS aggregating $5,500 will be made upon the university buildings at Tuscaloosa.

JUNE 25TH, 1902

Is the date set for the coronation of Edward VII of England, the ceremonies to last two days. Offense has been given to the English manufacturers by the king choosing for the robes a velvet only made in Lyons, France. English velvet is claimed to be quite as good and serviceable, but it cannot be obtained in the precise tint the king prefers. The manufacturers are preparing a letter of protest on the subject. Another difficulty has has arisen in deciding the type and make of the peers' coronets, owing to the fact that no genuine ones were obtainable until two were unearthed in the college of heralds. Many peers prefer to absent themselves from the ceremonial rather than wear coronets.

WON HIS CASE, THOUGH.

Attorney Victor Smith, of Atlanta, was painfully cut in the neck Friday in an altercation at Buena Vista, Ga., by Charles Moore, president of the Buena Vista Trading Company. Smith represented the defendant in a suit by the trading company against the Burden, Coleman, Warthen Company for $10,000 damages. Some letters were introduced during the trial which seemed to meet the disapproval of Mr. Moore. After the trial Moore invited Smith to the rear of the court house and while there told him that the letters were untrue. Words passed and it is said that Moore gave Smith the lie, whereupon Smith struck him, and Moore drew a knife and stabbed the Atlantan four times in the back of the neck. The wounds are painful, but not serious. The jury in the case about which the trouble arose rendered a verdict for $750.

TURKEY GIVES IN.

The dispatch of the French fleet for Turkey brought the Sultan to time. He agreed to pay the claims of France. The fleet goes right on, however, as France wants to know how and when payment will be made. Italy's fleet is on its way to join that of France.

FISK'S SLAYER DEAD.

Edward S. Stokes died Saturday afternoon, at the home of his sister, Mrs. McNutt, in New York City. Succeeding a severe attack which came while he was traveling in Canada, Stokes had for some time been in failing health. He was very low ten days ago, but rallied only to sink again. He began failing at midnight, and his strength slowly ebbed away to the end.

JURIST DEAD.

Judge A. D. Matthews, aged 67 years, dropped dead at his home at Ardmore, I. T., Saturday of heart disease. Judge Matthews was a pioneer resident of the Indian Territory and was the first United States commissioner under president Harrison.

NOT ON THE PROGRAM.

A captive balloon containing nine people, one woman and eight men, broke from the fastenings at San Francisco Saturday afternoon and floated to the neighborhood of Redwood City, about thirty miles distant. The occupants of the balloon landed unharmed. Among those in the balloon were Mrs. J. Dunsell, Edward G. Dudley, who is said to be an aeronaut of considerable experience, and a gymnast named Leon. The balloon had a lifting power of 4,000 pounds.

BRIEF FREEDOM.

Thomas Hart, under sentence for murder, and a Mexican named Leibas in jail at Denver for robbery, overpowered the deputy sheriff on guard Sunday and taking possession of a switch engine ran it four miles into the country and escaped. Section Foreman Martin fired a shot through the speeding engine, and from blood found on a cushion in the engine it is supposed that Leibas, who was working the throttle, was hit. When the men left the engine they opened wide the throttle and the locomotive ran seven miles before stopping. The latest report is that the men were encountered near Fortuna, a small mining camp, and a desperate battle ensued, resulting in the killing of Hart and the capture of Leibas.

FAR AWAY FROM HOME.

I. L. Beardsley, of Brooklyn, died in the railway hospital, St. Augustine, Fla., aged 82 years. He arrived from New York Saturday night before, to spend the winter in Florida, coming earlier than usual on account of ill health. He was formerly public librarian of Brooklyn, and was for many years connected with the Standard Oil Company. The body will be taken to Cleveland, Ohio, for interment.

MEXICO IN FIRST PLACE.

At Saturday morning's meeting of the Pan-American Congress, General Rafael Reyes, delegate of Columbia, in a speech full of praise for the United States, proposed that H. C. Davis, chairman of the United States delegation, be elected permanent president of the Pan-American conference. He said it was duty of courtesy. Mr. Davis declined saying that the Americans were not there for place of prominence, but to increase the general feeling of amity and good will among the American nations. Cobaro Balgosa, chairman of the Mexican delegation, was elected president of the American international conference, Lurat Peroira, of Brazil, was elected first vice-president and Balletzar Ehtrurpynian, of Salvador, second vice-president. Senor Carbo, of Ecuador, proposed Secretary Hay as an additional honorary president. Senor Calve, of Costa Rica, seconded the motion, and Senor Carrea, of Nicaragua, asked that the appointment be made by acclamation, and after another speech by Governor Reyes the conference accepted Carbo's proposal unanimously by acclamation.

ATTEMPTED FRAUD.

Since the reported drowning of Mrs. Bettie Collier, of Union Grove, in the Tennessee river near Paint Rock, many sensational reports have been current, based on the fact that a $5,000 life insurance policy had been taken taken out by her only a short while ago. The Union Central Insurance Company through its general and special agents, has investigated the case and obtained affidavits which go to show that a conspiracy had been formed to collect insurance on a disappearance and that Amos was to have been paid a portion. Charles Amos says that he took Mrs. Collier in a skiff a short distance, landed her safely, rowed across and threw out some of her wearing apparel and both their hats, reached a shallow place near the bank, got out and overturned the skiff and cried for help. Will Barber was waiting on the bank. He met him and together they spread the alarm. Mrs. Collier has been seen since the alleged drowning.

VITAL STATISTICS OF AVANNA.

A statement concerning the vital statistics of the city of Havana for the month of September, 1901, compiled from official reports on file in the division of insular affairs of the war department, shows that the health conditions were decidedly the best attained in any month. The least number of deaths occurring in any previous September since 1889 was 496 in 1899, the greater number, 2,307, in 1898. For September, 1901, there were 329 deaths. Taking the yellow fever year as commencing April 1, the record of the past eleven years show that for the six months up to the first of October the smallest number of deaths from this disease occurred in 1899, when there were 38 deaths; the greatest number in 1897, when there were 659 deaths. No smallpox has occurred in a year, and there was scarcely any cases of other infectious diseases.

SHEFFIELD MAY GET IT.

J. M. Brosius, the owner and patentee of the No Treadle sewing machine, is in Sheffield with the view of looking over the situation for the purpose of locating his plant there. He has a fully equipped plant at Terre Haute, Ind., that represents an investment of $300,000, and it is this plant that is proposed to be brought to Sheffield. Sheffield will do all in her power to secure it and it is believed her efforts will be successful.

Theodore Ingalls, of Louisville, has been appointed chief of the mail department, succeeding Emanuel Spelch, transferred to another branch of the service.

Portugal's new minister to Washington is Senor Horta Mac Pado.

SCIENCE AND INDUSTRY.

A well known doctor advises the adoption of a hard bed and that children should be trained from the beginning to sleep upon no other kind. It is certainly true that as a rule a hard bed conduces to the most refreshing kind of sleep, the feather bed, so dearly loved by our grandmothers, being enervating in the extreme.

In dredging to deepen the channels of the Shoalhaven and Moruya rivers, in New South Wales gold dust was accidentally discovered in the mud. An automatic gold saver was at once attached to the dredging machine and now it is estimated that enough gold will thus be obtained to pay the expenses of keeping the channels open.

Father Karner, who is assisted financially in his underground researches by the Austrian imperial academy of science, reports that he has discovered in Eselte, in Hungary, an artificial cavern of large size, with rooms, passages and steps. From writings and cuttings on the walls it appears that in 1686 many Hungarian nobles took refuge here. A woman's name, with the date 1738, is also visible. On the ground in the lowest vault a prehistoric urn with fragments of other ancient vessels, was found, showing that the cavern had been occupied in ancient times.

Professor Woodworth describes in a scientific paper a new movement for writers with the pen, for which he claims decided advantages over the older methods. He suggests that the paper be placed so as to slant to the right instead of to the left, when the horizontal lines may be followed by the whole arm, in the direction of the forearm, back toward the flank. Meanwhile impart to the wrist and forearm a back and forth motion, which shall produce the vertical strokes of the letters. This method, he says, will make rapid writing freer and more legible, with no tendency to degenerate into the flat scrawl. The movement has another advantage in that it may be taught with comparative ease to the left hand.

It is interesting to learn some of the results already achieved at the Durham county consumption sanatorium, recently opened in Weardale, Eng. In an interim report of 15 cases treated during the 19 weeks of the establishment of the institution at the end of 1900, the medical superintendent said: "These 15 patients gained on an average one and a half pounds in weight per capita each week, and at the same time their walking powers very greatly increased. The walks are extensive and varied and are along sheltered roads, by running streams, through woods, up hills, rising 700 feet, and across heather-clad moors 1400 feet above sea level. Almost all the patients remained out of doors the maximum amount of 11 1-2 hours each day and slept with their French windows wide open all night."

A caster intended particularly for use in metal bedsteads has been recently brought out. The caster is made with the usual wooden wheel and metal stem, but differs from other casters in the construction of the socket, which is made of cork. The cork is inclosed in a strong metal frame stamped from one piece of sheet steel and so shaped as to form both top and bottom plates connected by a side piece. The cork is so tapered as to allow the top end to go into the tube of the bed post easily, and when forced in until it is in as far as the lower plate, it is held rigidly in the tube. After many experiments it was found that cork would be especially suitable for the socket, as the cork adheres firmly to the tubing and also holds the stem in its place, a projection being formed on the end of the stem for this purpose. The stem can be made detachable, or, if desired, it can be permanently fastened by enlarging the projection on the end.

Slow Railroads in Porto Rico.

"There is great opportunity in Porto Rico for the railroad promoter," said D. C. Jennings, a civil engineer recently returned from that island. "There are at present only 126 miles of railroad there—82 miles along the northern coast, 34 miles along the western coast and 22 miles on the southwestern border. That mileage is exclusive of an 11-mile narrow gauge road and six miles of tramroad.

"All of the vast interior and the entire eastern portion of the island are without railroad communication with any place, and if the wagon roads within that area are like the stage route connecting Hormigueros, the southern terminus of the Agusdilla & Hormigueros railroad, with Yauco, the western terminus of the Yauco & Ponce railroad, travel on them must be something that the stranger is likely to remember until he gets to be very, very old.

"The gap between those two railroads is 20 miles, and the stage coach rushes the traveler across it in from 8 to 10 hours. The average rate of speed on the Porto Rico railroads is 12 miles an hour."—New York Times.

Fodily Proportions.

The proportions of the human figure are six times the length of the right foot. The face, from the highest point of the forehead, where the hair begins, to the end of the chin, is one-tenth of the whole stature. The hand, from the wrist to the end of the middle finger, is also one-tenth of the total height. From the crown to the stape of the neck is one-twelfth of the stature.

CIRCUIT Court will convene at Clanton for the Fall Term on Monday, November 25.

RATIFICATION is the question to be decided on Monday next, November 11. Spare an hour or two and vote for ratification.

YOURSELF and those unborn are concerned in your vote next Monday. Vote for ratification and you will vote right!

NOT one white man will be disfranchised. That is the secret of the new constitution. Vote for ratification!

WHAT, if any, objection can you possibly find to the new constitution? Some say the poor white man will lose his right to vote. That is not true. Every white man who can vote now, can register and vote under the new constitution. Vote for ratification!

THERE is nothing good in the old constitution that cannot be found in the new one, and, in addition to the good to be found in the old, there are more good things in the new constitution than can be found in the old. Vote for ratification and you will always be proud of having done so.

ON Monday next the voters of Alabama have to decide the momentous question of the ratification or rejection of the new constitution. This is a matter that comes home to every man, for upon the result depends the welfare and future prosperity, not only of every person now living, but also of those who come after us. Every voter should carefully weigh the merits and demerits of the old and new constitutions, and having made his decision vote accordingly.

This is not a question of party politics; it is not a question where prejudice or preconceived notions should be allowed to enter; it is not a question temporarily affecting the welfare of the State. But it is a question that deeply concerns you now and as long as you live, and also affects your children and grandchildren.

The Democratic party has declared it is not a party question, and has left the matter to every man to decide for himself. The Republican party has left it to its members to vote whichever way they think best. If any other party has taken any action we are not cognizant of it.

The Banner has never offered any advice to its readers it did not honestly believe was for their benefit. That which is good for you is good for us. We believe we have devoted as much time and thought studying the new constitution as any man in Chilton county, and we are profoundly convinced that the ratification of the new constitution is for the best interests of all. We hope to see Chilton county vote for ratification next Monday.

There is nothing to lose by voting for the new constitution, but on the contrary there is much to be gained. We are satisfied that it is only a matter of a short period of time when every man who votes in favor of ratification will congratulate himself upon having so done, and as he sees the growing prosperity of the State under the new organic law he will feel glad that his vote sided in the better condition of affairs generally.

DR. CUNNINGHAM AT CLANTON.

On Monday morning there was a fairly good attendance at the court house to hear Dr. cunningham on the new constitution. W. J. Dennis, chairman of the campaign committee, introduced the speaker. Dr. cunningham first explained the advantage of the new constitution over the old. He showed the necessity for a lieutenant-governor, and how that office would cost the State $300, for four years. Sheriffs, who were State executive officers, would in the event of neglect of duty, be impeached bp the supreme court, instead of the circuit court. The new constitution provides for an increase of three senators and five representatives. He carefully showed the advantage to the people of the new constitution over the old in the matter of local legislation. Under the new there could be no legislation enadted against the wishes of the people, who would have the privilege of voting directly on all matters concerning their interests. Under the new constitution there could be no stock law run over the heads of the people. If they did not want stock law, they would vote that way, and no legislation could be had in opposition to their wishes.

On the suffrage question the Doctor was especially eloquent. He said the paramount question in the constitution was not to take the privilege of voting from one solitary white man, but to take off every negro that possibly could be taken off. In order not to conflict Federals constitution, this was a hard matter, but it had been overcome, and under the new constitution every white man would be a voter, and but a very few negroes would enjoy the privilege.

He illustrated how every white man would be registered. He called upon all the old soldiers and decendants of soldiers in the ordinance to hold up their hands, and a large majority did so. Then he called upon every white man of good character to do likewise, and thus showed that under one clause or the other every white man would be registered. A few negroes who were in the ordinance were neither soldiers or decendants of soldiers, and the good character clause might hard for them to satisfy, so that nearly all the negroes will be left out.

During the canvass for constitutional convention it was often said that the new constitution would never be referred back to the people for ratification. This charge has been proved false, because now the people are to vote upon it on Monday next. Other charges that are now being made have no better foundation than that one had, and while it is absolutely certain that the new constitution will be ratified by a big majority of the white people I want to see the people of Chilton help to do it.

The recent massacres of our troops in the Island of Samar have recalled attention to general condition in the Philippines. In the Review of Reviews for November will be found two articles of exceptional importance dealing with those conditions. Capt. John H. Parker, who served in the archipelago for two years, and during that time had all the varied experiences that fell to the lot of our army officers in putting down the insurrection and restoring order in the islands writes on "The Last Phase of the Philippine Rebellion and the Problems Resulting Therefrom," while Capt. H. L. Hawthorne, another officer whose service in the Philippines has been extensive, defines "The Viewpoint of the Filipinos." Each article presents aspects of the Filipino character that have been imperfectly understood by many of the writers who have attempted to instruct the public regarding the Philippine situation. Captain Parker's account of the Katipunan Society is especially valuable. Captain Hawthorne disposes effectually of the claim that the insurrection was at any stage of its progress a patriotic uprising of a united people.

Pleasant Grove.

Editor Banner—Doubtless many of your readers have learned of the death of Mr. N. L. Maroney which occurred a few weeks ago, which was sad news to the people of this community, where Mr. Maroney had be n long and favorably known. Mr. Maroney was a worthy public spirited, christian gentleman, a kind father, a loving husband, an ardent church worker. The writer well remembers the beautiful autumn evening back in the seventies when Mr. Maroney and his loving wife were baptized by Rev. R. M. Honeycutt at Pleasant Grove; and now another lovely autumn day witnesses his burial by loving hands at Pleasant Grove. Mr. Maroney loved Pleasant Grove, and it is surely appropriate that his remains should rest at the place he loved so well. We sympathize with the sorrowing relatives. A FRIEND.

Moccasina.

Farmers have been very busy gathering; corn has been gathered and most of our farmers have made enough corn to make out with, and some cotton to sell and some are selling their cotton seed.

Mr. W. H. Gipson who has been sick with slow fever, for six weeks, is now convalescing, we are glad to say. His little son, Clevie, is also improving.

Messrs J. P. Nix and Lewis Waldrop were visitors to clanton last Monday. Prof. J. T. Martin, has secured a school at Ruderville and will move his family in a few weeks; we regret to give them up.

Several of our farmers have bought new wagons this fall.

Quite a number of our young men have bought new buggies and some new bicycles, so the wheels keep rolling. CLINT.

Plantersville.

It may be of interest to your readers to know that my school here has steadily grown since opening, about 25 additional pupils having been enrolled. My department today reached 83 pupils, the primary department a few more. The upper story of the school building is to be fitted up at once, as the lower rooms are full, and more pupils are to enter. The school building, a new two-story structure, stands upon a beautiful level campus of four acres. The upper story is finished and that is the part which is to be fitted up at once. Success to you,

yours truly, E Y McMORRIES

"Something New Under The Sun."

All Doctors have tried to cure CATARRH by the use of powders, acid gases, inhalers and drugs in paste form. Their powders dry up the mucuous membranes causing them to crack open and bleed. The powerful acids used in the inhalers have entirely eaten away the same membranes that they have claimed to cure, while pastes and ointments cannot reach the disease. An old and experienced practitioner who has for many years made a close study and specialty of the treatment of CATARRH, has at last perfected a Treatment which when faithfully used, not only relieves at once, but permanently cures CATARRH, by removing the cause, stopping the discharges, and curing all inflammation. It is the only remedy known to science that actually reaches the affected parts. This wonderful remedy is known as "SNUFFLES" the GUARANTEED CATARRH CURE and is sold at the extremely low price of One Dollar, each package containing internal and external medicine sufficient for a full month's treatment and everything necessary to its perfect use.

"SNUFFLES" is the only perfect CATARRH CURE ever made and is now recognized as the only safe and positive cure for that annoying and disgusting disease. It cures all inflammation quickly and permanently and is also wonderfully quick to relieve HAY FEVER or COLD in the HEAD.

CATARRH when neglected often leads to CONSUMPTION—"SNUFFLES" will save you if you use it at once. It is no ordinary remedy, but a complete treatment which is positively guaranteed to cure CATARRH in any form or stage if used according to the directions which accompany each package. THE HOME GOLD CURE.

An Ingenious Treatment by which Drunkards are being Cured Daily in Spite of Themselves.

No Nauseous Doses. No Weakening of the Nerves. A Pleasant and Positive Cure for the Liquor Habit.

It is now generally known and understood that drunkenness is a disease and not a weakness. A body filled with poison, and nerves completely shattered by periodical or constant use of intoxicating liquors, requires an antidote capable of neutralizing and eradicating this poison, and destroying the craving for intoxicants. Sufferers may now cure themselves at home without publicity or loss of time from business by this wonderful "HOME GOLD CURE" which has been perfected after many years of close study and treatment of inebriates. The faithful use according to directions of this wonderful discovery is positively guaranteed to cure the most obstinate case, no matter how hard a drinker. Our records show the marvelous transformation of thousands of Drunkards into sober, industrious and upright men.

WIVES CURE YOUR HUSBANDS!! CHILDREN CURE YOUR FATHERS!! this remedy is in no sense a nostrum but is a specific for this disease only, and is so skillfully devised and prepared that it is thoroughly soluble and pleasant to the taste, so that it can be given in a cup of tea or coffee without the knowledge of the person taking it. Thousands of Drunkards have cured themselves with this priceless remedy, and as many more have been cured and made temperate men by having the "CURE" administered by loving friends and relatives without their knowledge in coffee or tea, and believe today that they discontinued drinking of their own free will. DO NOT WAIT. Do not be deluded by apparent and misleading "improvement." Drive out the disease at once and for all time. The "HOME GOLD CURE" is sold at the extremely low price of One Dollar, thus placing within reach of every body a treatment more effectual than others costing $25 to $50. Full directions accompany each package. Special advice by skilled physicians when requested without extra charge. Sent prepaid to any part of the world on receipt of One Dollar. Address Dept. C 935, EDWIN B. GILES & COMPANY, 2330 and 2332 Market Street, Philadelphia.

All correspondence strictly confidential.

HOUSEWORK

Too much housework wrecks women's nerves. And the constant care of children, day and night, is often too trying for even a strong woman. A haggard face tells the story of the overworked housewife and mother. Deranged menses, leucorrhœa and falling of the womb result from overwork. Every housewife needs a remedy to regulate her menses and to keep her sensitive female organs in perfect condition.

WINE OF CARDUI

is doing this for thousands of American women to-day. It cured Mrs. Jones and that is why she writes this frank letter:

Glendeane, Ky., Feb. 15, 1901.

I am so glad that your Wine of Cardui is helping me. I am feeling better than I have felt for years. I am doing my own work without any help, and I washed last week and was not one bit tired. That shows that the Wine is doing me good. I am getting healthier than I ever was before, and sleep good and eat heavy. Before I began taking Wine of Cardui, I used to have to lay down five or six times every day, but now I do not think of lying down through the day. MRS. RICHARD JONES.

REV. DR. TALMAGE.

DISCOURSE BY THE EMINENT DIVINE LAST SUNDAY.

Subject: The Sweet Influences—We Are Affected For Good or Evil By Forces That We Seldom Recognize—Importance of Good Actions.

[Copyright, 1895.]

WASHINGTON, D. C.—In this discourse Dr. Talmage demonstrates that we are affected by forces that we seldom recognize and enlarges upon human accountability. The text is Job xxxviii. 31, "Canst thou bind the sweet influences of Pleiades?"

What is the meaning of that question which God put to Job? Have we all our lives been reading it, and are most of us ignorant of its beauty and power and practical suggestiveness? A meaningless passage of Scripture many thought it to be, but the telescopes were busy age after age, and astronomical observations kept on questioning the skies until the meaning of my text comes out lustrously. The Pleiades is a constellation of seven stars appearing to the naked eye, but scientific instruments reveal more than 400 properly belonging to the group. Alcyone is the name of the brightest star of that group called the Pleiades. A Russian astronomer observed that Alcyone is the centre of gravitation of our solar system. Hugh Macmillan says that the sun and its planets wheel around that centre at the rate of 422,000 miles a day in an orbit which it will take 19,000,000 years to complete. The Pleiades appear in the springtime and are associated with flowers and genial warmth and good weather. The navigation of the Mediterranean was from May to November, the rising and the setting of the Pleiades. The priests of Belus noticed that rising and setting 2000 years before Christ.

Now, the glorious meaning of my text is plain as well as radiant. To give Job the beautiful grace of humility God asked him, "Canst thou bind the sweet influences of the Pleiades?" Have you any power over the laws of gravitation? Can you modify or change an influence wielded by a star more than 400,000 miles away? Can you control the winds of the springtime? Can you call out the flowers? How little you know compared with omniscience? How little you can do compared with omnipotence!

The probability is that Job had been tempted to arrogance by his vast attainments. He was a metallurgist, a zoologist, a poet, and shows by his writings he had knowledge of hunting, of music, of husbandry, of medicine, of mining, of astronomy and perhaps was so far ahead of the scholars and scientists of his time that he may have been somewhat puffed up; hence this interrogation of my text. And there is nothing that so soon takes down human pride as an interrogation point rightly thrust. Christ used it mightily. Paul mounted the parapet of his great arguments with such a battery. Men of the world understand it. Demosthenes began his speech to the crown and Cicero his oration against Catiline and Lord Chatham his most famous orations with a question. The empire of ignorance is so much vaster than the empire of knowledge that after the most learned and elaborate disquisition upon any subject of sociology or theology the plainest man may ask a question that will make the wisest speechless. After the profoundest assault upon Christianity the humblest disciple may make an inquiry that would silence a Voltaire.

Called upon, as we all are at times, to defend our holy religion, instead of argument that can always be answered by argument let us try the power of interrogation. We ought to be loaded with at least half a dozen questions and always ready, and when Christianity is assailed, and we are told there is nothing in it and there is no God and there never was a miracle and that the Scriptures are unreasonable and cruel and that there never will be a judgment day, take out of your portable armory of interrogation something like this: What makes the condition of woman in Christian lands better than in heathen lands? Do you think it would be kind in God to turn the human race into a world without any written revelation to explain and encourage and elevate and save? And if a revelation was made, which do you prefer—the Zenda-Vesta of the Persian or the Confucian writings of the Chinese or the Koran of Mohammed or our Bible?

If Christ is not a divine being, what did He mean when He said, "Before Abram was, I am?" If the Bible is a bad book, what are the evil results of reading it? Did you see any degrading influence of the book in your father or mother or sister who used to read it? Do you not think that a judgment day is necessary in order to explain and fix up things that were never explained or fixed up? If our religion is illogical and an imposition upon human credulity, why were Herschel and Washington and Gladstone and William McKinley its advocates?

How did it happen that our religion furnished the theme for the greatest poem ever written, "Paradise Lost," and to the painters their greatest themes in the "Adoration of the Magi," "The Transfiguration," "The Last Supper," "The Crucifixion," "The Entombment," "The Last Judgment," and that all the schools of painting put forth their utmost genius in presenting "The Madonna?"

Why was it that William Shakespeare after amazing the world as he will amaze the centuries with the splendor and power of "The Merchant of Venice," and "Coriolanus," and "Richard III.," and "King Lear," and "Othello," and "Macbeth," and "Hamlet" wrote with his own hand his last will and testament, beginning it with the words: "In the name of God, amen! I, William Shakespeare, of Stratford-on-Avon, in the County of Warwick, in perfect health and memory (God be praised!) do make and ordain this my last will and testament, through the only merits of Jesus Christ, my Saviour, to be made partaker of life everlasting and my body to the earth whereof it is made?" Had Shakespeare lost his reason when he wrote his faith in Christ and the great atonement? Put your antagonist a few questions like that, and you will find him excusing himself for an engagement he must meet immediately.

These words also recognize far-reaching influences. Job probably had no adequate idea of the distance of the worlds mentioned from our world, but he knew them to be far off, and we, who have had the advantage of modern sidereal investigation, ought to be still more impressed than was Job with the question of the text, as it puts before us the fact that worlds hundreds of thousands of miles distant have a grip on our world. There are sweet influences which hold us from afar. There may have been in our ancestral line perhaps 200 years ago some consecrated man or woman who has held over all the generations since an influence for good which we have no power to realize, and we in turn by our virtue or vice may influence those who shall live 200 years from now. Moral gravitation is as powerful as material gravitation, and if, as my text teaches and science confirms, the Pleiades, which are millions of miles from our earth, influence the earth we ought to be impressed with how we may be influenced by others far away back and how we may influence others far down the future. That rill away up among the Alleghanies, so thin you think it will hardly find its way down the rocks, becomes the mighty Ohio, rolling into the Mississippi and rolling into the sea. That word you utter, that deed you do, may augment itself as the years go by until rivers cease to roll and the ocean itself shall be dried up in the burning of the world. Paul, who was all the time saying important things, said nothing more startlingly suggestive than when he declared, "None of us liveth or dieth to himself." Words, thoughts, actions, have an eternity of flight.

As Job could not bind the sweet influences of the Seven Stars, as they were called, so we cannot arrest or turn aside the good projected long ago. Those influences were started centuries before our cradle was rocked and will reign centuries after our graves are dug. Oh, it is a tremendous thing to live! God help us to live aright.

Astronomers can easily locate the Pleiades. They will take you into their observatories on a clear night and aim their revealing instrument toward that part in the heavens where those seven stars have their habitude, and they will point to the constellation Taurus, and you can see for yourself. But it is impossible to point to influences far back that have affected our character and will affect our destiny. We know the influences near by—paternal, maternal, conjugal—but by the time we have gone back two generations, or, at most, three, our investigations falter and fail. Through the modern, interesting habit of searching back to find the ancestral tree we may find a long list of names, but they are only names. The consecration or abandonment of some one 200 years ago was not recorded. It would not be so important if you and I, by our good or bad behavior, blessed or blasted only those immediately around us, but our goodness or our badness will reach as far as the strongest ray of Alcyone—yea, across the eternity. Under this consideration, what do you think of those who give themselves up to frivolity or idleness and throw away fifty years of their existence as though they were shells or pebbles or pods instead of embryo eternities?

I suppose one of the greatest surprises of the next world will be to see what wide, far-reaching influence for good or evil we have all exerted. I am speaking of ourselves, who are only ordinary people. But who can fully appreciate the far-reaching good done by men of wealth in Great Britain for the working classes—Mr. Lister, of Bradford; Edward Akroyd, of Halifax; Thomas Sikes, of Huddersfield; Joseph Wentworth, and Josiah Mason, and Sir Titus Salt? This last great soul, with his vast wealth, provided 756 houses at cheap rent for 3000 working people, and chapel and cricket ground and croquet lawn and concert hall and savings bank, where they might deposit some of their earnings, and life insurance for those who looked further ahead, and bathhouses and parks and museums and lecture halls with philosophical apparatus, the generous example of those men of a previous generation being copied in many places in Canada and the United States, making life, which would otherwise be a prolonged drudgery, an inspiration and a joy.

If something appears against us, they say, "Wait till I hear the other side." If disaster shall befall us, we know from whom would come the first condolence. Family friends, church friends, business friends, lifelong friends. In our heart of hearts we cherish them.

When the heirs of a vast estate in England wished to establish their claim to property worth $100,000,000 they offered a reward of $500 for the recovery of an old Bible, the family record of which contained the evidence requisite. But any Bible, new or old, can help us to a vaster inheritance than the one spoken of, one that never fades away.

The sweet influences of the heavenly world, which many wise men thought for a long while was Alcyone, the centre of the constellation of the Pleiades—world of our future residence, as we hope; world of chorus and illumination; world of reunion; world where we shall be everlastingly complete; world where our old faculties will be itensified and quickened and new faculties implanted; world of high association with Christ, through whose grace we got there at all, and apostles and poets, Habakkuk, and St. John of Patmos, and Edward Young, his "Night Thoughts" turned into eternal day; and Horatius Bonar of modern hymnology, and Hannah More, and Mrs. Hemans, and Mrs. Sigourney, who struck their harps till nations listened; and David, the victor over Goliath with what seemed insufficient weapons; and Joshua of the prolonged day in Gibeon, and Havelock, the evangelist hero, and those thousands of men of the sword who fought on the right side. What company to move in! What guests to entertain! What personages to visit! What choirs to chant! What banquets with lifted chalice filled with "the new wine of the kingdom!" What victories to celebrate!

The stories of that world and its holy hilarities come in upon our souls sometimes in song, sometimes in sermon, sometimes in hours of solitary reflection, and they are, to use the words of my text, sweet influences. But there is one star that affects us more with its sweet influences than the centre star, the Alcyone of the Pleiades, and that is what one Bible author calls the Star of Jacob and another Bible author calls the Morning Star. Of all the sweet influences that have ever touched our earth those that radiate from Christ are the sweetest. Born an Asiatic villager, in a mechanic's home, living more among hammers and saws and planes than among books, yet at twelve years of age confounding robed ecclesiastics and starting out a mission under which those born without optic nerve took in the clear daylight and those afflicted with unresponsive tympanum were made to hear and those almost doubled up with deformities were straightened into graceful poise and the leprous became rubicund and the widow's only son exchanged the bier on which he lay lifeless for the arms of his overjoyed mother and pronouncing nine benedictions on the Mount of Beatitudes and doing deeds and speaking words which are filling the centuries with sweet influences.

Christ started every ambulance, kindled every electric ray, spread every soft hospital pillow and introduced all the alleviations and pacifications and rescues and mercies of all time.

He was the loveliest being that ever trod our earth—more beauty in His eyes, more tenderness in His manner, more gentleness in His footsteps, more music in His voice, more dignity in His brow, more gracefulness in the locks that rolled upon His shoulders, more compassion in His soul.

Sweet influences of the Holy Ghost, with all His transforming and comforting and emancipating power. When that power is fully felt there will be no more sins to pardon, and no more errors to correct, and no more sorrows to comfort, and no more bondage to break. But as the old-time ship captains watched the rising of the Pleiades for safe navigation and set sail in Mediterranean waters, but were sure to get back into port before the constellation Orion came into sight—the season of cyclone and hurricane—so there is a time to sail for heaven, and that is while the sweet influences are upon us and before the storms overtake and delay. Open all your soul to the light and warmth and comfort and inspiration of that gospel which has already peopled heaven with millions of the ransomed and is helping other millions to that glorious destination. Do not postpone the things of God and eternity until the storms of life sweep and the agitations of a great future are upon us. Do not dare wait until Orion takes the place of the Pleiades. Weigh anchor now and with chart unrolled and pilot on board head for the reunions and raptures that await all the souls forgiven. "And they need no candle, neither light nor the sun, for the Lord God giveth them light, and they shall reign forever and ever."

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR NOVEMBER 10.

Subject: Israel Oppressed in Egypt. Ex. i., 1-14—Golden Text, Ex. ii., 24—Memory Verses, 8, 9, 13, 14—Commentary on the Day's Lesson.

1. "These are the names." Though this book is a continuation of the book of Genesis, with which probably it was in former times conjoined, Moses thought it necessary to introduce it with an account of the names and number of the family of Jacob when they came to Egypt, to show that though they were then very few, yet in a short time, under the special blessing of God they had multiplied exceedingly, and thus the promise to Abraham had been literally fulfilled. "His household." Which fact is of some importance in computing the time needful for their increase to such a large number as went out from Egypt in the exodus. A hint as to the numbers of the households may be gained from the fact that in Abraham's household there were at least 318 men who could bear arms. Gen. 14. 14. The servants were reckoned as part of the household, and were admitted to the covenant and recognized as Israelites. Gen. 17. 27.

5. "Seventy souls." This number included Joseph and his two sons, and it must have also included Jacob himself, but it did not include the wives and daughters.

6. "Joseph died." That is, Joseph had now been some time dead, as also all his brethren, and all the Egyptians who had known Jacob and his twelve sons, and this is a reason why the important services performed by Joseph were forgotten. Death removes the most useful men and the largest families. "All that generation." All the men of that age, Egyptians as well as Israelites.

7. "Were fruitful." There are five expressions in this verse joined together to give emphasis to the fact that there was a remarkable increase of the Israelites, beyond all ordinary calculations. One original word implies that they increased like fishes or insects. From the call of Abraham at Haran to their deliverance from Egypt was 430 years. During the first 215 years they had increased to only seventy souls, but during the latter half of the time, while they were in Egypt, they increased to over 600,000 fighting men, besides women and children. And this prosperity came notwithstanding the great persecutions to which they were subjected. It is thus clearly shown that the blessing of God is the great secret of true prosperity. "The land." Of Goshen. "Was filled." When the women and children are taken into account it will be seen that there must have been a great host. A conservative estimate has placed the number at 2,000,000 souls.

8. "A new king." One of another family, according to Josephus. The old rulers under whom Joseph served were overthrown, and an entirely new dynasty came into power that had no knowledge of or interest in Joseph. "Which knew not Joseph." This new king was not in sympathy with God's plans and purposes; he was envious in his disposition (v. 9), shrewd in his plans (v. 10), and cruel in his requirements. Vs. 11, 12.

9. "Said unto his people." He probably summoned a council of his nobles and elders to consider the subject. "More and mightier." They had risen to great prosperity, for during the lifetime of Joseph and his royal patron they had probably enjoyed a free grant of the land.

10. "Deal wisely." Their policy was shrewd, but it was not wise. Sin is always folly. Such a policy is at once short-sighted and wicked; short-sighted, since kind treatment would have made this rapidly growing people their fast friends and helpers; wicked, because it violates common morality. When men deal wickedly it is common for them to imagine they are dealing wisely, especially if their wickedness seems to be to their worldly advantage. "Lest they multiply." As well might the monarch of Egypt have sought to stem with his puny hand the ocean's tide as to prevent the increase of those who were the subjects of Jehovah's everlasting purpose. "Join—our enemies." The greatest enemies of Egypt were on the east, and the first great danger the king saw was that the Hebrews would join themselves to some invading army and fight against the Egyptians. "Out of the land." The king was also afraid the Hebrews might escape. The Egyptians would lose a large revenue if the Israelites should leave them, and steps were taken to prevent this.

11. "Taskmasters." Having first obliged them, it is thought, to pay a ruinous rent and involved them in difficulties, the new government, in pursuance of its oppressive policy, degraded them to the condition of serfs, employing them in rearing the public works, with taskmasters, who anciently had sticks—now whips—to punish the indolent, or spur on the too languid. "Treasure cities." "Store cities." R. V. Cities where arms and provisions were gathered, necessary for armies and caravans. "Pithom." Meaning "a narrow place." This was a city of Lower Egypt, situated on the eastern bank of the Nile. "Raamses." The same as Rameses. It was probably near by. These two fortified cities, built by the Israelites for Pharaoh, were both in Goshen. Rameses was the point from which the Hebrews started at the time of the exodus.

12. "The more they multiplied." The king not only oppressed the people, but he ordered the male children destroyed. Vs. 16, 22. But the more Pharaoh afflicted them the more God blessed them. Afflictions serve the purpose of developing the moral character. Divine chastisements tend more to growth than to destruction.

13. "To serve with rigor." Intending to depress their spirits and to rob them of everything valuable; to ruin their health and shorten their days and so diminish their numbers. The word translated "rigor" is a very rare one. It is derived from a word which means "to break in pieces," "to crush."

14. "Their lives bitter." This God permitted for wise and just reasons: 1. As a punishment for their idolatry, into which it appears many of them had fallen. 2. To wean them from Egypt, which was in many respects a desirable land. 3. To quicken their desires for Canaan. 4. That they might be aroused to earnest prayer for deliverance. 5. That God's power might be displayed in their freedom. "With hard bondage." So the bondage which Satan puts upon his servants is hard and makes the life bitter. The way of the transgressor is "hard" and "full of misery." But a deliverer was provided, and so in Christ we may all be set free. John 8: 36. "And in brick." Ruins of great brick buildings are found in all parts of Egypt.

The population of France, it is claimed, is increasing somewhat more rapidly than it was 10 years ago. France is not a dying nation.

President Diaz of Mexico has begun a crusade earnestly against gambling. He has authorized the Minister of War to begin action against gambling houses. Army officers found in these establishments will be dismissed from the service and turned over to the civil authorities. All civil servants found gambling are to be summarily discharged.

LABOR AND INDUSTRY

SOME ITEMS OF INTEREST TO UNION WORKMEN.

Industries Which Are Best Organized on the Workmen's Side Are the Most Prosperous in England—Well-Written Article on Arbitration.

PARTING OF OLD FRIENDS.

Two old friends stand at the station,
  Waiting for the coming train,
Poor old souls, anticipation
  Fills their hearts with dream-like pain.
They are waiting for the parting
When the train shall come and go,
And already feel the smarting
  Parting friends must ever know.

Thirty years of separation
  On Life's ever-changing stream,
Then a meeting at the station,
  Like awaking from a dream.
One short month they spend together,
  Talking over school day joys;
Once again to each a brother,
  Once again they laugh like boys.

All the intervening sorrow
  Is forgotten in their joy.
And the troubles of to-morrow
  Cannot now their hopes alloy;
Ah, but now has come the parting,
  And the words they hoped to say
Are consumed in sad heart smarting;
  Recollection drifts away.

Moments pass—no word is spoken—
  Hark, the whistle round the hill!
Sad eyes meet, the spell is broken:
  "Give me chaw terbacky, Bill!"
"Let me taste your own plug, Jakey;
  One last chaw——" The train draws nigh.
"Bless your soul, we're growing shaky—
  Well, old boy, good-by!" "Good-by!"

Ah, how old again they're seeming,
  As the miles between them grow;
All alone each one is dreaming
  Of those school days long ago.
Both their hearts are full and burning,
  And, in each ear, ringing still,
Are those words so full of yearning:
  "Give me chaw terbackey, Bill!"

—Faraway Moses.

Some English Industries Prosperous.

The American Federationist, of which Samuel Gompers is editor, prints replies from a number of prominent labor organization advocates in Great Britain, to an inquiry from Mr. Gompers as to whether it is true that England's industries are seeking other fields, and if so, whether this is the fault of the trades unions. The replies are all negative as to the influence of the unions. George H. Barnes, general secretary of the Amalgamated Society of Engineers, Manchester, Eng., says that "those industries which are best organized on the workmen's side are the most prosperous industries of the country." "The shipbuilding, engineering, coal-getting and cotton spinning are all well-organized industries, and were never so prosperous, whereas, on the other hand, the heavy textile industries, shoemaking and several other industries that might be mentioned, and which are but indifferently organized on the side of the work people, are dwindling."

Chinese Immigration.

Commissioner of Immigration Powderly, in his annual report, will probably not only recommend the re-enactment of the Chinese exclusion law, but proposes some new and more stringent regulations to prevent the entrance into the United States of Chinese by way of Mexico. Many Chinese are annually landed at San Francisco under contract to work on the plantations in Mexico. These are allowed to pass through the country, but the immigration officials are satisfied that no more than one-tenth of the whole number Labor Wins in Struggles.

M. T. Ingalls, president of the Big Four railroad system, says: "My observation in the last twenty-five years has been that labor has steadily won and capital lost in the struggle which always exists more or less." Mr. Ingalls is undoubtedly correct. For whatever the temporary reverses may be, organized labor usually emerges stronger than before.

Labor in the Blue Grass State.

One of the most active trades unionists in this country is L. J. Kieffer, of Jeffersonville, state organizer for Kentucky of the American Federation of Labor. Recently he made a tour of the state and met with great success in organizing unions. Wages have been increased and the conditions of the wage-workers greatly improved. Organizer Kieffer is earnest, intelligent and enthusiastic and expects great results from his efforts in the Blue Grass State.

A Word for Workers.

Make your ministry reach the people in the forms of purest culture if you can, but reach the people, with elaborate doctrine if possible, but reach the people; with classic speech if it may be, but reach the people. The great problem of life to an educated ministry is to make their culture a power instead of a luxury. Our temptations are all one way. Our mission is all the other way.—Professor Austin Phelps.

Westinghouse Inaugurates Bonus.

A bonus system has been inaugurated by the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company at is plant in East Pittsburg. The bonus is based on the net earnings of the company, and its distribution is among the assistant subforemen, and is paid quarterly, in addition to their salaries. If the system is a success it will be extended by the company to take in all skilled workmen of the plant Brotherhood of Railway Trackmen.

The Brotherhood of Railway Trackmen is strengthening its union, having absorbed the independent Canadian union, thus bringing the membership up to 107,000. The bootworkers have also reached across the border and gained four unions in Montreal, with 3,000 members, two large unions in St. Hyacinthe, and in Quebec and Three Rivers the same result is expected.

Employ a Community Doctor.

In Ludington, Mich., the Swedish residents have introduced a custom of their country in employing a community doctor. The local physicians, of course, charged a uniform rate for services, and this rate was higher than the Swedish people thought right, and so a health association was organized by the heads of 300 families, each of whom pays 50 cents a month toward the salary of a physician whose services are at their command. This, amounting to a salary of $1,800 a year, was not sufficient to command the services of an experienced physician, and the organization had to be satisfied with a recent graduate from a medical college.

New Orleans Captures Much Trade.

New Orleans is capturing much of such trade as we have with the Central American countries. This is a natural result of the growing trade of the Louisiana city in tropical fruits. The fruit boats of that city go to Port Limon, Port Barrios, Ceiba, Bocal del Toro, and other ports, making the merchants of those places familiar with New Orleans, and leading to an interchange of products to the advantage of the dealers at each end of the route. —New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Friederichshof Is Hers.

Friederichshof, at Cronberg, the palace wherein the late Dowager Empress Frederick died, is one of the most beautiful country seats possessed by the royalty of Europe. It is natural, therefore, that envious eyes should be now cast at Princess Frederick Carl of Hesse because, by the will of her deceased mother, she comes into possession of this estate. It is a spacious and sumptuously furnished palace, surrounded by a magnificent park, set in some of the most romantic country scenery in Germany. Upward of $1,000,000 was spent by its recent occupant in improving house and grounds. The young princess who is soon to occupy it is one of the sweetest-faced members of German royalty. She is the fifth and youngest child of the late Empress Dowager, and was the favorite during the last few years of her life. She was born April 22, 1872, and was named Margarethe. Her marriage to Prince Frederick Carl of Hesse occurred in January, 1893, and she has three sons.

ARBITRATION IN MASSACHUSETTS.

The Massachusetts State Board of Arbitration has made its annual report for the year 1900. The services of the board were not in great request, only fifty-four controversies engaging its attention, and in only a few cases did the board invited by the two parties to arbitrate the dispute. In the majority of cases the services of the board were tendered without solicitation. Sometimes they were declined and sometimes ignored altogether; in other cases in which the board actually succeeded in effecting a settlement it was very modest. The fifty-four differences in which it officiated involved numerous establishments and industries. In six of the cases the board acted on the joint petition of both parties involved; in the remaining cases it acted upon the request of one party, and in about four on the board's own initiative. Thus only about 10 per cent of the controversies were joint applications for arbitration. Altogether twenty-seven controversies were settled by the board as a result of interviews with both sides. In a number of cases the board accomplished nothing, but the effect upon the impression is that in many cases little was accomplished on account of a general disinclination of both employes and laborers to submit their disputes to arbitration. It is to be regretted that the board has it has never been invoked; it is authorized to investigate a controversy and on its own motion to which party is responsible or blameworthy, to publish its finding and thus fix the responsibility for blame. But as the board has thus far never availed itself of this power, which is positive, if is suggested that the legislature make the clause mandatory instead of permissive. It is believed that this would introduce the element of state board arbitration into all labor troubles in a positive manner.—Indianapolis News.

START OF THE VANDERBILTS.

Wife of the American Founder of the Family Kept a Hotel.

A woman played a large part in laying the foundation of the fortune of the house of Vanderbilt. The first Cornelius Vanderbilt married at the age of 20, and a year later became captain of a small steamboat plying between New York and New Brunswick, N. J. Passengers were numerous and many of the sons went to New Brunswick and back by boat for the pleasure of the trip. Others, when the boat reached New Brunswick, got into stages and were driven across the state to another steamer, which took them down the Delaware. Of course, they needed something to eat, and here Mrs. Vanderbilt saw her opportunity. The Brunswick's hotel, or half-way house, was dirty and ill-kept. Mrs. Vanderbilt suggested to her husband that he should take the hotel, refit it, and keep it in a style that would attract people. Vanderbilt leased the hotel, but the scheme was his wife's. He said she might run it and have the profits. Mrs. Vanderbilt overhauled the house and named it Bellona Hall, after the steamship Bellona, which her husband then commanded. The fame of Bellona Hall soon spread to New York, and parties were made up to visit it because of the excellent fare to be had there. It also increased the popularity of the line for which Capt. Vanderbilt worked, and his salary was increased to $2,000 a year. Mrs. Vanderbilt twelve years managed Bellona Hall with profit to herself and pleasure to her guests.

Progress in Ocean Travel.

In 1840 the Cunard steamship Britannia, built of wood propelled by paddle wheels, maintained a speed of about 8½ knots. Her steam pressure was 12 pounds per inch. She was 207 feet long, about 2,000 tons measurement, her engines developed about 750-horse power, and her coal consumption was about 40 tons a day, or about five pounds of coal per indicated horse power per day. She carried a full spread of sail. In 1897 her speed has been increased from 14 knots to twenty-three knots, but her speed on the voyage has been reduced to about one-third of what it was.

One horse power, as estimated among engine makers, is the power to raise 33,000 pounds one foot a minute. As this estimate was made upon the capacity of the best horses of London, it is above the average power of a horse.

The Massachusetts State Board of Arbitration has made its official report for the year 1900. In the great majority of cases the services of the board were tendered without solicitation. Sometimes they were declined and sometimes ignored, though oftener accepted. But the percentage of cases in which the board actually secured a settlement was very satisfactory. Forty-four difficulties in which were involved nineteen disputes were settled in six of the cases the board acted on the joint petition from the parties involved, in fourteen on the petition of one party, and in the remaining twenty-four on the board's own initiative. Twenty-six were jointly submitted to arbitration. Altogether twenty-six were settled by the board as a result of interviews with the parties. In a number of cases the board was not asked to do anything. On the whole the impression is that comparatively little has been accomplished on account of the reluctance of both parties to submit their differences to arbitration. One point is clear. It has never been authorized to investigate a controversy and on its conclusion to fix the party is responsible or blameworthy to publish its finding and to fix the responsibility or blame. The board has this for never available use of this power, which is permissive, it is suggested that the Legislature make the clause mandatory instead of permissive. It is believed that it would introduce the element of state control arbitration into all labor controversies in a positive manner.—Indianapolis News.

Caterpillars as Food.

In many parts of Africa and in portions of Central and South America the caterpillar is regarded as a delicacy. Travelers who have been prevailed upon to taste them pronounce them palatable. In Australia the larvæ of the longicornes or horned caterpillar are much sought after as food. They are found in the interior of decaying trees. The larvæ from each different species of tree have their own distinctive flavor. Many natives eat them raw, but certain civilized tribes prefer them fried.

MRS. IDA L. ROSER

Grand-Niece of Ex-President James K. Polk, Writes to Mrs. Pinkham Saying:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have been married for nearly two years, and so far have not been blessed with a child. I have, however, suffered with a complication of female troubles and painful menstruation, until very recently.

MRS. IDA L. ROSER.

"The value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was called to my attention by an intimate friend, whose life had simply been a torture with inflammation and ulceration, and a few bottles of your Compound cured her; she can hardly believe it herself to-day, she enjoys such blessed health. I took four bottles of your Compound and consider myself cured. I am once more in fine health and spirits; my domestic and official duties all seem easy now, for I feel so strong I can do three times what I used to do. THE MAN ON THE CORNER

Some of the Sights He Saw. At Some He Saw Not.

The election is over and Alabama now has a new constitution. However much we may have wished about the desirability of a new constitution the one question is we will all have to live under the new organic law and I hope and trust we will all prosper under it. I see no reason why we should not and I believe we will.

Circuit Court convenes at Clanton a week from next Monday and some of our visitors will hardly know Clanton. Those who have not been here since last Fall court will find a new town. In that twelve months two big fires almost swept away the old town which you remember. The fire in February cleaned away the old stores up by the court house and in their place you will find a row of handsome brick stores, while, in addition, on the opposite side of the street, are two new elegant brick stores, in one you will find H. Toxo, of bargain fame, and in the other Moses Mims.

Then, going down the street you will notice Pinckard & Co. have largely increased their storehouse it is almost twice as big as it was last Fall court, and on the opposite side you will find W. H. Sartor in a very handsome new brick store house, which he especially invites you to enter. Looking again across the street you will notice the Jules has cleaned off all the old stores houses there, as well as the depot, and you will find Broadhead & S located in a pretty brick store, and a brand new depot, which is so much ahead in style of any depot in this part of the county, it will fairly take your breath away. The new depot is a dandy and don't you forget it.

Then, the next thing you will notice is that W. H. Stacy has improved his old place, and you will find a first-class up-to-day restaurant there; while further up the street, although you wont see much difference in the outside appearance, if you go inside you will find the Thornton Hotel has changed hands, and Mr. Latham, after refurnishing the house, invites your patronage, and he deserves it.

Oh! I want to tell you of all the changes if I can think of them. There is the Campbelle Drug store repainted and looking neat as a pink, and next door you will find Mr. Marcus dispensing goods. Bill Mullins can be found at the old stand, although he is thinking of putting up an elegant brown stone house soon.

And that brings me back to something I had missed going down next door to Bill Mullins you will find in course of erection, and nearly finished, (I guess it will be finished by court time) the prettiest building in Chilton county. It is to be the home of the People's Savings Bank, and from an architectural point of view is the handsomest building between Montgomery and Birmingham. I don't know whether the bank will be ready for business by court time, but you had better bring your pockets full of money, because as soon as you see that bank building it will make you want to go and do business there.

One more thing and I am through, go up to the Maddox gin and see the ginnery which has ginned over 1400 bales of cotton already this season. And don't forget to call in at the Banner office, where we have to work night and day to get the paper out to you every week. We have not got that new steam press yet, but it looks mighty like that when you come to court next Spring we shall be able to show it to you.

Maplesville.

We have had drenching rights of October's lovliness and are now down to the hard pan of business, scaring off the hawks from our preachers time of chicken, and gathering in our crops, which we are delighted to state are good enough to encourage our farmers in their noble profession.

Dr. Claughton will soon join this noble fraternity (we sincerely hope not to the neglect of his former profession) since he has lately purchased a wagon to make a start with; his friend Mr. Buck Bowline, has most encouragingly and liberally offered to lend him all the wooden rakes he may need since Mr. Bowline has a good supply of this very useful farm tool.

We hope no one unnecessarily will get into trouble by infringing on the patent right of the bridge built across Byrd's creek at the ford. Many humble pedestrians thank the builder.

Mrs. John Foshee from Bell Sumter is here with friends and relations.

Wheeler Foshee is with relations and friends; we sincerely hope he will remain with us.

Mr. Allison of Rideville is visiting here under rather suspicious circumstances; time will however develop all things.

Many of our citizens took in the Montgomery fair. Some were pleased and some were not.

Mrs. Fuller of Summerhill is visiting her mother, Mrs. Dollar.

Miss Lillie Bowline and her brother, Willis, have lately visited Stanton.

Hon. John Burns gave a very plain and sensible talk here the 9th.

Rev. Liles and his son, Alex, from near Burnsville have been guests of F. U. Grumpton.

Mrs. Lawrence has lately visited her sister here, Mrs. Eva Bowline.

Mrs. N. E. Goodwin is with her sister, Mrs. Rebecca Goodwin, of Selma, who is in feeble health.

We are fortunate to have Mrs. Dunlap from near Lily as teacher here.

Our protracted meeting started the 10th with a most excellent sermon by Rev. Dennis of Kentuck. We pray that good may be done.

SUBSCRIBER.

FATAL ACCIDENT.

On Wednesday morning a fatal accident happened at Gullsborns mill. While helping to load a wagon Mr. Peyton Jones got his head crushed between two pieces of 12 by 12. He was a married man and leaves a wife and five children to mourn for him. The greatest sympathy is felt for the bereaved family.

Late Literary News.

The Cosmopolitan has endeavored to make itself known by timely contributions to all important controversies. Frank Moss, so well known in the Lexow and Mazet investigations, contributes "Municipal Misgovernment and Corruption: A Warning to Patriots" to the November issue. This considers a serious difficulty in a way that will be found interesting not only to New Yorkers, but to residents of every part of the United States.

Farmers are about to get done gathering.

Messrs. D. E. Kendrick, J. R. Blackman, B. P. Kendrick, and Misses Pearl and Mattie Blackman made a pleasant visit to Montgomery last week.

We are glad to say that Mrs. Pytell has returned home from Troy, and her sick son was able to come with her. Rev. Culpepper filled his appointment here Sunday.

Mr. Lonnie Dawson and wife of Maplesville are visiting friends here this week. Syrup making is the go now. B. P. Kendrick picked 95 bales of cotton last week on one stalk, and it has 37 yet to open.

Misses Alice Morgan and Ellen Glenn are visiting friends in Prattville.

A FRIEND.

Protestant Methodist Conference.

Revs. F. A. Gibson, N. A. Dobbs and Mr. Joe Gibson are home again after attending the above conference at Sylacauga.

The Montgomery Journal has the following complimentary notice of Bro. Dobbs:

Rev. N. A. Dobbs of Clanton, one of the oldest men in the conference, and an honored superannuate, is on hand with the zest and zeal of former days, though his strength is somewhat abated. He is the oldest member of the conference and his presence is an inspiration to the younger members. His long service in the Master's vineyard makes him a fit and ripe veteran awaiting the Master's summons to come home.

It Saved Her Life.

Gooch's Mexican Syrup has accomplished a cure in this neighborhood which has astonished the people. Miss Davis was given up to die by her attending physician. She had lung fever. The doctor said she would die before morning, and advised to discontinue his medicine, as it was doing her no good. Her parents had a bottle of Gooch's Mexican Syrup and Gooch's Quick Relief in the house. They at once began to give the syrup in doses one hour apart, and frequently bathed her chest with the Quick Relief. Before morning she was better, and after using a few bottles of each, she is almost as well as ever. It was almost like raising the dead, and has established the reputation of Gooch's Mexican Syrup here as a cough remedy; we cannot sell nothing else.

UNIVERSITY SCHOOL
PLANTERSVILLE, ALA.

Is a training and strictly private school for boys and girls.

Correlated to the University of Alabama and to the Alabama Polytechnic Institute.

Has fitted more pupils for college, more pupils for teaching, more pupils for advanced business positions than all other schools in Chilton county combined. It is the only school in Chilton county whose pupils have a First Grade Certificate under the present school laws.

Its course of instruction is the best arranged, its methods the soundest, most thorough and up-to-date; its scholarship the most advanced; its location, buildings, grounds, furniture, equipments, the most attractive and best adapted of any school in Chilton county.

Its pupils enter any college in the South on certificate of the Principal. It deals honestly with the public, adheres to professional courtesy, and performs its promises. Its mission is to build up, not to pull down. It is not, as some are, a mere common school called "College," "Normal," etc., by which misnomers the uninformed are misled.

$101 pays all expenses of board, tuition, fuel, lights, etc., for session of nine months. School opens September 25, 1901. Write for catalogue.

A St. Louis man risked his life the other day to save a cat. The same gentleman would probably throw a shoe at a cat on a back fence and never have a pang in case he hit the mark.

At the Methodist conference in London the interesting fact was developed that there are very nearly 25,000,000 Methodists in the world and $300,000,000 worth of Methodist church property.

An American has just died in New York City at the age of 101 who was a veteran of four wars and had lived through a fifth. Are we such a peaceful nation when one lifetime supplies this record?

Authors are now writing flattering comments on their own works. The days when a writer begged the indulgence of the "gentle reader" are long past. Yet they were the days that produced the masterpieces.

Ocean steamships nowadays are as regular as the railroads in carrying the mails. They have their habitual rate of speed and are expected to make the voyage of 3000 miles over a trackless ocean through wind and storm in the same number of hours and minutes, winter and summer, never slowing down or heaving to except on the very rarest occasions.

Recently a New York newspaper published a very interesting letter from Holland which treated of the advance of women in that very conservative country. The way has been opened in Holland for the employment of women in manufacturing and mercantile occupations and even in the professions. Dutch women seem to be succeeding especially well in dentistry, a profession in which many of them are engaged.

The pistol is, perhaps, the readiest instrument of murder within reach of the hand of the assassin. While seeking the means of statutory curb for the intending murderer, why not put a heavy restraining tax on the manufacture, sale and ownership of this readily concealed and life-destroying weapon? It is already forbidden by law to carry concealed firearms in many of the states; but if it should be made a costly as well as an illegal habit something would have been accomplished in safeguarding the right to live, thinks the Philadelphia Record.

"When will our legislators recognize the fact that the health of the community is its most valuable asset, and take the necessary steps to assist in preserving it?" inquires Health. "Doubtless there are many noises incidental to city life which it is impossible to suppress, but a very large proportion of them are easily preventable, for instance, the incessant discordant clanging of car gongs, the screeching and tooting of switch engines in railroad yards, the rattle of heavily loaded wagons over badly paved streets and the deafening yells of fruit venders and newsboys."

According to Harper's Weekly, England is looking forward to the fiercest municipal contests the kingdom has had for years. There is not an alderman in the whole realm who does not want to be mayor of his respective town, because it has been announced that every mayor in the United Kingdom will be knighted when Edward is crowned king. Whether Edward himself will personally bestow the accolade does not appear, but as he is going to revive all the ancient ceremonies connected with the coronation it seems no more than fair that he gratify the intense desire of so many loyal subjects. Only one thing could increase the happiness of John Bull when he is knighted, and that is to receive his knighthood from his sovereign's hand. It would be unkind in the king to disappoint him.

The fact that assassinations of public men have been more frequent during the past fifty years than at any other time since the Dark Ages is a strange paradox, for during the nineteenth century, and especially its latter half, a higher estimation has been put upon human life than ever before. The amelioration of criminal codes, reducing the frequency of the death penalty and the founding of great numbers of benevolent institutions to prolong the life and increase the comfort of even the lowliest members of the community establish this beyond cavil. The frequency of regicide is clearly a most exceptional feature of our present civilization.

26 PRISONERS GET AWAY

FROM THE UNITED STATES PRISON, FT. LEAVENWORTH.

CHINA'S "GRAND OLD MAN" PASSES AWAY

Fire in Richmond, Va.—Quick Mail Servic via New York City — Statue of Jefferson Given to Louisville — Wonderful Scientific Discovery—Cuba.

TWENTY-SIX PRISONERS.

Escaped from the United States prison at Fort Leavenworth, Kans., last Thursday. They formed a mutiny and broke for freedom just about time to quit work and owing to the small number of guards they succeeded in their plan. Posses were immediately formed and by Sunday night all but fourteen had been recaptured. Petty thieving of food and clothing has been going on in the country surrounding the prison ever since the delivery. Two of the guards have been wounded and several of the escaped prisoners also; four of them having been killed. Two of the escaped captured a sheriff and his deputy Sunday and held them prisoners for several hours and finally escaped, but not before both were wounded. The general plan of the escaped men seems to be to reach the Indian Tereitory, as they started South. Most of the prisoners are young men.

LONDON'S MAYOR.

The Lord Mayor's show took place Saturday and was more than usually interesting, as there were a number of new features. Special attention was paid to the colonies, which were represented by attractive cars. The decorations of the streets were of the customary character. Big crowds lined the whole route of the procession. After the usual reception at the law courts the procession completed its tour of the city and turned to the Guild Hall.

RICHMOND FIRE.

Fire in Richmond, Va., Saturday, destroyed the four-story brick structure occupied by the Richmond Traction Co., the Virginia Electrical Railway and Development Co., and the Tower-Bingford Electrical Supply Co. The loss is estimated at $100,000, fairly covered by insurance. Miss Emily Crump, a stenographer, was seriously injured by jumping from a second story window. A number of persons were slightly injured. The origin of the fire is a mystery.

LI HUNG CHANG.

The great Chinese statesman, died just before noon of Thursday. He was rated as the richest man of China. His death was due to old age, and one report says his last display of impatience at some political detail hastened his end. He had served his country for many years and was accounted one of the world's great men.

JEFFERSON STATUE UNVEILED.

A statue of Thomas Jefferson, presented to the city of Louisville, by B. and I. B. Bernheim, the wealthy distillers, was unveiled in front of the court house Saturday. It is by Sir Moses Ezekiel and cost $60,000. Ex-Governor Bradley was the orator.

DETERMINED.

Mrs. Wm. Taxter, at Leavenworth, Kas., suicided last Friday in a horrible manner. She saturated her clothing with coal oil and set it on fire. She was injured about three weeks ago and her mind is thought to have been affected.

SOCIETY TROUBLES.

Official announcement is made of the shortage of $10,000 in the accounts of the Brotherhood of Carpenters. A warrant has been issued for the arrest of Treasurer McGuire. Chas. D. Thompson, supreme finance keeper of the Maccabees, is short $57,000. He has admitted using the money. His arrest is expected. Dr. L. C. Sister of Akron, O., has been appointed to succeed Thompson. John L. Mulford, former secretary of the American Insurance Union, was arrested at Cleveland, Saturday night, charged with having embezzled funds of the order to the amount of $1,500.

GEORGIA TRAGEDY.

At Nicholls, Georgia, the body of W. J. Smith, a merchant, was found cold and stiff Saturday morning. Smith had been killed with a shotgun, two charges entering his right side. Smith's body was found near the store of H. Meeks. There is no clue to the party who did the shooting.

PRICES of print cloth have fallen.

ADOLPH F. KRAUS, the sculptor, is dead.

CONGRESSMAN TAIT, of Georgia, is quite ill.

CRACKER bakers are considering a combination.

CRAMPS have begun work on Turkey's new cruiser.

ADMIRAL SCHLEY has promised to visit Nashville in January.

CAPTAIN CHARLES ALSTON, one of the oldest river pilots in the South, died at Dyersburg, Tenn., on November 9th.

PRESIDENT ZELAYA, of Nicaragua, has purchased from Germany the special service vessel Arminus which will be used as a cruiser.

IT is reported that J. Pierpont Morgan purchased the White Star line of steamers and is in a position to acquire the Dominion line as well.

A JAPANESE steamer brought $1,000,000 in gold and $1,000,000 in silver from the island empire and China to San Francisco last Friday.

THE German battleship Mecklenburg was launched at Stetten Saturday in the presence of the Grand Duke of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, and the Grand Duchess Marie of the Mecklenburg-Schwerin.

BIOXIDE of sodium, it has recently been discovered, will purify inclosed air sufficiently to enable persons to breathe it over and over again without harmful effects. This discovery was reached by sealing up animals in air-tight receptacles along with lumps of bioxide of sodium. Instead of languishing the animals found no difficulty in breathing whatever.

A TERRIBLE gun accident occurred Saturday on board the British battleship Royal Sovereign outside of the Astoka harbor at Athens. An artilleryman forgot to close the breech before the gun was fired. One officer and six artillerymen were killed outright, the bodies being terribly mutilated, and the captain and thirteen sailors were seriously injured.

FAVORS NEW YORK.

When the Cunyard liner Umbria sailed Saturday she carried a batch of mail matter that arrived in San Francisco last Monday on the steamer Ventura from Sydney and Auckland. It will be the speediest mail delivery every accomplished in the world—more than half around the globe by steam at sea and steam on land, and steam at sea again, in less than thirty days. The Ventura left Melbourne, Australia, on October 14th, bound for San Francisco, by way of Sydney, Auckland and Honolulu. The Umbria will have the letters in the London postoffice on the morning of November 16th. The beating of the last record of thirty-one and a half days will prove that mail can be taken through New York more quickly than through the Suez canal and much more quickly than by the all water route.

CUBAN Democrats have adopted General Bartolome Maso as their candidate for the presidency.

BIRMINGHAM is considering the matter of holding a horse show next spring. The State Fair grounds have been secured for such purpose.

A BIG ORDER.

Nearly $1,000,000 worth of American equipment, machinery, etc., has just been ordered by the South Porto Rico Sugar Co., of New York, for installation in its Porto Rican plantation. The company is capitalized at $3,000,000. William Schall is the president. It has acquired 4,000 acres of sugar lands at Quanica, on the south side of Porto Rico. The plantation is expected to be in operation by December, 1902.

THE CAR FAMINE is still bothering railroad men.

According to reports the condition of Empress Augusta Victoria is more serious, and it is announced that as soon as she is sufficiently rested to bear the journey, she will start for the South to try the effects of a milder climate. It is quite possible that Abbazia, on the Adriatic, will be chosen.

MISS KATE GREENAWAY, the artist, is dead.

STATE LANDS TO BE OPENED

CONFEDERATE VETERANS MEET IN MONTGOMERY.

OIL AT MOBILE CREATES EXCITEMENT

Alabamians Will Not be Prosecuted—Warrior, Bessemer and LaFayette Have Fires — Tennessee River Improvements — Will Make Brick.

CONFEDERATE VETERANS.

The first state convention of the United Confederate Veterans of Alabama will assemble in Montgomery Wednesday noon. The convention will remain in session two days, the first day being given over to the transaction of general business, and the second day to social sessions. The local camp of veterans are making thorough preparations to entertain the visiting veterans, and a royal time is promised those who attend. Great interest is being taken in the social features of the approaching convention, and it is expected that many of the camps of the state will send sponsors. Miss Lucy Powell Randle, of Union Springs, is the sponsor for the state, and her maid of honor is Miss Mary Kirkpatrick, of Montgomery. The sponsor and maid of honor were appointed by Major General George P. Harrison.

NEW BRICK PLANT.

L. L. Stephenson, of Elderton, Ga., having recently sold out his brick business at that place, has decided to locate in Birmingham and will build an up-to-date Shale brick plant in the Birmingham district. He will be producing a high grade Shale building brick and vetrified foundation and sewer brick. He has already placed his entire machinery order, amounting to over $15,000, with J. J. Gledhill, the Southern representative of E. M. Freese & Co., of Galoin, O. The plant will be located on the Southern railway and Mr. Stephenson hopes to have it in operation by February 15, 1902.

NO PROSECUTION.

A dispatch from Guthrie, O. T., says: It is stated that Colonel Howell and son, of Dadeville, Ala., will not be brought to trial for the alleged shooting of Robert G. Gore, at McKnight, Oklahoma, on September 13, over the ownership of a town lot. At the time Gore was reported dead and his coffin was ordered, but he revived and was taken to his home in Fort Worth, Texas. He has entirely recovered and returned to Lawton, Oklahoma, and has engaged in business there and at Walters, formerly McKnight. It is said he will not appear against the Howells.

MOBILE OIL.

J. D. Cameron, a Mobile mill man, reports that he struck a deposit of petroleum near his mill at Three Mile Creek, about two miles from the city. Mr. Cameron had a sample of the oil and ordinary tests showed it to be the real article. Further investigations are being made on the site, and the sample of oil has been placed in the hands of a chemist for analysis. The report of this find has started another spell of excitement in the city and the parties interested in oil are again actively promoting their schemes.

THE PRESBYTERIANS.

The annual session of the Alabama synod of the Cumberland Presbyterian church held a four days' meeting in Huntsville last week. The meeting of the synod was most pleasant. The next annual meeting will be held in Sheffield on November 1, 1902.

LOVE'S TRAGEDY.

Miss Helen Hutton, of Decatur, some days ago was to have been married to a young business man of Birmingham, but he failed to appear, and it is said her letters and telegrams elicited no response. Crazed over his supposed perfidy, she put an end to her life with a 38-calibre pistol ball late Friday afternoon. The bullet shattered her brains, being discharged through her mouth. She was only eighteen.

BURGLARS are still visiting Tuscaloosa.

BESSEMER BLAZE.

Several houses were burned in Bessemer Sunday night, frame and tenement buildings, and one blacksmith and wagon shop. Loss $2,500, partially insured.

H. P. SAWYER, a university law student, was shot in the hand Saturday morning while handling a pistol. The wound is not a dangerous one, though somewhat painful.

GOVERNMENT LANDS.

There are nearly 100,000 acres of public land in Alabama, much of it rich in coal and iron, which may be thrown open to the public at no distant day. Recently the interior department has received many letters inquiring as to the state's public land. These indicate that an interest is now being taken in the subject which may result in a demand sufficient to warrant the department's taking action under the law of 1883 and exposing the property to public sale, after which, under the terms of the act, the remaining land may be exposed to homestead entry. Every investigation made by the department's agent has tended to show that portions of the land may contain fortunes in coal and iron. In addition, it is reported that experts in mining companies have given the land a high rate, and are looking towards it for future speculation. There was originally about 300,000 acres of this land, but by different laws the state has been allowed to select about 200,000 acres for university, normal schools and other purposes. The parts selected have generally been of an agricultural nature, and of little value.

AT LAFAYETTE, TOO.

One of the most disastrous fires this little city has ever experienced occurred Sunday morning. The Brick Hotel building was entirely consumed, leaving only a portion of the walls standing. The second floor has been the leading hotel of the town for a number of years, and for the past three years Mrs. L. V. Willy has been its proprietor. Her furniture, valued at $1,200, was almost completely destroyed. Insurance small. The first floor was occupied by McGehee, Driver & Co., general store. Losses as follows: Dr. Hudson, $1,000, partly insured; F. W. Emon, harness, no insurance; Penrey Nash, cleaning and dye house, no insurance; Andrews Brothers, $6,000, insured for $4,000; McGehee, Driver & Co., $12,000, largely covered by insurance. The fire originated in the cooking department of the hotel.

WARRIOR BADLY SCORCHED.

At an early hour Sunday morning the business section of Warrior was almost completely destroyed by fire. Six storehouses and the principal part of the goods therein were burned entailing a loss of about $25,000. When the flames were first discovered one of the storehouses was partially burned, and though the citizens worked hard, they could not gain control of the fire until six stores had been destroyed. The property was partially covered by insurance. There is no clue as to the origin of the fire.

APPROPRIATION.

Congressman William Richardson has received a letter from Major Knight, United States engineer in charge of the government improvement on the Tennessee river, stating that the chief of engineers has made his report to Congress, recomending that $500,000 be appropriated for the improvement of the river between Chattanooga and Riverton, also that the sum of $19,000 be appropriated for the improvement of the river below Riverton.

SELMA'S first casualty of moment that has occurred on the street car line since the trolley cars were inaugurated happened Sunday when Miss McCarthy was struck. She was not run over but a limb was boken and mangled. Owing to her age her recovery is very doubtful.

UP THEY GO.

The masts taken from the Spanish ships Don Juan de Austria and Oquendo at the battle of Manila and Santiago respectively, which were secured by Captain Richmond P. Hobson, and about which the Navy Department, after several refusals, finally consented to lend to the state, have arrived at Montgomery and will be erected on the capitol grounds.

GEN. JAS. HOGAN died in Mobile last week and was given a military funeral Sunday—the first in Mobile for several years.

M. H. BUNN, has been made chief clerk of the railway mail service with headquarters in Birmingham.

A CORPS of engineers has begun work near Tuscumbia, laying out the tracks which will be run from the city of Sheffield. The work of construction will be commenced as soon as the surveying is completed, and will be rapidly pushed. Both towns will, it is believed, be benefited by the road.

MILITARY DEPARTMENTS

TWO NEW ONES CREATED IN THE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS.

On the recommendation of Gen. Chaffee, commanding the division of the Philippines, the Secretary of War has issued an order for the reorganization of that division. It will be divided into two military departments to include within their limits the entire Philippine archipelago. The will be known as the Department of North and South Philippines. The northern department will be commanded by Major General [illegible] and will include the islands of Luzon, Mindaro and Masbate and all the intervening territory. The southern department, which will be commanded by Brigadier General Wade, will embrace the remainder of the archipelago and include the large islands of Samar, Panay, Mindanao, the Sulus and Jolo.

Minister Wu Ting Fang has received an official notification of the death of Li Hung Chang. It is said at the Chinese legation that Minister Wu has not been informed of his reported relief as Chinese minister at Washington. The minister would be surprised at such news. He says that he has no idea what post will be assigned him if he should be recalled from Washington. It is felt here that the appointment of Wang Ta Shao to take the place of Li Hung Chang as the throne's adviser in China's foreign affairs, will be hailed to Minister Wu's interests.

Representative business men of Chicago will appeal to President Roosevelt to recommend to Congress the creation of a department of commerce and industry, with a cabinet officer at its head. The bill for the creation of a department of commerce and industry was reported favorably by the senate committee on commerce during the fifty-sixth congress, but press of other important public measures prevented action by the senate and house. Senator Nelson, of Minnesota, will reintroduce the bill at the next session.

Dr. Euardo Blanco, Venezuelan minister of foreign affairs, has resigned his portfolio. He will be succeeded by Dr. Pacoachano. The cause of the resignation was a disagreement regarding the Colombian question, particularly the answer of President Castro to the Pan-American Congress in the city of Mexico, which was made without Dr. Blanco's knowledge.

On account of the recent outbreak of plague in Liverpool and Glasgow two additional surgeons from the marine Hospital staff have been detailed for service in those cities. They are Dr. John F. Anderson and Dr. [illegible] Ford. Both have had extensive experience in dealing with plague. The experts are sent merely as a precautionary measure.

Senator Depew has engaged Miss Belle Hagner, social secretary to Mrs. Roosevelt, to act in a similar capacity for the future Mrs. Depew.

The president has declined to accept Senator Cullom, of Illinois, that in making the promotions to the brigadier generalships soon to become vacant the army will be governed entirely by merit, and that it is his intention to promote those whose records show them to be most deserving of promotion, and that neither personal nor political considerations will count.

The president has accepted the resignation of Collector Sapp, of the Louisville, Ky., internal revenue district. The civil service commission had recommended his removal, and the president had intended to comply with the request when Congress met. In making reappointments there seems no doubt that the president will give the recommendation of the civil service commission great weight.

The president has appointed William F. Willoughby, of the District of Columbia, treasurer of the island of Porto Rico. Mr. Willoughby will succeed Jacob Hollander, of Maryland, who resigned some time ago.

Advances of 3 per cent in the pay on the battleships Maine and Texas and good starts on the new battleships Georgia, New Jersey and Rhode Island are shown in the report of the bureau of construction and repair made public, showing the progress of work on the vessels building for the navy. The Maine now shows 41 per cent completed and the Texas at 49. Two per cent on the Maine has been completed.

THE CHAIRMEN.

At one o'clock Tuesday morning Chairman Underwood of the Democratic Campaign committee said: "The new constitution has been ratified by a final 27,500 majority."

General C. M. Shelley, chairman of the Democratic committee fighting ratification, said: "We have carried the white counties by a large majority against ratification of the new constitution, notwithstanding fraudulent methods in this and other cities and towns in North Alabama. We do not think it possible for advocates of ratification to commit frauds in the black belt or negro counties sufficient to change the result."

So far as returns show the greatest majority for the new constitution was given by Dallas, 5,400. Madison and Montgomery each give 3,500, Marengo, Sumter and Wilcox 3,000. Perry 2,500, Jefferson 2,350, Barbour and Chambers 2,000.

Against the measure are placed DeKalb, Jackson and Morgan 1,500 each, Colbert and Lee 1,200 each and Talladega 1,000.

The counties in doubt are: Choctaw, Coffee, Covington, Crenshaw, Winston, Washington.

Complete returns may change the estimated results a few thousand votes. The latest reports obtainable from the closer counties are:

CHARGES FRAUD.

Lee V. Cowart, chairman of the campaign committee against ratification, said that fraudulent methods had been used in both Birmingham and the county of Jefferson, and that in a fair count the county would have gone against ratification by a small majority. It is claimed by the regularly organized democrats that the leaders of the opposition to ratification in Bessemer imported negroes to vote against the constitution, that box stuffing 270 to 627. Pratt City also furnished one of the surprises of the election, and the large majority against ratification is said to have been wholly unexpected by the democrats.

MADISON.

Reports from eleven precincts out of twenty-two give the constitution a majority of 2,390. The Huntsville box gave a majority of 271 votes. Further returns will only swell the majority. There was a landslide in the county. Of the eleven precincts reported all were carried by the ratificationists and ten of the remaining eleven not heard from are conceded to ratification. Huntsville, 1,175 for, 904 against; Gurley 266 for, 99 against.

LIMESTONE.

The returns from nine of the seventeen boxes show a majority of 1040 in favor of ratification, with the strongholds of Democracy to hear from. The county is safe for ratification by 1,500 majority.

MARENGO.

Marengo county safe for the new constitution by about 800 majority. It appears from the news received that while North Marengo has gone against the new constitution but North Marengo will more than balance it. No election held in Dayton beat and Old Spring Hill failed to hold election. Demopolis beat practically solid for new constitution.

BUTLER.

Greenville cast seven hundred and twenty-six votes. For ratification 328, against 418, giving a majority against 90. The county will go against by about 750 majority.

BIBB.

Brierfield polled 809 votes; 552 for ratification, 251 against. Six votes were thrown out. Beats 4 and 5 give 14 against. Looks like 449 for ratification in the county.

ELMORE'S

majority for the constitution will be at least 1,000.

DALE

county will go against ratification by about 800 majority.

BULLOCK

This county is regarded safe for the constitution. Five beats out of twelve give 410 majority for ratification. No election was held in two beats. Five more are to be heard from but cannot change the result. The beat is against ratification by 67.

MILITARY DEPARTMENT

TWO NEW ONES CREATED IN THE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS.

A NEW CABINET OFFICE IS DESIRED

Promotions in the Army — Wu's Cause Improved — Secretary for New Mexico — Depew — From Venezuela — The Plague—Porto Rican Treasurer.

On the recommendation of General Chaffee, commanding the division of the Philippines, the Secretary of War has issued an order for the reorganization of that division. It will be divided into two military departments to include within their limits the entire Philippine archipelago. The will be known as the Departments of North and South Philippines. The northern department will be commanded by Major General Wheaton and will include the islands of Luzon, Mindaro and Masbate and all the intervening territory. The southern department, which will be commanded by Brigadier General Wade, will embrace the remainder of the archipelago and include the large islands of Samar, Panay, Mindanao, the Visayas and Jolo.

Minister Wu Ting Fang has received an official notification of the death of Li Hung Chang. It is said at the Chinese legation that Minister Wu has not been informed of his reported relief as Chinese minister at Washington. The minister would not be surprised at such news. He stated that he has no idea what post will be assigned him if he should be recalled from Washington. It is felt here that the appointment of Wang Wu Shao to take the place of Li Hung Chang as the throne's adviser in China's foreign affairs, will be beneficial to Minister Wu's interests.

Representative business men of Chicago will appeal to President Roosevelt to recommend to Congress the creation of a department of commerce and industry, with a cabinet officer at its head. The bill for the creation of a department of commerce and industry was reported favorably by the senate committee on commerce during the fifty-sixth congress, but press of other important public measures prevented action by the senate and house. Senator Nelson, of Minnesota, will reintroduce the bill in the next session.

Dr. Euardo Blanco, Venezuelan minister of foreign affairs, has resigned his portfolio. He will be succeeded by Dr. Paccachano. The cause of the resignation was a disagreement regarding the Colombian question, particularly the answer of President Castro to the Pan-American Congress in the city of Mexico, which was made without Dr. Blanco's knowledge.

On account of the recent outbreak of plague in Liverpool and Glasgow two additional surgeons from the Marine Hospital staff have been detailed for service in those cities. They are Dr. John F. Anderson and Dr. Carl Ford. Both have had extended experience in dealing with plague. The experts are sent merely as a precautionary measure.

Senator Depew has engaged Miss Belle Hagner, social secretary to Mr. Roosevelt, to act in a similar capacity for the future Mrs. Depew.

The president has declared to Senator Cullom, of Illinois, that in making the promotions to the brigadier generalships soon to become vacant, he will be governed entirely by the record, that it is his intention to promote those whose records show them to be most deserving of promotion, and that neither personal nor political considerations will count.

The president has accepted the resignation of Collector Sapp, of the Louisville, Ky., internal revenue district. The civil service commission had recommended his removal, and the president had intended to comply with the request when Congress met. In making reappointments there seems to be no doubt that the president will follow the recommendation of the civil service commission great weight.

The president has appointed William F. Willoughby, of the District of Columbia, treasurer of the island of Porto Rico. Mr. Willoughby will succeed Jacob Hollander, of Maryland, who resigned sometime ago.

Advances of 3 per cent in the work on the battleships Maine and Maryland and good starts on the new battleships Georgia, New Jersey and Rhode Island are shown in the report of the chief of bureau of construction and repair made public, showing the state of the work on the vessels building for the navy. The Maine now stands at 87 per cent completed and the Maryland at 49. Two per cent on the Georgia has been completed.

CONSTITUTION IS RATIFIED

THE NEW MEASURE WINS BY A SAFE MAJORITY.

RETURNS INDICATE 30,000 MAJORITY

Anti Charge Fraud — Great Interest in Some Counties — Little in Others—Dallas Gives 5,000—Lowndes Goes Anti — Mobile is Very Close.

THE CHAIRMEN.

At one o'clock Tuesday morning Chairman Underwood of the Democratic Campaign committee said: "The new constitution has been ratified by about 27,000 majority."

General C. M. Shelley, chairman of the Democratic committee fighting ratification, said: "We have carried the white counties by a large majority against ratification of the new constitution, notwithstanding fraudulent methods in the and other cities and towns in North Alabama. We do not think it possible for advocates of ratification to commit frauds in the black belt or negro counties sufficient to change the result."

So far as returns show the greatest majority for the new constitution was given by Dallas, 5,400. Madison and Montgomery each give 3,500, Pickens Sumter and Wilcox 3,000, Perry 2,500, Jefferson 2,350, Barbour and Chambers 2,000.

Against the measure are placed Dekalb, Jackson and Morgan 1,500 each, Clinton and Lee 1,200 each and Talladega 1,000.

The counties in doubt are: Choctaw, Coffee, Covington, Crenshaw, Winston, Washington.

Complete returns may change the estimated results a few thousand votes. The latest reports obtainable from the closer counties are:

Pratt City also furnished one of the surprises of the election, and the large majority against ratification is said to have been wholly unexpected by the democrats.

MADISON.

Reports from eleven precincts out of twenty-two give the constitution a majority of 2,500. The Huntsville box gave a majority of 271 votes. Further returns will only swell the majority. There was a landslide in the county. Of the eleven precincts reported all were carried by the ratificationists and ten of the remaining eleven not heard from are conceded to ratification. Huntsville, 1,175 for, 904 against; Gurley 266 for, 99 against.

LIMESTONE.

MARENGO.

Marengo county safe for the new constitution by about 800 majority. It appears from the news received that South Marengo has gone against the new constitution but North Marengo will more than balance it. No election held in Dayton beat and Old Spring Hill failed to hold election. Demopolis beat practically solid for new constitution.

BUTLER

Greenville cast seven hundred and forty-six votes. For ratification 328, against 418, giving a majority against of 90. The county will go against by about 750 majority.

BIBB.

Bloston polled 800 votes; 552 for ratification, 251 against. Six votes were thrown out. Beats 4 and 5 give 214 against. Looks like 449 for ratification in the county.

ELMORE'S

Majority for the constitution will be at least 1,000.

DALE

County will go against ratification by about 800 majority.

BULLOCK

This county is regarded safe for the constitution. Five beats out of twelve give 340 majority for ratification. No election was held in two beats. Five more are to be heard from but cannot change the result. This beat is against ratification by 67.

HENRY.

Abbeville beat gave a majority of sixteen against ratification. Reports have been received from nearly all the beats in the county. Henry county has given a majority between five hundred and eight hundred for ratification. Columbia, for ratification, 44; against 838. About two-thirds of a full vote was polled.

SHELBY.

The vote at Calera was 35 for ratification and 230 against. Total vote 265. The Montevallo vote was 287 for ratification to 99 against ratification.

TALLADEGA.

All beats heard from but three. The county votes for the new constitution by about 1,200 majority. At Sylacauga the election passed off in a very quiet manner. The official count shows 144 for and 822 against ratification.

TUSCALOOSA.

The indications are that the new constitution has carried by a majority of about 300 votes. Tuscaloosa 800 for, 60 against; Northport 105 for, 111 against.

CALHOUN.

The home of President Knox, rolls up a majority of 938 for ratification.

ST. CLAIR

Gives 750 against the constitution.

MARION.

Four precincts heard from. Indications are that Marion county will go against ratification by two to three hundred votes. This majority may be reduced when all precincts are heard from. Guin gave fifteen majority for ratification.

WALKER.

Indications are that Walker county will go against the ratification of the new constitution by a majority of from 150 to 200. Jasper stands 287 for, 39 against, Cordova 143 for, 147 against, Horse Creek, 308 for, 91 against. The country precincts will give majorities against ratification.

MARSHALL.

Meagre returns from Marshall county show that it has gone against ratification by about 1,000 majority. Albertville beat voted 143 for and 198 against.

ETOWAH.

There was an unusually heavy vote polled. In Gadsden beat the vote was 542 for and 110 against; Attalla, 125 for, 174 against; Alabama City, 136 for, 82 against. The indications are that the county will go 500 majority against the convention.

LAMAR.

But little interest manifested and but few beats heard from. Sulligent 109 for, 46 against. Kennedy, Ratification carried here by something over 4 to 1. Other beats heard from about in the same proportion.

MOBILE.

Mobile city gave 15 majority for ratification. Only eight precincts of the county have been heard from and the combined vote gives a majority of about 50 against ratification. Later returns are expected to bring Mobile into the ratification column.

JEFFERSON.

The vote was one of the heaviest ever polled and came as a surprise to both sides. In the boxes which have reported 11,534 votes were polled. It is estimated that remaining beats will cast 2,500 more votes.

AUTAUGA.

The majority in six beats is 124 in favor of the constitution. Estimated majority against ratification is 200.

LAUDERDALE.

Florence goes against the constitution by 682 to 455; the county by about 500.

LEE

Goes anti by about 900.

GREENE.

Gives new constitution safe majority.

Good news for the children comes across the water from England. Heretofore it has been generally understood that people who ate much sugar were simply laying in stocks of future woes and reducing their days upon earth. When little Johnny asks for sugar on his piece of bread he is told that he can't have it because it will ruin his teeth and leave him with a stomach nowhere near as good as new. The girls have been warned that if they eat candy they cannot expect to have red cheeks, and the general idea has been that the taste for sweets is dangerous in the extreme. The British Medical Journal informs us, however, that sugar is about as beneficial a thing as one can eat.

CORN FODDER AND HAY FOR STOCK.

It is difficult to make a proper comparison between corn fodder and hay, because the quality of either largely depends upon the curing. Bright, green corn fodder, shredden or cut fine, is superior to improperly cured hay, while good hay is far superior to corn fodder that was not cut down until the leaves turned yellow. If fodder is tender and juicy the animals will prefer the stalks to the leaves, as the stalks are rich in sugar, but much depends upon the stage of growth at which the stalks were harvested.

VALUE OF CORN STOVER.

The Maryland Experiment Station reports that by weighing the ears and stover of corn, and analyzing them, they found 1,530 pounds of digestible matter in the ears and 1,642 in the stover, or 112 pounds more of food in the stover than in the ear. Probably it was not as rich in percentage of protein as was the ear and grain, but it was certainly too valuable to be wasted, as it often is, where the corn shedder has not come in use. And, by the way, chemists say the lower part of the stalk is more nutritious than that above the ear.

EXCELLENT WINTER FEED.

Turnips and carrots make excellent winter food. For cattle they should be sliced with a root slicer, which does the work very rapidly. Even poultry can consume such foods when the materials are sliced. The way to prepare sliced roots is to sprinkle cornmeal and bran over the mess and give it to the cattle or fowls at least once a day. The advantages are that such foods are succulent, easily digested, and afford a change from the usual dry rations. Ensilage should be given if there is a supply on hand, but the root crops will be found excellent, no matter what the other foods may be.

SELECTION OF THE GARDEN.

There should be upon the farm either a change in the location of the garden, putting the place used for that purpose into grass for a year or two to cleanse it not only of woods, insect pests and fungous diseases, or such changes as will serve as a rotation of crops. It is true that many of the perrennial crops, as rhubarb, asparagus, and the bush fruits, cannot be changed so often, but they need not be in the garden proper. There are often strips along the walls or by the side of the buildings that can be used for these plants, that are now given over to burdock and other weeds, that could be fitted for coultivation with a little labor, and are often by their location fertile, and would be well adapted to growing the fruits, or, indeed, anything else one might want to put there. Being near the house they would be convenient of access from the kitchen, and could receive the soap suds and other house slops to stimulate growth, while they would be handy when it was desired to gather a picking from them. And, indeed, the rhubarb, currants and other bush fruits would often do better if new plantations were set about once in three years and theo ld ones dug up when the new ones had reached full bearing.

UTILIZING BEESWAX FOR PROFIT.

I take all the old comb from our colonies of bees each season, put it in a large iron kettle, such as is used on the farm outdoors, and fill the kettle with water. This is boiled vigorously for several hours. A tub is then filled half full of water, on which is floated an old board of some sort. The mixture is then dipped out with an old pan or dipper from the kettle, and poured through a hemp sack or other thin material, which is allowed to rest upon the board floating in the tub. The wax runs through the sack into the tub. There will be a considerable residue left in the sack, which can be separated by squezing or rolling the mass with a round stick or other press.

The wax will float on the surface of the water and soon cool. In the meantime the kettle should be cleansed, filled with clear water and the wax boiled up a second time. After the first straining it looks brown and unfit for use. It should be boiled a second time and strained carefully through a fine meshed cloth several times. It can be melted now without water and put in molds ready for the market. The sack or cloth used for straining the wax is of no special value afterward and should be thrown away. I have made as much as twenty pounds a season out of comb considered worthless, and would have been thrown away under ordinary circumstances. I always find a good market for first-class beeswax and save all scraps and pieces of old comb, treating it in the manner described above.—Mrs. W. H. Johnson, in New England Homestead.

SWINE FOR MARKET.

For several years now there has practically been a shortage in hogs, and the coming winter promised to be an exception. The industry is not suffering under a boom nor depresion. It has been steady and uniform throughout. Probably the most unsatisfactory thing about some farm crops is that they are subject to rather violent booms and periods of great depression. No farmer of the right type enjoys such uncertainties. There may be a certain class of farmers who like it. But they are rather the speculators and hangers-on of the business, who want to get rich suddenly, and cannot stand the steady, uniform work which carries a man's business by degrees from a low to a high position. Even in the great industrial world booms and depressions are dreaded by all the conservative men and are enjoyed by the speculators and idlers.

In recent years the efforts of cattle men have been directed toward the establishment of steady, uniform markets. They have deplored the uncertainties of their business, and to-day we have far less fluctuations than formerly. Still, the failure or partial failure of corn or wheat must always tend to create a great change in cattle. Without adequate feed on hand cattle dealers will rush their stock to the market, and later there will come a period of scarcity. The wise preparation for any emergency is a part of the business policy of every one engaged in this work. It is something that conservative growers expect and largely anticipate. Now hogs have suffered no depression in the last two years, and in view of present crop conditions, there is little likelihood of the market being overstocked with swine for the next eighteen months. Indeed, one was never surer of good returns from swine-breeding and feeding than to-day. With the comparative scarcity of corn there will naturally be more difficult in feeding the hogs at a cost which will enable the growers to realize profits. But, with our great dairy and grain interests presenting unknown and almost unguessed possibilities for feeding, the shrewd, experienced breeder of hogs will not find the present problem too great for him to solve. There is more than one way to reach any point, and also to perform any problem, but often each one must solve it for himself.—E. P. Smith, in American Cultivator.

WINTERING BEES.

The colonies should be strong to winter well. It is the number of bees that count and not the number of hives. When there are weak colonies it is good policy to unite them. They may be united as late as November. If not united the weaklings will continue weak, if they live through the winter, which is doubtful. United, they would make a good strong colony by next June, providing other conditions are favorable. They could then be divided into two good ones. It might do to attempt to winter the weak colonies separate if there was any hope of them building up in the spring, but they won't do it. The bees will die off faster than the young ones come on. They cannot keep the inside of the cluster warm enough for rearing early brood. Being so few in numbers their whole strength is needed to resist the cool spring weather. A large number of bees clustered together can stand the severest cold in winter and keep the nursery warm for the rearing of young bees early. Not more than half the bees in the strongest colonies live through the winter and the weaker ones lose more than half. There should be young bees hatching as late as October to take the place of the old bees that die off during the winter. There should be enough honey in the hives to take the bees through the spring as well as winter.—Fanny M. Wood, in The Epitomist.

HARVESTING APPLES AND PEARS.

The proper picking of apples and pears has more to do with their keeping than many imagine. On a large orchard where thousands of bushels of these fruits are harvested, the work is apt to be rushed, and haste generally spoils a good deal of the crop. Poor, ignorant and careless pickers are also responsible for the spoiling of a good deal of the fruit. From 2 to 5 per cent. of the crop is generally figured out as injured by the picking and packing. The experienced apple picker, who works by the day, is worth more to the farmer than two inexperienced men working by the piece. The latter, in order to count a great number of bushels for the day's work, will grow careless and indifferent. He will injure more fruit than his services are worth.

I prefer experienced pickers employed by the day every time, especially in an orchard where fine fruits are raised. For the export trade you cannot afford a careless picker. Apples intended for this trade should be raised on trees where the fruit has been thinned out systematically, in order to make each apple grow its largest. Now on such a tree you cannot afford to lose an apple by careless picking. Yet this may be done by careless pickers so easily that the profits will be seriously cut into. I have seen beginners in their haste to fill their baskets shake the limbs where a few choice apples were just beyond their reach. They not only dislodge these fruits but injure many more on other branches. So important is the picking that I always begin early and employ only a few pickers at a time. They work under my supervision, and if the limbs are shaken or the fruit unduly bruised and pricked, some explanation must be given. The apples are all large and choice, and I expect each one to be harvested without a bruise. There is no reason why more than half a dozen apples or so should be dropped from each tree. If more are dislodged there is some trouble—carelessness or ignorance on the part of the pickers. The employment of boys to pick apples is generally a great mistake unless the apples are small and intended for the cider mill or some local market. While the boys cost only half the amount paid to expert men pickers, the difference will be found in favor of the latter at the end, especially where choice apples or pears are raised. So much depends upon the proper harvesting of apples and pears that it may be said the packing and shipping are only secondary importance. No bruised and pricked fruits can be packed and shipped to keep. First of all, the fruits must be sound and free from all injury.—S. W. Chambers in American Cultivator.

Ancestry of Presidents.

President Roosevelt is the second President of Dutch ancestry, Van Buren being first. Of our other Chief Executives fourteen have sprung from English stock, five from Scotch-Irish, three from Scotch, and one, Jefferson, from Welsh.

The tube of a twelve-inch gun has five grooves, causing the projectile to revolve seventy-five times a second.

New China Closets.

The new china closets are much higher than those in use of recent years, and very many of them set up quite high on legs. A lower shelf of wood to display large bowls, pitchers, etc., is often seen on these latest closets, too.

The Fashionable Screen.

Screens of hugely blossomed cretonne are the fashion for a feminine bedroom. Those of plain green with a tapestry square let into each panel near the top still hold their own for a library or living room, but the leather one, of heavy, metallic-finished roanskin, fastened on with huge bronze nailheads, is far and away in the lead for hall or dining room. In fact, so popular and fashionable have these become that they are used everywhere. Their price of from $40 to $75 will keep them exclusive.

Hall and Parlor in One.

There is a growing tendency among housewives who have to live in the often cramped spaces of the modern house to throw hall and parlor into one, thus making a fair-sized room which they use as a living room-hall. Interior decorators usually object to this plan as lacking privacy, because drafts blowing from the stairway, and, in the case of entertainment, the visitor is ushered at once into the presence of the family. For a country house, where calling is much more informal and the season they are inhabited drafts are welcome, they, however, recommend this plan.

How to Have a Good Light.

I will tell the young housewife in a little practical talk not only how to keep from breaking so many lamp chimneys, but also how to clean a lamp so as to have a clear, steady, brilliant light, for I think in your first housekeeping a well kept lamp is an important factor, not only for happiness and cheerful conversation around it, but for your health and eyesight also.

Lamp chimneys are not so liable to break upon exposure to changes of temperature if they are put in a pan of cold water and allowed to heat gradually until the water is boiling hot, then allow it to cool again. The common kerosene lamp used in almost every household will give a bright, clear light if properly cared for. The bowl of the lamp should be kept full of oil, but when not used the wick should be turned down, to keep the oil from oozing out. If the wick is soaked in vinegar, then thoroughly dried before it is put in the lamp, it will not smoke. When you wish to clean the flues, founts, etc., wash them in a suds made by dissolving a teaspoonful of pearline into a pint of hot water. Clean well, then rinse in clear, warm water and wipe dry in soft cheesecloths. Fill your lamps every day and clean every day also. See that the flues fit tightly. As you live in the country you will use lamps altogether, and this is an excellent method for cleaning.—N. H. H., in Farm, Field and Fireside.

Minced Eggs—Chop hard boiled eggs and heat to boiling in milk seasoned with butter, pepper, catsup or any chopped herb; thicken with flour, and serve garnished with croutons.

Meat Cake—Mince any cold beef or beefsteak, and mix it with an equal weight of bread crumbs; add a little very finely chopped onion and parsley, a little stock, seasoning and a well beaten egg. Form into a cake, and fry in dripping (about an ounce will be sufficient). This may be served with or without brown sauce.

Rice Fritters—Boil one-half a cup of rice in a cup of milk until the rice is tender and has absorbed all the milk, using an inner boiler. Add the beaten yolks of two eggs, a tablespoon of sugar, a sprinkle of cinnamon and a nutmeg and two teaspoons of softened butter. Remove from the fire and let cool before adding the beaten whites of the eggs. Drop in spoonfuls into plenty of boiling lard or fat and let them fry a light brown. Serve with one flavored strongly with lemon.

Butter Rolls—Dissolve two tablespoonfuls of butter in one pint of scalded milk. When cool add one scant teaspoonful of salt, one tablespoonful of sugar, one-half of a yeast cake dissolved in a little warm water and enough flour to make a soft dough. Knead lightly for five minutes and set aside to rise. When very light make into small rolls and let rise again; then bake in moderate oven for 20 minutes.

Prune Jelly—One pound of prunes, one-half box of gelatine. Soak the prunes over night and stew until tender in the water in which they have been soaked. Remove the stones and sweeten to taste. Dissolve the gelatine in a little hot water and add the prunes while hot. Lastly add the juice of a lemon and two tablespoonfuls of blanched almonds. Pour the jelly into molds and set it on the ice to harden. Serve with whipped cream.

SCIENCE AND INDUSTRY.

It was the agricultural department that started the present organized war on mosquitoes, and now it has started one on the fly. A special form of trap has been devised, which it is believed will prove to be better than anything yet tried and directions for making it are to be distributed throughout the country. The fly renders some service as a scavenger, but it is so potent a factor in the spread of disease that it should be killed off as far as possible.

Professor Simon Newcomb, in an article published in McClure's Magazine expresses doubts as to the realization of aerial navigation, unless some way of controlling gravity shall be discovered. The balloon is too bulky, the flying machine on a very small scale may be possible, but hardly on a large scale, weight offering an obstacle which will increase with every addition to the size of the machine, more rapidly than the propelling and sustaining power can increase.

When the two Hungarian scientists, Messrs. Pollak and Virag, displayed their new telegraphic apparatus at the Paris exhibition last year, they were invited by the French government to make experiments with it over the lines between Paris and Lyons. On account of the enormous expense, however, the inventors declined the invitation. Since that time, however, they have established a line of their own extending from Buda-Pesth to Fiume, a distance of 375 miles, and have been carrying out a series of tests with their apparatus. A speed of 40,000 words per hour has been attained.

A distinguished English authority in veterinary science suggests that the zebra be domesticated as a beast of burden in British East Africa and the Uganda protectorate, where these animals are found in great number. It is well known that they are immune to the poison of the terrible tsetse fly, which horses and mules are not, and that of itself would be of inestimable advantage. The adult zebra is domesticated with great difficulty, but there would be little trouble in getting the young, and they might readily be trained. They would be specially adapted to army use in Africa and India.

Dr. Calmette, the director of the Pasteur institute at Lille, and the discoverer of a curative serum for the effects of snake bite, is said to have been severely bitten recently on the hand by a trignocephalus. Without delay he gave himself an injection of his anti-venom serum, but nevertheless the hand swelled and acute fever set in; but by the afternoon of the same day he was sufficiently recovered to attend a sitting of the conseil general of the department and on the following day was perfectly well. Dr. Chalmette has thus afforded in his own person though unintentionally, a convincing proof of the efficacy of his remedy.

A French scientific investigator believes that he has discovered a flashlight powder compound which is practically smokeless. The principle is to keep the magnesia that is formed when magnesium powder is exploded as much as possible attached to a heavy substance that will not easily fly about and which soon falls of its own weight. A substance suitable for this purpose is found in the binoxid of barium. At red heat this substance gives up half its oxygen, and supplies that necessary for the rapid combustion of the magnesium powder. As the binoxid must be kept from contact with the air the flash powder is made up in collodion capsules. This is also consumed and its combustion adds to the intensity of the light developed. The proportion of smoke produced by flashlight powders of this description is as small as 10 percent compared with ordinary makes.

Animal Psychology.

The psychology of animals is a subject which seems to be progressing rapidly, says the London Graphic. Not long since a society in Paris for the "investigation of the soul of animals" made the great discovery that lions were greedy and monkeys vain. More recently a savant, after many experiments at the zoological gardens, elicited proof of the high aesthetic capacities of the feline tribe. A tiger purred and smiled over a piece of wool dipped in lavender water, and a lion hit his consort on the side of the head when she approached his bottle of eau de cologne. Another professor has now shown that animals are at least as subject to hypnotic influence as men. Lobsters for instance "when stood on their head for five or ten minutes, become so thoroughly hypnotized that joggling did not awaken them." Guinea pigs are equally susceptible, if care is taken to avoid making a squeaky noise. It is curious that in this investigation into animal psychology scientific appliances are not more used. The phonograph would be of inestimable value in the hands of an experimenter in finding out the language and might be almost as useful as "gazing hypnotically at crocodiles" or "spinning guinea pigs like a top."

THANKSGIVING DAY, November 28.

Now that the election is over, we can all take a rest, forget politics and stick to business.

CIRCUIT Court convenes at Clanton on Monday, November 25. We were unable to get the jury list for publication.

RATIFICATION of the new constitution has carried by from 25,000 to 30,000 majority, but it will take the official count on Saturday next before we can get the exact figures.

THE good roads convention to be held at Birmingham this month should have some good representatives from this county. The new road which will be constructed during the convention is an object-lesson alone worth the trouble of going to see.

THE seventy-third annual session of the Methodist Protestant conference closed at Sylacauga yesterday. The time of holding the next conference was set for Wednesday before the second Sunday in November, 1902, to be held at Cedar Grove church in Chilton circuit.

The following appointments were made for the ensuing year:

Clanton Circuit—C. H. Reese.
Chilton Circuit—T. C. Cassedy.

Montgomery, the one time capital of the "Storm Cradled Nation that fell" is again in the hands of the Confederates. The city has capitulated. The terms were unconditional surrender, and they were proposed by the city. Never were conquerers so warmly recieved. Never were victors so heartily welcomed. On a hundred battlefields they who wore the Grey won the deathless gratitude and undying love of Alabamians. The story is the brightest that illuminates history's page. Romance has written nothing like it.

They are passing away, some of these veterans. Many, so many, of them have crossed over the river to rest under the shade of the trees. It is forty years since the great war began.—Montgomery Journal.

The editor of the Review of Reviews, in "The Progress of the World" for November, discusses President Roosevelt's principles of appointment, as related to his "Southern policy"; the tariff and Cuba; the demand for publicity in the management of trusts; the ship-subsidy scheme; the Isthmian canal; the Pan-American congress at Mexico; the New York municipal election; the various State campaigns; and many other topics of the hour.

Healthy Children Are Happy.

Mother's Worm Syrup makes children healthy by expelling the worms that make them ill. Children eat it on bread.

WOOED AND WEDDED.

On Wednesday morning at the residence of ex sheriff P. M. Moore, Mr. R. L. Martin and Miss Maggie Moore were happily united, Rev. S. M. Adams performing the ceremony. This was the happy fulfilment of love's young dream. Every one knows the charming bride and the gallant groom. Mr. Martin and Miss Maggie have long plighted their troth, and while Bob went to seek a home for his bride in Texas, Miss Maggie remained to await the happy day when she and the partner of her choice would be made one.

There was a number of friends at the hospitable home of Mr. and Mrs. Moore on Wednesday morning. The ceremony was impressive, and immediately afterwards, good-byes, with the best wishes of all those assembled, were said to the young couple, who left on the mail for their future home in Texas, where we wish them the greatest possible happiness and prosperity.

At the home of the bride in Beat one, November 7, Mr. J. M. Littleton and Miss Martha Ola Davis were happily united, J. W. Middlebrooks, J. P., officiating. The youthful couple have a long life before them which we hope will be happy and prosperous.

November 10, at the residence of Mr. Newton Dennis, Mr. A. C. Edwards and Miss Florence Dennis were joined in the holy bonds of matrimony, Rev. J. B. H. Parrish performing the ceremony. We wish the happy young couple a long life of conjugal felicity.

At the court house, Clanton, November 11, Mr. Dave Lackey and Miss Belle McKinney were made man and wife by Judge Adams. A long and prosperous life together we wish the happy couple

A Question of Ethics.

A growing inclination has developed among some ministers of the gospel throughout the country to handle in their official capacity and from the pulpit questions which are, at best, distantly related to the problems of faith and morals, and border rather too closely on politics.

Nothing can be further from the true spirit of the gospel than the wrangle of party disputes, and those unwise ministers who are permitting themselves to be drawn into a discussion of the relative merits of secular questions are, it seems to us, in danger of having their religious work minimized; for, on questions of civil government they cannot, in the very nature of things, pose as an authority.

The ministry is the chastest of all professions, and the worthy minister is placed by the respect and admiration of his flock on a lofty pedestal of authority. This authority, in the opinion of a large proportion of conscientious church memers, should be employed in the pulpit to direct the people in the matter of faith and morals, and not to dictate to them concerning political questions. To the study of the former they have given the principal part of their lives. On the latter subject they can, naturally, be only superficially advised.

In matters of faith and morals there is no question that people should look to their pastor for direction and advice. When it comes, however, to problems affecting their political well-being they have other sources of information and suggestion.

An opinion publicly expressed by a minister concerning a matter of political import cannot but antagonize members of his congregation who do not think as he does; and he thus loses much of his legitimate influence. Such expressions come as a distinct shock to the members of a church who have been accustom to reverence and respect their pastor as a religious teacher, and not a lecturer on public issues.

The newspaper is a proper forum for the discussion of questions of local, state or national import. The pulpit is not.

Even a matter of such widespread interest as an international conflict, it seems to us, is not a proper subject to preach upon in church. Governments may differ and may go to war in defence of the irreconcilable opinions they hold, and the people of the two governments may clash arms in desence of these respective contentions; but a minister of the gospel is the representative of a higher authority than any earthly power and believers in the truth of Christianity are not affected on that ground by international disputes which may number among the contestants on both sides members of the same religious bodies.—Atlanta Constitution.

What Douglas' Case Yielded.

In the presidential campaign of 1856 the Democrats in the west made an effective point by contrasting Mr. Buchanan's long public career as a senator, secretary of state and minister to England with General Fremont's limited experience, consisting of a service of 21 days in the United States senate.

In the great campaign of 1860 they tried the same tactics, which had proved so successful, to disparage Mr. Lincoln. He had served but a single term in congress, while Senator Douglas had for many years enjoyed a national reputation.

This point was urged in a heated discussion overheard between an ardent supporter of Senator Douglas and a German voter who favored Mr. Lincoln. The former finally thought to overwhelm his opponent by saying:

"Who is dis Lincoln, anyhow? Nobody ever heard of him until Senator Douglas brought him into notice by holding joint debates with him. Senator Douglas, on the other hand, is a great statesman. Why, he has had his eye on the presidential chair for the last ten years."

"Vot is dot you say?" was the reply. "You say Meester Douglas have had his eye on the president chair for the last ten years?"

"Yes; that is just what I said."

"Well, you shoost tell Meester Douglas eef he keep been eye on dot chair shoost a leetle vile longer he vill see old Abe Lincoln sitting down in it."

That closed the debate amid a roar of laughter from the bystanders.—Lippincott's Magazine.

The Way the Boy Put It.

Different sermons may be preached from the same text, and there may be more or less of truth in each of them.

"Here is an account," said Mr. Morse, pointing to a paragraph in the evening paper, "of the way in which a boy was saved from drowning by a mastiff which belonged to his cousin. The boy ventured too near the edge of a treacherous bank, lost his footing and fell into the lake. The dog dashed in after him and succeeded in putting him out."

"There," said Mrs. Morse, turning an accusing glance upon her 10-year-old son, "that shows how dangerous it is for a boy to go too near the water!"

"Why, mother," said the boy in sorrowful astonishment, "I thought father read it because it showed how perfectly safe I'd be wherever I went if you'd only let him buy me a big dog!"

Mr. Morse coughed and became discreetly absorbed in the quotations of mining stocks.

Fish Aversions.

The celebrated Erasmus, although a native of Rotterdam, had such an aversion to fish that the smell of it threw him into a fever. Ambrose Pare had a patient who could never see an eel without fainting and another who would fall into convulsions at the sight of a carp.

Hold the Fort.

In October, 1864, Allatoona pass, a defile in the mountains of Georgia, was guarded by General Corse, with 1,500 men. It was a strong, strategic point, and, moreover, 1,500,000 rations were stored there. French, the southern general, with 6,000 men, attacked the garrison and drove the defenders into a small fort on the crest of the hill. The battle was fierce. The northern soldiers fell in such numbers that further fighting seemed folly.

But one of Corse's officers caught sight of a white signal flag fluttering in the breeze on the top of the Kenesaw mountain, across the valley, 16 miles away. The signal was unshelved, and then came the inspiring message from mountain to mountain: "Hold the fort. I am coming.—W. T. Sherman."

Cheer after cheer went up, and, though hopelessly reduced in numbers, they did hold the fort for hours until the advance guard of Sherman's army came to their relief. Six years later P. P. Bliss, the evangelist, heard the story in all its vivid detail from a soldier friend and then wrote the words and music of his famous hymn.—Presbyterian.

Maybe you don't have colic. Then you don't need Dr. Tichenor's Antiseptic for that purpose. But you don't know when you may get hurt, and it is a record-breaker for Cuts, Burns, Bruises, Scalds, inflamed eyes, Sore Throat, "Poison Oak," etc. Contains no grease, and the odor is very pleasant. Call at drug stores for it.

A WORTHY SUCCESSOR.
"Something New Under the Sun."

All Doctors have tried to cure CATARRH by the use of powders, acid gases, inhalers and drugs in paste form. Their powders dry up the mucious membranes causing them to crack open and bleed. The powerful acids used in the inhalers have entirely eaten away the same membranes that their makers have aimed to cure, while pastes and ointments cannot reach the disease. An old and experienced practitioner who has for many years made a close study and specialty of the treatment of CATARRH, has at last perfected a Treatment which when faithfully used, not only relieves at once, but permanently cures CATARRH, by removing the cause, stopping the discharges, and curing all inflammation. It is the only remedy known to science that actually reaches the affected parts. This wonderful remedy is known as "SNUFFLES" the GUARANTEED CATARRH CURE and is sold at the extremely low price of One Dollar, each package containing internal and external medicine sufficient for a full month's treatment and everything necessary to its perfect use.

"SNUFFLES" is the only perfect CATARRH CURE ever made and is now recognized as the only safe and positive cure for that annoying and disgusting disease. It cures all inflammation quickly and permanently and is also wonderfully quick to relieve HAY FEVER or COLD in the HEAD.

CATARRH when neglected often leads to CONSUMPTION—"SNUFFLES" will save you if you use it at once. It is no ordinary remedy, but a complete treatment which is positively guaranteed to cure CATARRH in any form or stage if used according to the directions which accompany each package. Don't delay but send for it at once, and write full particulars as to your condition, and you will receive special advice from the discoverer of this wonderful remedy regarding your case without cost to you beyond the regular price of "SNUFFLES" the "GUARANTEED CATARRH CURE."

Sent prepaid to any address in the United States or Canada on receipt of One Dollar. Address Dept C 235 EDWIN A. OBLES & COMPANY, 2030 and 2032 Market Street, Philadelphia.

F. A. WERMAN, OF BALTIMORE, SAYS:

BALTIMORE, Md., March 30, 1901.

Gentlemen:—Being entirely cured of deafness, thanks to your treatment, I will now give you a full history of my case, to be used at your discretion.

About five years ago my right ear began to sing, and this kept on getting worse, until I lost my hearing in this ear entirely.

I underwent a treatment for catarrh, for three months, without any success, consulted a number of physicians, among others, the most eminent ear specialist of this city, who told me that only an operation could help me, and even that only temporarily, that the head noises would then cease, but the hearing in the affected ear would be lost forever.

I then saw your advertisement accidentally in a New York paper, and ordered your treatment. After I had used it only a few days according to your directions, the noises ceased, and to-day, after five weeks, my hearing in the diseased ear has been entirely restored. I thank you heartily and beg to remain

Very truly yours,

TOO HARD ON THE LITTLE ONES

Bartow Philosopher Discusses Modern Methods of Teaching and Records His Disapproval Thereof.

If two-thirds of a house costs four-fifths of the lot and both together cost $4,400, how much was paid for each? Well, that sum is easy if you know how to do it. Our little school girl has me to help her every night and some of these tangled up sums strain my old-fashioned mind, for the rult of three is abolished and new methods adopted. I remember a sum in the old Smiley arithmetic—if six men can cut four acres of wheat in three days by working six hours a day, how many men will it take to cut nine acres in four days and work eight hours a day? These perplexing problems remind me of Judge Bob Strozier's charge to the jury in a horse case, where the plaintiff sued for damages because the horse he bought was a stump-sucker and wouldn't work on the off side. Fourteen witnesses had testified, some for and some against the horse, some for glanders but not for stump-sucking, some for stump-sucking but not for glanders, and some swore he was sound and some unsound. 'Gentlemen," said he, "if you believe that the horse had the glanders but didn't stump suck, or that he sucked stumps but didn't have the glanders, or that glanders is an unsoundness but stump-sucking is only a habit, or if the horse wouldn't pull when worked on the off side and couldn't be cured of it, though this court knows from experience that he could be cured of it; or if you believe from the evidence that the horse was not warranted sound as against stump-sucking and off-siding, but only against such material things as glanders and swiney and the like, then you must find for the plaintiff or the defendant according to the weight of the testimony."

My candid opinion is that some of these miscellaneous problems are too perplexing for children not yet in their teens, and if parents or grandparents or uncles or aunts or somebody don't give help the child would give up in despair. I have often wondered how those pupils got along who had no help. My father helped me all my school life and my wife and I have helped our children. It is impossible for a school teacher to give patient attention to each child where there are thirty or forty pupils in the grades. Only five hours to teach in and four or five different text-books for each pupil and book, while it takes me half and hour every night for one pupil in one book. Hence it is that only a few pupils get a fair education in a graded school only those who are bright and willing and have help at home. Parents that can't help or won't help lose their home influence over their children. Every phase of their education is turned over to the public school, which is a free machine and teaches books only. Morals, modesty and obedience are not in the curriculum. Many little children are sent there to get them out of their mothers' way, for she has work to do or shopping or visiting, or must go to the club. Nevertheless, a few make good scholars and good citizens, and for their sake the system must go on. It is no better in the colleges, for the most charitable estimate is that not more than ten in a hundred ever make a creditable success in life. The ninety had just as well not been born, but the ten will save Sodom, and it will be found that these ten got their best education at home. Good morals, good principles, obedience, self-denial, industry, kindness and good manners are a better foundation to build on than books. To make the home happy and inviting is the secret of all success. The family is a more important institution than the school, and love is the keystone of the family. I scolded a little grandson the other day and he got mad and went off and told his little cousin that grandpa was mean and he was going to tell his mamma on him. Next morning he came to see us again and came to me and kissed me and it made us both happy. A little granddaughter was troubled because her baby brother was sick and the doctor was sent for. She mourned over it tearfully and then brightened up and said: "Well, if baby dies I am going to keep him for a doll." The innocent prattle and sports of these children is my greatest comfort, and it almost grieves me that they have to grow up and encounter trouble and grief and misfortune. George Francis Train may be a crank, but I had rather be him in that park with a score or two of happy children around me every day than to be Pierpont Morgan or Rockefeller. It is pathetic to look at that man who is now past his seventy years, who has traveled all over the world; lived in Australia, lectured in England, Ireland and the United States to laboring men; written and had published many books of travel and biography, and at last discarded all contact with men and society and settled down to daily communion with little children in the public parks in New York city. Accompanied by a friend I got quite near to him once, for I wanted to hear his conversation with the children, but he turned and saw us, and, taking up his little basket of dainties, walked away to another seat and soon had another crowd around him, and the only reason he gives for his peculiar conduct is, "For of such is the kingdom of heaven."

I am again comforted with new books. George Smith has sent me his latest edition of his delightful and instructive book, "The Story of Georgia." It is a contribution to the history of our state that every Georgian should have in the house. It is replete with the romances of our revolutionary history and the biography of our noted men and comes down to the period of the civil war, where Colonel Avery and Semmes and Kell took it up. There has just been published another interesting and instructive book by General S. G. French. The title is "Two Wars," an autobiography being the part he and his command played in the Mexican and the confederate wars. The author was a prominent factor in both, and he is a vigorous, pleasing and graphic writer. The book is happily introduced by Bishop Ellison Capers, of South Carolina. It is published by The Confederate Veteran at Nashville, Tenn. It is dedicated "to the confederate soldiers who battled to maintain the cause for which Oliver Cromwell and George Washington fought." It is indeed gratifying to see our own people multiplying our own histories and thereby fortifying this generation against the malignant and slanderous productions of such authors as the great Goldwin Smith and the small Maclay. It takes a lot of work to keep up with them fellows. I think we are about even with the Roosevelt incident and the miscegenation crowd. Maybe we are a little ahead. We have all had our say and can afford to wait. I still think that Roosevelt is a better man than I think he is, but he is in awful bad company. —Bill Arp, in Atlanta Constitution.

LABOR WORLD.

PEARLS OF THOUGHT.

Counsel that favors your desires needs careful watching.

It is always easier to forget bad habits than to forego them.

The laws of friendship are austere and eternal, of one web with the laws of nature.

A woman condemns faults in another woman's children which she pardons in her own.

No man can be brave who thinks pain the greatest evil, or temperate who considers pleasure the highest good.

He only is advancing in life whose heart is getting softer, whose blood warmer, whose brain quicker, whose spirit is entering into living peace.

Right is right, in all simplicity, and either the teachings of the great prophets are false, or they are to be reckoned with daily in all the common affairs of human life upon earth.

It is hard to believe that others cannot see what seems plain to us; but we cannot see the sun at night; and for all that it is quite plain to those on the other side of the world. Everything is in the position one happens to occupy.

The habit of concentrating all the powers for a certain time upon a definite object is not gained without discipline and practice. Many persons meaning conscientiously to perform the work that falls to their lot have, for want of that habit never learned how to do it with thoroughness and dispatch.

The safeguard against temptation is not seclusion, but self-culture. As it is not disinfectants which will most certainly secure one against infection, but a sound constitution, so it is not rules of life which will strengthen one against temptations, but a soul. One must build up his moral deed and high thinking, by fellowship with pure women and honorable men. The chief aids in this regimen are literature and friendship.

THE COST OF WARS.

Conflicts of the Past Century Have Cost Nearly $20,000,000,000.

A writer in the Home Magazine estimated the cost of wars on the 19th century to nearly reach the enormous sum of $20,000,000,000. Just how much is a billion? he asks. It is one thousand millions; but that fact is not expressive. There are only 3,155,673,600 seconds in a century—that is, $6 have been spent on war for every second of the century. If we take Archbishop Usher's chronology, and consider the world to be 5904 years old, we find that the nations have spent on war during the 19th century at the rate of $6 a minute since the creation.

The most costly building in the world is the Church of San Pietro, in Vaticano, known to us as St. Peter's Rome. It has cost not less than $70,000,000 since its foundation stone was laid, yet nearly 300 other churches of equal cost could be built out of what the world has spent on wars during the 19th century. The costliest building in this country is the Philadelphia building, which represents nearly $30,000,000; yet nearly 700 copies of this great pile could be erected out of the money spent on war during the last hundred years. The world spends upward of $530,000,000 a year on education. If it spent 37 times as much it would not equal the war expenses of the past century. The population of the world is estimated at 1,500,000,000; the money spent on war between 1801 and 1900 would give to each man, woman and child alive today more than $13 as pocket money.

If a man counted 200 a minute for 10 hours a day, six days a week, he would have counted 1,000,000 in eight days three hours and 20 minutes. At the same rate he would need 8333 days, three hours and 20 minutes to count 1,000,000,000, or 26 years, 195 days, three hours and 20 minutes, not counting Sundays. To count 20,000,000,000 would take 532 years 150 days six hours and 40 minutes.

Philanthropy in School Work.

Chicago has the distinction of being the first city in the world to furnish free transportation for crippled children of school age to a school of their own. The superintendent of compulsory education of the city in investigating many cases of absence found that a number of children remained from the school sessions both on account of sensitiveness because of their deformity and because, in many instances, they were unable to reach the school without an attendant, an impossibility in families all the members of which had to be breadwinners. The community had provided for the schooling of these unfortunates, but the cost of transportation fell mainly upon the parents and guardians, except when private charity furnished the means. In a building in the stockyard district, where the larger proportion of these children live, a large room has been set apart for them in order that they may not be annoyed and jostled by their healthy and boisterous mates. A smooth running omnibus with an attendant plies daily between the school and the homes of the children, and 18 crippled and comparatively helpless children constitute the first class. Similar schools are contemplated in other parts of the city. That the school boards of other cities will turn their attention from the jobbery in books and the traffic in positions of which they are too often accused, and enter into a noble emulation in the humanities with Chicago is devoutly to be hoped, even though their efforts should be crippled by the bartering of school and hospital appropriations in political corruption.—American Medicine.

REV. DR. TALMAGE.

DISCOURSE BY THE EMINENT DIVINE LAST SUNDAY.

Subject: Good or Evil Returns to Bless or Blast—Actions May Make the Circuit of Many Years, But Come Back to Us They Will.

[Copyright, 1901.]

WASHINGTON, D. C.—In this discourse Dr. Talmage shows that the good or evil we do returns to bless or blast us; text, Isaiah xl, 22, "It is He that sitteth upon the circle of the earth."

While yet people thought that the world was flat and thousands of years before they found out that it was round Isaiah, in my text, intimated the shape of it—Got sitting upon the circle of the earth. The most beautiful figure in all geometry is the circle. God made the universe on a plan of the circle.

There are in the natural world straight lines, angles, parallelograms, diagonals, quadrangles, but these evidently are not God's favorites. Almost everywhere where you find Him geometrizing you find the circle dominant, and if not the circle then the curve, which is a circle that died young. If it had lived long enough it would have been a full orb, a periphery. An ellipse is a circle pressed only a little too hard at the sides.

Giant's causeway in Ireland shows what God thinks of mathematics. There are over 35,000 columns of rocks—octagonal, hexagonal, pentagonal. These rocks seem to have been made by rule and compass. Every artist has his molding room where he may make fifty shapes, but he chooses one shape as preferable to all others. I will not say that the Giant's causeway was the world's molding room, but I do say out of a great many figures God seems to have selected the circle as the best. "It is He that sitteth on the circle of the earth." The stars in a circle, the moon in a circle, the sun in a circle, the universe in a circle and the throne of God the centre of that circle.

Appreciation of this would correct the architecture of churches, whose shape is often a defiance of divine suggestion. When men build churches they ought to imitate the idea of the Great Architect and put the audience in a circle, knowing that the tides of emotion roll more easily that way than in straight lines. Six thousand years ago God flung this world out of His right hand. But He did not throw it out in a straight line, but in curvilinear, with a leash of love holding it so as to bring it back again. The world started from His hand pure and Edenic. It has been rolling on through regions of moral ice and distemper. How long it will roll God only knows, but it will in due time make complete circuit and come back to the place where it started—the hand of God—pure and Edenic.

The history of the world goes in a circle. Why is it that the shipping in our day is improving so rapidly? A scientific shipbuilder says it is because men are imitating in some respects what the small wits deride, the old model of Noah's ark, not as we see it in old time pictures, but as it really was according to the account given. Great ships have we now, but where is the ship on the sea to-day that could outride a deluge in which the heaven and the earth were wrecked, landing all the passengers in safety, two of each kind of living creatures, hundreds of thousands of species?

Pomology will go on with its achievements until after many ceutnries the world will have plums and pears equal to the paradisaical. The art of gardening will grow for centuries, and after the Downings and Mitchells of the world have done their best in the far future the art of gardening will come up to the arborescence of the year 1.

If the makers of colored glass go on improving they may in some centuries be able to make something equal to the east window of York minster, which was built in the year 1290. We are six centuries behind those artists. But the world must keep on toiling until it shall make the complete circuit and come up to the skill of those very men.

If the world continues to improve in masonry, we shall have after awhile, perhaps after the advance of centuries, mortar equal to that which I saw in the wall of an exhumed English city built in the time of the Romans 1600 years ago, that mortar to-day as good as the day in which it was made, having outlasted the brick and the stone. I say, after hundreds of years masonry may advance to that point.

If the world stands long enough we may have a city as large as they had in old times—Babylon, five times the size of London. You may go into the potteries of England and you find them making cups and vases after the style of the cups and vases exhumed from Pompeii.

The world is not going back. Oh, no! But it is swinging in a circle, and will come around to the styles of pottery known so long ago as the days of Pompeii. The world must keep on progressing until it makes the complete circuit. The curve is in the right direction; the curve will keep on until it becomes the circle.

Well, now, what is true in the material universe is true in God's moral government and spiritual arrangement. That is the meaning of Ezekiel's wheel. All commentators agree in saying that the wheel means God's providence. But a wheel is of no use unless it turns, and if it turn it turns around, and if it turns around it moves in a circle. What then? Are we parts of a great iron machine whirled around and around whether we will or not, the victims of inexorable fate? No! So far from that I shall show you that we ourselves start the circle of good or bad actions, and that it will surely come around again to us unless by divine intervention it be hindered. Those bad or good actions may make the circuit of many years, but come back to us they will as certainly as that God sits on the circle of the earth.

Jezebel, the worst woman of the Bible—Shakespeare copying his Lady Macbeth from her picture—slew Naboth because she wanted his vineyard. While the dogs were eating the body of Naboth Elijah, the prophet, put down his compass and marked a circle from those dogs clear around to the dogs that should eat the body of Jezebel, the murderess. "Impossible!" the people said. "That will never happen." Who is that being flung out of the palace window? Jezebel. A few hours after they came around, hoping to bury her. They find only the palms of the hands and the skull. The dogs that devoured Jezebel and the dogs that devoured Naboth. Oh, what a swift, what an awful circuit!

But it is sometimes the case that this circle sweeps through a century or through many centuries. The world started with a theocracy for government—that is, God was the president and emperor of the world. People got tired of a theocracy. They said: "We don't want God directly interfering with the affairs of the world. Give us a monarchy." The world had a monarchy. From a monarchy it is going to have a limited monarchy. After awhile the limited monarchy will be given up and the republican form of government will be everywhere dominant and recognized. Then the world will get tired of the republican form of government, and it will have an anarchy, which is no government at all.

And then all nations, finding out that man is not capable of righteously governing man, will cry out again for theocracy and say, "Let God come back and conduct the affairs of the world."

Every step—monarchy, limited monarchy, republicanism, anarchy—only different steps between the first theocracy and the last theocracy or segments of the great circle of the earth on which God sits.

But do not become impatient because you cannot see the curve of events and therefore conclude that God's government is going to break down. History tells us that in the making of the pyramids it took 2000 men two years drag one stone from the quarry and put it into the pyramids. If men short lived can afford to work so slowly as that, cannot God in the building of eternities afford to wait?

What though God should take 10,000 years to draw a circle? Shall we take our little watch which we have to wind up every night lest it run down and hold it up beside the clock of eternal ages? If, according to the Bible, a thousand years are in God's sight as one day, then, according to that calculation the 6000 years of the world's existence has been only to God as from Monday to Saturday.

But it is often the case that the rebound is quicker, the return is much quicker than that. The circle is sooner completed. You resolve that you will do what good you can. In one week you put a word of counsel in the heart of a Sabbath-school child. During that same week you give a letter of introduction to a young man struggling in business. During the same week you make an exhortation in a prayer meeting. It is all gone. You will never hear of it, perhaps, you think. A few years after a man comes up to you and says, "You don't know me, do you?" You say, "No. I don't remember ever to have seen you." "Why," he says, "I was in the Sabbath-school class over which you were the teacher. One Sunday you invited me to Christ. I accepted the offer. You see that church with two towers yonder?" "Yes," you say. He says, "That is where I preach," or, "Do you see that governor's house? That is where I live."

One day a man comes to you and says "Good morning." You look at him and say, "Why, you have the advantage of me; I cannot place you." He says, "Don't you remember thirty years ago giving me a letter of introduction to a young man—a letter of introduction to William E. Dodge?" "Yes, yes, I do." He says, "I am the man. That was my first step toward a fortune. But I have retired from business now and am giving my time to philanthropies and public interests. Come up to my house and see me."

Or a man comes to you and says, "I want to introduce myself to you. I went into a prayer meeting some years ago. I sat back by the door. You arose to make an exhortation. That talk changed the course of my life, and if I ever get to heaven under God I will owe my salvation to you." In only ten, twenty or thirty years the circle swept out and swept back again to your own grateful heart.

But sometimes it is a wider circle and does not return for a great while. I saw a bill of expenses for burning Latimer and Ridley. The bill of expenses has these items among others:

	Shillings.	Pence.
One load of fire fagots	3	4
Cartage for four loads of wood	2
Item, a post	1	4
Item, two chains	3	4
Item, two staples		6
Item, for laborers	2	8

making in all 25s. 8d. That was cheap fire, considering all the circumstances, but it kindled a light which shone all around the world and aroused the martyr spirit, and out from that burning of Latimer and Ridley rolled the circle wider and wider, starting other circles, convoluting, overrunning, circumscribing, overreaching all heaven—a circle.

But what is true of the good is just as true of the bad. You utter a slander against your neighbor. It has gone forth from your teeth. It will never come back, you think. You have done the man all the mischief you can. You rejoice to see him wince. You say, "Didn't I give it to him?" That word has gone out, that slanderous word, on its poisonous and blasted way. You think it will never do you any harm. But I am watching that word, and I see it beginning to curve and it curves around, and it is aiming at your heart. You had better dodge it. You cannot dodge it. It rolls into your bosom, and after it rolls in a word of an old book rolls in after it, saying: "With what measure ye mete it shall be measured to you again."

You maltreated an aged parent. You begrudge him the room in your house. You are impatient with his whimsicalities and garrulity. It makes you mad to hear him tell the same story twice. You give him food he cannot masticate. You wish he was away. You wonder if he is going to live forever. He will be gone very soon. His steps are shorter and shorter. He is going to stop. But God has an account to settle with you on that subject. After awhile your eye will be dim, and your gait will halt, and the sound of the grinding will be low, and you will tell the same story twice, and your children will wonder if you will never be taken away. They called you "father" once. Now they call you the "old man." If you live a few years longer they will call you the "old chap." What are those rough words with which your children are accosting you? They are the echo of the very words you used in the ear of your old father forty years ago.

A gentleman passing along the avenue saw a son dragging his father into the street by the hair of the head. The gentleman, outraged at this brutal conduct, was about to punish the offender, when the old man arose and said: "Don't hurt him. It's all right. Forty years ago this very morning I dragged out my father by the hair of his head!" It is a circle. Other sins may be adjourned to the next world, but maltreatment of parents is punished in this world. That circle is made quickly, very quickly.

The meanest thing a man can do is after some difficulty has been settled to bring it up again, and God will not do anything like that. God's memory is mighty enough to hold all the events of the ages, but there is one thing that is sure to slip His memory, one thing He is sure to forget, and that is pardoned transgression.

How do I know it? I will prove it. "Their sins and their iniquities will I remember no more." "Blessed is he whose transgression is forgiven."

But do not make the mistake of thinking that this doctrine of the circle stops with this life. It rolls on through heaven. You might quote in opposition to me what St. John says about the city of heaven. He says it "lieth four square." That does seem to militate against this idea of a circle. But do you not know there is many a square house that has a family circle facing each other and in a circle moving, and I can prove that this is so in regard to heaven. St. John says, "I heard the voice of many angels round about the throne and the beasts and the elders." And again he says, "I saw round about the throne four and twenty seats." And again he says, "There was a rainbow round about the throne."

The two former imply a circle; the last, either a circle or a semicircle. The seats facing each other, the angels facing each other, the men facing each other. Heaven an amphitheatre of glory. Circumference of patriarch and prophet and apostle. Circumference of Scotch Covenanters and Theban legion and Albigenses. Circumference of the good of all ages. Periphery of splendor unimagined and indescribable. A circle! A circle!

But every circumference must have a centre, and what is the centre of this heavenly circumference? Christ. His all the glory; His all the praise; His all the crowns. All heaven wreathed into a garland round about Him. Take off the imperial sandal from His foot and behold the scar of the spike. Lift the coronet of dominion from His brow and see where was the laceration of the briers. Come closer, all heaven. Narrow the circle around His great heart. O Christ, the Saviour! O Christ, the man! O Christ, the God! Keep Thy throne forever, seated on the circle of the earth, seated on the circle of heaven.

"On Christ, the solid rock, I stand;
All other ground is shifting sand."

THE SABBATH SCHOOL

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTARY FOR NOVEMBER 17.

Subject: The Childhood of Moses. Ex. 1-10.—Golden Text, Prov. [illegible] Memory Verses, 7-10.—Commentary on the Day's Lesson.

1. "A man." His name was [illegible] and his wife's name was Jochebed [illegible] 20; Num. 26. 59. "House of Levi." Moses's parents were both of the tribe of Levi.

2. "A son." There were two [illegible] older than Moses, Miriam (2. 4) [illegible] was probably from eight [illegible] er, and Aaron (7. 7), who was three [illegible] older. (7. 7). "Goodly child." The simple fact that he was good [illegible] fact that he was not only a [illegible] formed child, but that he was very [illegible] ful. This very circumstance was [illegible] ordained by the kind providence of [illegible] to be one means of [illegible] Scarcely anything interests [illegible] than the sight of a lovely child. [illegible] His beauty would induce [illegible] to double their exertions [illegible] was probably the main reason why [illegible] the Egyptian princess [illegible] ular care of him, and [illegible] son, which in all likelihood she would have done had he been [illegible] child. "Hid him." The act [illegible] within the house.

3. "Ark." A small [illegible] ket. She did not make [illegible] it and prepared it for [illegible] bulrushes." The papyrus [illegible] strong and tough reed which [illegible] reaches a height of from [illegible] feet. "Slime." The [illegible] which, when hardened [illegible] "Pitch." Mineral tar [illegible] scription are seen daily floating on the surface of the river, [illegible] ing than Nile mud [illegible] are perfectly water-tight [illegible] ing is forced off by [illegible] "Flags." A general term for [illegible] weed. The spot is truly [illegible] be the Isle of Rhoda near old Cairo.

4. "His sister." Miriam. It [illegible] that Moses had only one sister [illegible] 59. "Afar off." So as not to [illegible] anxiety. "To wit." "To know." [illegible] It was her duty to see whether [illegible] daughter found him, and whether [illegible] in danger from any cause.

5. "Daughter of Pharaoh." It has been estimated that she was about [illegible] years of age at this time and that [illegible] was born in the sixth year of the reign of Rameses II. "To bathe." [illegible] women of Egypt are now kept [illegible] secluded in harems, and it is not [illegible] ary for them to bathe in the Nile. [illegible] has been shown that the women of ancient Egypt were quite unrestrained, had liberties, such as women in Christian lands do now, and bathing in the Nile was a common practice with them at [illegible] time. "At the river." The water was there fenced off as a protection from crocodiles, and doubtless the princess had an enclosure reserved for her own use, the road to which seems to have been known to Jochebed. "Washed herself." Hence the discovery of the ark was made by them, but by the princess herself, a providential circumstance, which led her to a personal interest in the child. "Sent her handmaid" (R. V.) Her immediate attendant.

6. "Saw the child." As soon as she saw the child she knew that it was one of the Hebrew children, for only a Hebrew would have need to hide her child in this manner. "The babe wept." The sight of a beautiful babe in distress could not fail to make the impression here mentioned. See v. 2. It has been conjectured that the cruel edict of the Egyptian king did not continue long in force. See Ex. 1. 22. "Had compassion." Thus she found a protector in the very heart of the king who decreed its death.

"Save the boys." Our great cities are filled with children who are exposed to a worse fate than Pharaoh's decree of Nile exodus in the river. Legislation is lax and severe, and will destroy none to save. Only recently two sixteen-year-old girls were arraigned in the Chicago police court. Such a course is the word that could easily be taken with such small offence. Official charity is also too rough to be trusted with the little life that must be lifted out of the slum. Tender hands are needed to dry the tears of these neglected babies." We must look to Christian women. They should use their influence to see the facts, and not be so blind to their own luxury and comfort that they pass the poor pitch-covered basket by, and they should conquer the prejudice of race and the fear of lowering themselves.

7. "His sister." Miriam had been near enough to see and hear everything. No doubt the child had been carefully instructed by her mother. But God was directing matters, and to Him, more than to any human wisdom, was the praise be given.

9. "Nurse it." By thus taking pay the mother became from this time in some sense the recognized servant of the princess; for otherwise how could she have joy more safety with her babe than before? "Thy wages." She was to be paid. She had not only the wages made her safe as the servant of the princess, but she had the infinite wages of seeing her son safe, and of the privilege of caring for him and training him. "Took the child." Doubtless this God-fearing mother trained him very carefully. Children should be very thankful when they have Christian parents who bring them up in the nurture and fear of God.

10. "Unto Pharaoh's daughter." Though it must have been much [illegible] were a trial for Jochebed to part with [illegible] the second time as the first, she was doubtless, reconciled to it by [illegible] in his high destination as the deliverer of Israel. "He became her son." By adoption, and the high rank [illegible] him advantages in education which [illegible] providence of God, were made [illegible] to far different purposes from the royal patroness intended. We can [illegible] an idea of what his education was [illegible] Acts 7. 22. But Moses had [illegible] moral and an intellectual training [illegible] according to Josephus, he had also [illegible] tical preparation for the great work [illegible] was before him. It appears that [illegible] opians came into Egypt and [illegible] army that was sent to resist them [illegible] upon the command was given to [illegible] He immediately took the field [illegible] feated the enemy with great [illegible] His military achievements [illegible] popular estimation his [illegible] ments, and he returned from [illegible] paign the most popular man in [illegible] dom. "Called his name." What name he had from his parents we know not, whatever it might have been it is [illegible] after lost in the name given to him by the princess of Egypt.

The Nebraska State Journal [illegible] that some day it will dawn on the leaders of the United States [illegible] ticipal beauty is worth more to [illegible] ing trade and visitors than [illegible] devices that are now employed [illegible] this service. Some day [illegible] ucation may begin to realize [illegible] cheaply planned public [illegible] ting is not only an injury to [illegible] dren, but an actual hindrance [illegible] to the whole community.

Sickness Explained.

In Liverpool recently a sentimental young lady was on the Cunard steamship pier when she saw a young girl sitting on a trunk in an attitude of [illegible] dejection and despair. "Poor thing," thought the romantic lady, "she is probably alone and a stranger. Her pale cheeks and great sad eyes tell of a broken heart and a yearning for sympathy." So she went over to the stranger to win her confidence. "Cross in love" she asked sympathetically. "No," replied the girl, with a [illegible] "crossed in the Servia and an awful rough passage, too."

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMEN FOR NOVEMBER 17.

Subject: The Childhood of Moses, Ex. 1-10 — Golden Text, Prov. Memory Verses, 7-10 — Comm on the Day's Lesson.

1. "A man." His name was Amr and his wife's name was Jochebed. Ex. 6: Num 26: 59. "House of Levi." Moses's parents were both of the tribe of Levi.

2. "A son." There were two children older than Moses, Miriam (15: 20), who was probably from eight to ten years older, and Aaron (7: 2), who was three years older (7: 7). "Goodly child." The Heb simply says that he was good, which implies that he was not only a perfectly formed child, but that he was very beautiful. The very circumstance was ordained by the kind providence of God to be one means of his preservation. Scarcely anything interests the heart more than the sight of a lovely babe in distress. His beauty would induce even his parents to double their exertions to save him, as was probably the sole motive which induced the Egyptian princess to take such particular care of him, and to educate him as her own, which in all likelihood she would not have done had he been only an ordinary child. "Hid him." That is, kept him within the house.

3. "Ark." A small covered box or basket. She did not make it then, but had it and prepared it for her purpose. "Bulrushes." The papyrus plant, a thick, strong and tough reed, which sometimes reaches a height of from ten to fifteen feet. "Slime." The mud of the Nile, which, when hardened, is very tenacious. "Pitch." Mineral tar. Boats of this description are seen daily floating on the surface of the river, with no other covering than Nile mud (Isa. 18: 2), and they are perfectly water-tight unless the covering is forced off by stormy weather. "Flags." A general term for sea or river weed. The spot is traditionally said to be the Isle of Rhoda, near old Cairo.

4. "His sister." Miriam. It appears that Moses had only one sister. Num. 26: 59. "Afar off." So as not to show anxiety. "To wit." "To know." It was her duty to see whether Pharaoh's daughter found him, and whether he was in danger from any cause.

5. "Daughter of Pharaoh." It has been estimated that she was about eighteen years of age at this time, and that Moses was born in the sixth year of the reign of Rameses II. "To bathe" (R. V.). The women of Egypt are now kept jealously secluded in harems, and it is not customary for them to bathe in the Nile. But it has been shown that the women of ancient Egypt were quite unrestrained, and had liberties, such as women in Christian lands do now, and bathing in the river was a common practice with them at the time. "At the river." The water was there fenced off as a protection from crocodiles, and doubtless the princess had an enclosure reserved for her own use, the road to which seems to have been known to Jochebed. "Walked along." Hence the discovery of the ark was made by them, but by the princess herself, a providential circumstance, which led her to a personal interest in the babe. "Sent her handmaid" (R. V.) Her female attendant.

6. "Saw the child." As soon as she opened the child she knew that it was one of the Hebrew children, for only a Hebrew mother would have need to hide her child in this manner. "The babe wept." The sight of a beautiful babe in distress could not fail to make the impression here recorded. See v. 2. It has been conjectured that the cruel edict of the Egyptians did not continue long in force. See ch. 1: 22. "Had compassion." Thus she proved a protector in the very family of the king who decreed its death.

7. "Save the boys." Our great cities are filled with children who are exposed to a worse fate than Pharaoh's decree or the crocodiles in the river. Legislation is too costly and severe, and will destroy instead of save. Only recently two six-year-old girls were arraigned in the Chicago police court. Such a course is the worst that could possibly be taken with such small children. Official clarity is also too rough to be trusted with the little life that must be lifted out of the slum. "Tender hands are needed to dry the tears of these weeping babies." We must look to Christian women. They should use their eyes to see the facts, and not be so busy about their own luxury and comfort that they pass the poor pitch-covered box unnoticed, and they should conquer the prejudice of race and the fear of lowering themselves.

8. "His sister." Miriam had been near enough to see and hear everything. No doubt the child had been carefully instructed by her mother. But God's providence was directing matters and to Him, rather than to any human wisdom, must the praise be given.

9. "Nurse it." By thus taking the child the mother became from this time in some sense the recognized servant of the princess; for otherwise how would she enjoy more safety with her babe than before? "Thy wages." She was to be paid. She had not only the wages which made her safe as the servant of the princess, but she had the infinitely higher wages of seeing her son safe, and of having the privilege of caring for him and training him. "Took the child." No doubt this God-fearing mother trained her child very carefully. Children should be very thankful when they have Christian parents who bring them up in the knowledge and fear of God.

10. "Unto Pharaoh's daughter." Though it must have been nearly as severe a trial for Jochebed to part with him the second time as the first, she was doubtless, reconciled to it by her faith in his high destination as the future deliverer of Israel. "He became her son." By adoption, and the high rank which gave him advantages in education which, by the providence of God, were made subservient to far different purposes from those for which royal patroness intended. We can form an idea of what his education was from Acts 7: 22. But Moses had not only a moral and an intellectual training, for, according to Josephus, he had also a military preparation for the great work which was before him. It appears that the Ethiopians came into Egypt and routed the army that was sent to resist them, and upon the command was given to Moses. He immediately took the field and defeated the enemy with great slaughter. His military achievements established his popular estimation his intellectual attainments, and he returned from the campaign the most popular man in the kingdom. "Called his name." What name he had from his parents we know not, but whatever it might have been it was soon after lost in the name given to him by the princes of Egypt.

The Nebraska State Journal expects that some day it will dawn upon the leaders of the United States that municipal beauty is worth more in attracting trade and visitors than all the devices that are now expended in this service. Some day boards of education may begin to realize that cheaply planned public school building is not only an injury to children, but an actual business drawback to the whole community.

Sadness Explained.

An Liverpool recently a sentimental young lady was on the Cunard steamship Umbria when she saw a young girl sitting on a trunk in an attitude of utter dejection and despair. "Poor thing," thought the romantic lady, "she is probably alone and a stranger. Her pale cheeks and great sad eyes tell of a broken heart and a yearning for sympathy." So she went over to the stranger to win her confidence. "Cross-in love, I'm sure," she asked sympathetically. "No," replied the girl, with a sob, "crossed in the Servia, and an awful rough passage, too."

HOUSEWORK

Too much housework wrecks women's nerves. And the constant care of children, day and night, is often too trying for even a strong woman. A haggard face tells the story of the overworked housewife and mother. Deranged menses, leucorrhœa and falling of the womb result from overwork. Every housewife needs a remedy to regulate her menses and to keep her sensitive female organs in perfect condition.

WINE OF CARDUI

is doing this for thousands of American women to-day. It cured Mrs. Jones and that is why she writes this touch letter:

Chattanooga, Tenn., Feb. 19, 1901.

I am so glad that your Wine of Cardui is helping me. I am feeling better than I have felt for years. I am doing my own work without any help, and I washed last week and didn't feel one bit tired. That shows that your Wine is doing me good. I am getting fleshier than I ever was before, and sleep good and eat hearty. Before I began taking Wine of Cardui, I used to have to lay down five or six times every day, but now I do not think of lying down through the day. MRS. RICHARD JONES.

THE AMERICAN MONTHLY REVIEW OF REVIEWS

THE AMERICAN MONTHLY REVIEW OF REVIEWS is commended by Statesmen, Professional men and thousands of others prominent in the world's activities, for its fair discrimination in sifting the actual news from conflicting report and the presentation of current events in their just proportion. They commend its freedom from daily-paper sensationalism. All men and women who want to know what the world is doing find it an intellectual necessity, to judge from the letters received from hundreds. Its editorials are comprehensive, and labor saving to the busy man or woman. Its timely contributions on important topics are by the best-informed writers. Its reviews of other magazines give the best of their best work. It is profusely illustrated.

These letters will enable all thoughtful men and women to judge of its value to them:

PRESIDENT

"I know that through its editorial columns views have been presented to me that I could not otherwise have had access to, because all earnest and thoughtful men, no matter how widely their ideas diverge are given free utterance in its editorial columns."—Theodore Roosevelt.

EX-PRESIDENT

"I consider it a very valuable addition to my library."
—Grover Cleveland.

"It is a publication of very great value. I have sometimes found there very important matter indeed which I should not otherwise have discovered."—George F. Hoar, U. S. Senator, Massachusetts.

THE MAN ON THE CORNER

Some of the Sights He Sees, and Some He Sees Not.

On the corner the other day we were discussing the election returns and the Colonel gave the following reasons for the large number of ballots in the black belt two years ago for election: "It was fear (again) and the Colonel, "the negro scares himself now, for the good he has got from the new constitution and the future. The negro is a farsighted man; he votes to disfranchise himself for the good of his country. The negro (in the black belt) is an accomodating man, he recognizes that the new constitution is for white supremacy, and he willingly votes that way. In fact there is no end to the sacrifice the negro will not cheerfully make (in the black belt) for the upbuilding of the State. He gladly votes to disfranchise himself in the interests of white supremacy." I suppose the Colonel is right, and that is the only way to account for the reduction from the black belt counties.

Two more new brick stores for Dr. E. A. Matthews are in course of erection between the Bank and Wilson & Bro. The one next to the Bank will be occupied by The Banner, and I have not yet heard who will be in the other. By and by, I want to say the Bank building is a really handsome structure, and is a credit to the town, also to Ben Teel, the contractor. This is Ben's first brick building and I think he takes especial pride in making a first-class job of it. We all knew Ben could build us a right good frame building, and now we know he can build us A No. 1 brick. Good boy, Ben.

Once again we will meet old friends from all parts of the county next week at court, and Clanton extends a hearty welcome to them. Court time brings old friends together, and its social aspect is the best part of it. There are many cases that bring people to court, some may have fallen out over one thing or the other and have to come to court to get it straightened out; but jurymen and witnesses, and visitors generally, hob nob with each other, and have a good time around. I am neither a juryman or a witness, or a participator in suits, and therefore am pleased and proud to meet you all. You will find me on the corner, glad to hear all you have to say, but as Clanton is getting to be such a big town you will have to find out for yourselves which corner I am on.

HAPPILY MARRIED.

At the home of the bride's parents near Clanton, November 14, Mr. Thomas W. Kemp and Miss Lottie L. Oates were happily united, Judge Adams performing the ceremony. Tom is a popular young man and his bride a charming young lady. We join their many friends in wishing them long life and happiness.

At the residence of the bride's parents on November 10, Mr. L. Williams and Miss Filey Calloway were joined in the holy bonds of matrimony, Rev. M. J. Parrish officiating. The youthful pair have many years before them which we hope will be happy and prosperous.

November 12, at the home of the bride, Mr. J. S. Kendrick and Miss Ella H. Keen were made man and wife by justice of the Peace G. W. Jones. Long and happy may their wedded life be.

In the morning of November 11, at the court house, while the ratification election was going on, Mr. Jno. Lackey and Miss Belle McCrary elected to become one, and Judge Adams tied the election knot, and they were happy ever after. We wish them long life and happiness.

TO GIVE A GOLD DOLLAR AWAY

Take Laxative Bromo-Quinine Tablets. All druggists refund the money if it fails to cure. E. W. Grove's signature is on each box. 25 cents.

Pratt City, Ala., Nov. 13, 1901.

The marriage of Mr. Eureka J. Downs to Miss Libbie Ethel Gholson was solemnized by Rev. J. Black of the M. E. church South, at 5:30 p.m., at the home of the bride's parents, Pratt City, Alabama. Mr. L. E. Gholson, father of the bride, came from Autauga county to Pratt City, several years ago, where they are widely known and have hosts of friends, who wish for Mr. and Mrs. Downs a long and happy journey through life's paths, and may their constant companionship be sweet always, as God hath ordained that they should. Miss Gholson is a young lady of a very lovable and sweet disposition, and the groom deserves being complimented in the highest in winning for himself Miss Gholson as a companion. Mr. Downs has numerous friends in Chilton county that will all join together in wishing the bride and groom guidance by the holy spirit in all the paths of life. J. W. H.

How to Make Friends of the Filipinos.

It is impossible to live among the Filipinos without admiring their many good and wholesome qualities. Nearly all of their weakness of character and disposition are due to causes for which they should not be held accountable. What is bad or vicious in them is not in the blood but in the influence of example and custom. If we will remove from their daily lives the presence of an immoral government and of venal and licentious officials, and from their surroundings the aspiror incident to a corrupt and grasping tax-system then we will advance them far on the road to prosperity and civilization; we will rouse in them a desire for comfort, cleanliness, and homely luxuries, eradicate those qualities of sloth and deceit which, after all, are but skin deep, and bring into pressing prominence their natural traits of kindness, good nature, love of family, and virtuous living. Their religious fervor needs no cure, except at the head; and this is the one good inheritance—could we forget the wrongs done by individuals—which the departed power of Spain has left behind.

The part taken by our army in the civil settlement of the Philippine Islands is a page in history that may never be written, but will be remembered by the Filipinos with gratitude and respect. It was from that army that they gained the true definition of official honor; and with unaccustomed eyes they saw its members using every power of mind and body in the development of good government and fair dealings, with no incentive beyond right principle, and no reward but clear conscience. They looked, as was natural to men of their training, for motives, either sinister or selfish; for it was not conceivable that health, and home, and even life would be risked or thrown away for the mere contemplation of duty done and honor satisfied. But it has come to pass, and their eyes are opened and they believe.—From "The view-point of the Filipinos," by H. L. Hawthorne, in the American Monthly Review of Reviews for November.

CIRCUIT COURT.

The Fall term of Circuit Court commences at Clanton next Monday. There are several small cases set for the first, or civil, week. The principle case is that of Mrs. Lola Cunningham vs. Jackson Lumber Co. This is a suit for $25,000 damage for the loss of her husband, an engineer, killed by the derailing of the Company's log train.

In the second week the principle case is that of Joe Christian, charged with attempt to murder Mr. G. W. Willis.

FATAL SHOOTING AT CLEAR CREEK.

An unfortunate shooting affair took place last Saturday night at the home of Jim Woolley (colored) near Clear Creek. There was a frolic, at which some white men were present, and Bill Bailey (white) procuring a gun shot and killed Joe Patton (white).

On Sunday Justice of the Peace W. H. Shaw held an inquest and Bailey was committed to the county jail.

Following is the verdict returned by the jury:

We, the jury summoned and duly sworn, to ascertain who the dead man was, when and by what means he came to his death; we find the deceased, Joe Patton, came to his death by a gun shot in the hands of Bill Baily and that the act was unjustifiable;

It Saved Her Life.

Gooch's Mexican Syrup has accomplished a cure in this neighborhood which has astonished the people. Miss Davis was given up to die by her attending physician. She had lung fever. The doctor said she would die before morning, and advised to discontinue his medicine, as it was doing her no good. Her parents had a bottle of Gooch's Mexican Syrup and Gooch's Quick Relief in the house. They at once began to give the syrup in doses one hour apart, and frequently bathed her chest with the Quick Relief. Before morning she was better, and after using a few bottles of each, she is almost as well as ever. It was almost like raising the dead, and has established the reputation of Gooch's Mexican Syrup here as a cough remedy; we can sell nothing else.

PLANTERSVILLE, ALA.

Is a training and strictly private school for boys and girls.

Correlated to the University of Alabama and to the Alabama Polytechnic Institute.

Has fitted more pupils for college, more pupils for teaching, more pupils for advanced business positions than all other schools in Chilton county combined. It is the only school in Chilton county whose pupils have a First Grade Certificate under the present school laws.

Its course of instruction is the best arranged, its methods the soundest, most thorough and up-to-date; its scholarship the most advanced; its location, buildings, grounds, furniture, equipments, the most attractive and best adapted of any school in Chilton county.

Its pupils enter any college in the South on certificate of the Principal. It deals honestly with the public, adheres to professional courtesy, and performs its promises. Its mission is to build up, not to pull down. It is not, as some are, a mere common school called "College," "Normal," etc., by which misnomers the uninformed are misled.

$101 pays all expenses of board, tuition, fuel, lights, etc., for session of nine months. School opens September 25, 1901. Write for catalogue.

Canada occasionally grows weary of being called "our lady of the snows." Even poetic license ought not permit a man to cast aspersions on any one's climate.

The hymn, "Nearer, My God, to Thee," which President McKinley murmured in his dying hour, was written by Mrs. Sarah Flower Adams, who was born in 1805. It was a record of her own religious experience, and was written as a memorial of answered prayer, probably without any expectation that it would be of public service. It was furnished, with thirteen other hymns, to Charles Fox's "Collection of Hymns and Anthems," published in London in 1841.

The New York Herald has lately compiled a list of 3828 millionaires in the United States—that is, one person out of every 20,000. And the estimate is that eighty-seven per cent. of them made their own fortunes; that only thirteen per cent. of them received large fortunes by inheritance; that the same number became rich from the increased values of real estate; that nearly twenty per cent. made fortunes as manufacturers, sixteen per cent. as merchants, twelve per cent. by transportation and ten per cent. by banking.

Hope springs eternal in the breasts of many visionaries, who imagine that they may get possession some day of enormous estates in England. The latest delusion of that sort is inspired by a ridiculous fable to the effect that in the British Court of Chancery property amounting in value to more than $200,000,000 is awaiting proofs of descent to be submitted by American heirs, who base their claims on a lineage going back to an English ancestor dead some two hundred years. How wild and fantastic are the dreams of such Americans!

The theory that still lingers in nearly all the geography books, that the Gulf Stream brings warmth and salubrity to England and to the coasts of Northwestern Europe, is now denounced by the United States meteorologists as a myth, says Popular Science. It is stated that by the time the Gulf Stream arrives east of Newfoundland it is not distinguishable in temperature or set of current from the rest of the ocean; and if it were by any possibility to be diverted at the Straits of Florida no one in England would be aware of it. It is the eastward drift of the atmosphere from the Atlantic which distributes over Europe a mild climate.

The late census statistics collated in Great Britain show that the present race of Britishers is increasing in height and weight. Out of 10,000 boys and men used as a test, it has been found that at the age of seventeen the average height is five feet eight inches and average weight 142 pounds; at twenty-two, five feet nine inches and 153 pounds. In fifty years the average for the whole nation has advanced from five feet seven and a half inches in height to five feet eight and a half inches. The average height of the upper classes at thirty years of age is given at five feet eight and a half inches; of farm laborers, five feet seven and three-fifth inches; while the height of the criminal class has fallen to five feet five and four-fifth inches.

An English critic, writing on the novel of the future, suggests that its most salient characteristic may be "the relegation of the element of sex love to a secondary place." Accurate persons will suggest at once that the result would be, not a noval, but a romance. For the conventional love story leading up to the wedding march, the wedding breakfast and the bridal tour, even if these things are cut out at the last moment, is as essentially a part of our novels as it is of our plays. An American or English novel is expected to end with wedding bells, just as a French one begins with them. No matter what digressions may be introduced, the history of the love affair of the heroine and hero is the string upon which the whole narrative is strung. Even in the historical novels, princes, principalities and powers, great statesmen and great soldiers, circulate around the two modest figures whose happiness is at stake. Hence the custom, common with many feminine readers, of turning to the last pages, after reading the first chapter, to satisfy their very characteristic curiosity as to whether or not the tale has a happy ending, remarks the New York Evening Sun.

The antis are still claiming to have carried the state by about 20,000.

ARRANGEMENTS are being completed for the beautifying of the park at the Huntsville depot of the Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis railroad. Major Thomas, the president, will have a handsome fountain put in.

NUMBER ELEVEN.

The eleventh cotton mill will probably be established in Huntsville within the next few months. W. I. Wellman and other well known business men are negotiating with eastern capitalists, and it appears now that Huntsville has the advantage in the eyes of the investors.

LAND AGENT McCAIN.

Governor Jelks has appointed State Senator J. R. McCain, of Clay county, to be state land agent, to fill the vacancy caused by the recent death of E. H. Lawrence.

GOOD NEWS.

The Louisville & Nashville authorities announce that beginning November 1st the wages of all mechanics in the shops at New Decatur will be advanced 10 per cent.

THE North Alabama Conference of the M. E. church will convene at Anniston on November 27th, Bishop Hendrix, presiding.

FOR GOOD ROADS.

Governor Jelks has issued the following proclamation with reference to the Good Roads Conventions:

Whereas, Good Road Conventions will be held in Birmingham, November 20th to 23rd; in Mobile, from November 29th to 30th, and in Montgomery, beginning December 4th and including December 6th, and, whereas, it is very important for the future welfare of the state that we improve this opportunity looking to the uniform betterment of all our highways. Therefore, I, William D. Jelks, Governor of Alabama, request and urge the mayors of the cities and towns, the commercial bodies, the boards of revenue and the commissioners' courts of the various counties to send suitable men as delegates to such of these conventions as shall be most convenient for them. Practical road making will engage the attention of the delegates during a good part of the time and can but furnish happy object lessons to be carried back and distributed in the various districts of the state. The thoughts of our people can rest upon no more important subject than the building and care of our stretches of neglected highways, and, hence, the interest I, as governor of this state, in common with all thoughtful people, have in the proposed movement. In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of State to be affixed at the Capitol, in the city of Montgomery, this the 13th day of November, 1901.

(Great Seal) William D. Jelks.

By the Governor:

Robert P. McDavid,
Secretary of State.

BEFORE HIS FATHER'S EYES.

At Anniston Sidney Olive, a young white man, met a most horrible death at the furnace of the Woodstock Iron Company Friday morning. The young man was switching cars. He was on the incline of the stock house when told to let a string of seven cars down the incline. He started and had begun setting up the brakes when the cars got from under his control and ran down the incline colliding at the bottom with a loaded car. When the strings of "empties" collided, Mr. Olive was thrown from his position to the rails and the wheels of three cars passed over him mangling him almost beyond recognition. His father who is also employed by the company, witnessed the death of his son. Olive's head was cut from his shoulders, his left leg cut off and his right arm mashed with the rest of his body into into a mangled mass. Death was instantaneous.

BRAKES WOULDN'T WORK.

A collision occurred at Ardella Friday morning on the "Three B," road. A Southern double-header was bound north and as it neared the station the air brakes became uncontrollable. The engines ran into the caboose of another freight train and tore up both engines. The caboose was mashed into splinters and ten cars were derailed. Engineer Foster of one of the double header engines was seriously bruised but not necessarily fatally. A wrecking train which started to the assistance of the wrecked train was wrecked at Bootbtown. The engine was derailed but nobody was hurt.

RICHARD McFARLAND'S handsome country residence situated two miles from Bridgeport was entirely destroyed by fire early last week. The fire caught from a defective flue. No insurance.

TWO FIRES

Tuesday night aroused the slumbering citizens of Greensboro. One was soon extinguished. The other was the residence of Mrs. Ben Fitzpatrick, who owns the telephone exchange. The fire originated in the kitchen, and the house was in flames while Mrs. Fitzpatrick and her five children slept. Some of the household effects were saved, but the house was consumed. No insurance. Many kind friends have come to the rescue, and more than $1,000 has been subscribed to build Mrs. Fitzpatrick another house.

A NEW BANK.

A new national bank, plans for which have been in preparation for some time, will be opened for business about the first of January in Montgomery. It is announced that the new institution will have a capital stock of $250,000 and that all the stock has been subscribed. S. Roman will be president of the new bank, it is said, with John Kohn, cashier.

FATAL AFFRAY.

At Benton, Lowndes county, Thursday night, Walter Jones, a well-known young white man, shot Charles Miller, inflicting a wound which proved fatal. Jones is the proprietor of a restaurant at Benton, and Miller was for some time in his employ. The two men had had trouble about Miller's salary, and words developed into a warm altercation. Jones, it is said, drew a revolver and knocked Miller down with it. The latter sprang up and struck his assailant with a stick, when Jones in turn fired his weapon one of the bullets taking effect in Miller's breast and coming out at the back. Jones gave himself up to the police immediately after the shooting.

A FIENDISH ACT IF TRUE.

The officials of the Central of Georgia Railroad believe that the recent wreck at Leeds, in which two men were killed and several others were seriously injured, was the result of malicious tampering with the trestle through which the train fell, and an arrest has been made in the case. The party under arrest is a negro named Will Morgan, and he is charged with maliciously injuring a trestle by taking from it portions which weakened it so that engines or cars passing over it would go through.

THE BEST LIGHTS.

The new machinery ordered for the duplicating of that now in use by the Huntsville Railway, Light & Power Co. has been ordered. President A. L. Sweeney, of the company, announces that Huntsville will enjoy the best light and electric railway system of any city in Alabama after his new machinery has been installed. The city is now being furnished with the incandescent system and several extensions in the railway systems are contemplated.

LAST FRIDAY the state game law expired and the sportsmen of Alabama are now at liberty to hunt the partridges, which are said to be unusually plentiful this season, to their heart's content. The game law of this state is a particularly severe one and is especially stringent against pot hunters, providing severe penalties for anyone guilty of trapping game birds or mammals for sale. Those guilty of hunting out of season are also severely punished.

HENRY KING, a well known planter, living near Selma, had a narrow escape from death Friday morning, his life being saved by a derby hat. He was standing under a windmill on his place when one of the flanges of the mill flew off and falling, struck him in the top of his head. He was painfully hurt, but the stiff hat saved him from serious injury.

THOMAS J. ASHFORD, of Birmingham, president of the Alabama Field Trial Club, has been in Athens making the final arrangements for holding the next Alabama Field Trials. He met with enthusiastic encouragement and the next trials will be held near Athens, with headquarters at Athens, beginning on February 3rd, next.

It is understood the president will make no direct recommendation on the subject of taxation. He will lay the situation before Congress and call attention to the recommendations of Secretary Gage but he will make no direct suggestions.

FATAL SALOON ROW.

In Attalla Saturday night Perry Stovall was shot and instantly killed by John R. Kelly in a saloon. Both were young boys about 19 years old. Stovall had been drinking and picked up a billiard cue and struck Kelly. Kelly drew his pistol and shot four times, two balls penetrating Stovall's heart.

RECORD BROKEN.

The record of mining coal from one slope was broken by the Warner mines last Friday when 2,370 tons were brought to light.

TRANSGRESSORS' WAYS.

Circuit court at Carrollton adjourned Saturday night at 11 o'clock. The week was a Waterloo for criminals. Every case that went to a jury received a verdict of guilty exceptone minor misdemeanor. The solicitor gets $1,132.50 in fees.

GRAY FORGE IRON has gone up 75c per ton.

LATEST STATE NEWS.

FELL SIXTY FEET.

Frank Cooper, a brickmason employed on Birmingham's City Hall, had a miraculous escape from death Saturday afternoon. Mr. Cooper had some occasion to go down to the ground and he decided to go by the way of a shaft that is being used to hoist lumber and other material to the upper floors of the building. There was a rope hanging down this shaft and he caught this and swung out into space. The rope was only lying across a beam, not being fastened to anything and he shot down ward at a frightful rate with the rope clutched in his hands. Mr. Cooper landed with terrific crash upon a heap of lumber on the ground floor. The noise was heard by a number of persons who rushed to the spot expecting to find him dead or dying. Instead they found him with a sickly smile upon his face, as much as to say "the joke is on me," and he arose from the lumber heap and walked off unaided.

SHEFFIELD HEADS THE LIST.

The official report of loaded cars handled by the Southern Railway during the month of October, makes a most flattering showing for Sheffield. In fact Sheffield leads all other points in Alabama. The following figures show the number of loaded cars handled by the Southern Railway during the month of October at the principal cities located on their line: Sheffield, 2542 cars; Birmingham, 2374; Florence, 1076; Huntsville, 423; Decatur, 157; Tuscumbia, 33. It is believed by the citizens of this place that in view of the large amount of revenue that it derives from Sheffield, that at an early date the Southern Railway will decide to run its through passenger trains through here, as it would necessitate a detour from its present main line of only about a mile.

FIRE AT GALLION.

Fire in Gallion Sunday afternoon burned to the ground the following business houses: R. W. Collins, Davico & Bro., Kahn and company and two other stores. Nothing was left in Gallion after the fire but J. T. Collins store and the depot. Every one carried full insurance. No cause is known for the fire.

FELL FROM THE TRAIN.

Ed Adams, a white miner, fell from a freight train Sunday at Mobile Junction, receiving injuries from which he died. Adams got on the train at Whilden. He was not an employe of the road, but was assisting with the brakes when he fell.

CAUGHT IN THE MACHINERY.

Mr. Robert Harris, working at the Ensley Steel Plant, was seriously and perhaps fatally injured while at work Sunday night. In some manner he became entangled in some machinery and it is thought sustained a fracture of the skull.

MR. NAT BAXTER, president of the Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Company, has tendered his resignation from that position and accepted the presidency of the Cumberland Coal & Coke Co., of Tennessee. The resignation takes effect December 1st.

A PAVING contract for 1700 square yards of street in the business section of Mobile was awarded Friday to the Green River Asphalt Company of St. Louis. The contract calls for the expenditure by the city of $48,201.45, the company agreeing to do the work for $1.80 per square yard.

LITIGATION of unusual interest is pending in the circuit court of Talladega, being a suit brought by the First Presbyterian church, which owns the Isbell Female college, to recover $10,000 of the late Mr. Isbell's estate, which is alleged to have been bequeathed to the college. The heirs of the estate resist the claim, urging that the state is now insolvent owing the estate of Captain Armstong, deceased, the executor of the Isbell estate, a large sum of money.

THE University of Alabama eleven defeated the Mechanical College team from Starkville, Miss., last Saturday at Tuscaloosa, the score being 45 to 0.

SUGGESTION has been made and it is believed it will carry for the Baptist denomination of Alabama to present Mrs. A. W. McGaha with a handsome home in Huntsville in appreciation of the wonderful Christian work accomplished by her husband, Rev. Dr. A. W. McGaha, who is in a dying condition at the home of his mother in Huntsville.

NEW TREATY SIGNED.

The new Hay-Pauncefote Nicaragua canal treaty was signed Monday. It is said to contain the following provisions: The canal may be constructed under the auspices of the government of the United States either directly at its own cost or by government loan to individuals or corporations or through subscription, the said government shall have and enjoy all the rights incident to such construction as well as the exclusive right of providing for the management and maintenance of the canal. The canal shall be free and open to the vessels of commerce and of war of all nations, the canal shall never be blockaded nor shall any act of hostility be committed within. Vessels of war of any belligerent shall not revictual nor take any stores in the canal except in such as may be strictly necessary, and the transit of such vessels through the canal shall be effected with the least possible delay. No belligerent shall embark or disembark troops, munitions of war or war like materials in the canal except in case of accident. The provisions of this article shall apply to waters adjacent to the canal within three marine miles. The vessels of war of a belligerent shall not remain in such waters longer than twenty-four hours at any one time except in cases of distress, but a vessel of war of a belligerent shall not depart within twenty-four hours from the departure of a vessel of war of the other belligerent. The plants and establishments, building and all works necessary to the construction, maintenance and operation of the canal shall be deemed thereof, and in time of war as in time of peace shall enjoy complete immunity from attack from belligerents.

QUEEN LIL

Arrived in San Francisco a few days since and it is announced that she is seeking recovery of health and has come to consult the authorities relative to the crown lands of Hawaii, which were sequestered by the revolutionary government, and no attempt has been made to reimburse her for the loss of the revenues, amounting to $100,000 a year. The territorial legislature appropriated $250,000 for the crown lands, but President Dole vetoed the bill on the ground of insufficient money to pay it. Subsequently the legislature offered her a pension of $25,000 a year, but she refused to be placed on the list of charitables. She favored the annexation of the islands and advised to submit her claims to the court for arbitration. The crown lands comprise over a million acres and are worth about $15,000,000.

A GOOD HAUL.

E. F. Lowenthal, a diamond dealer of New York, arrived at Portland, Ore., Sunday evening and registered at a hotel. He was assigned to a room and placed a trunk containing diamonds valued at $10,000 and $1,000 in gold in the room. Mr. Lowenthal states that he left the hotel between 9 and 10 o'clock last evening and that, when he returned, he found the trunk broken open and the diamonds and cash missing. Detectives are searching for a missing jeweler believed to have committed the robbery.

TO THE GRAND JURY.

It is now asserted that the national bank failure will be investigated before the federal grand jury. The Western National Bank of New York is said to have had a hand in the failure and it also holds the Oates bonds which were placed in the Enfaula bank as a deposit. A statement of the bank's condition has not yet been published. A gentleman interested said the conditions seemed to darken with investigation. He thought the bank's depositors would get would be 35 cents on the dollar.

USED DYNAMITE.

The south-western express on the Northern Central Railway, was wrecked Friday night by a charge of dynamite placed under the tracks near Cockeysville, Pa., a short distance north of York. Passengers on the train were severely shocked but escaped injury. A piece of rail 2½ feet long was blown out of the track and three coaches were derailed and ran over the ties a distance of 200 feet before the train was brought to a stop. It is believed the object of the perpetrators was robbery. A hole was blown in the roadbed large enough to bury a man. Where the rails were broken they were cut off as if done by shears. Detectives were dispatched to begin operations from York and Harrisburg. There is little hope that the dynamiters will be captured. It is thought they undoubtedly made their way to one of the large cities before daylight.

COPPER PIGS.

A special says the first shipment of commercial pig copper, in bars, ever turned out of the South went from Ducktown, Tenn., last week. It consisted of twelve car loads and the special train was decorated. The copper was sent to New York City. The pig copper smelter recently completed at Isabella, is said, the largest one of its kind in existence, save that at Anaconda, Mont. The Tennessee Copper company has spent about $1,000,000 and about three years' time in preparations for the working of copper ore, so that it can be put on the market as a finished copper product. This is one of the most important industries of the state.

MURDER WILL OUT.

The mystery of the murder of an old fisherman whose only known name was Ed, in a house boat at Tiptonville, has been solved. It seems that for some years he had held practically a boy, a young girl only 17 years of age. Recently she became acquainted and infatuated with a young man named Jack Matthews. The latter murdered her with a pistol and she killed the old fisherman. Together they threw him from the house boat, and after landing in the Tennessee river, turned it adrift. The girl related the facts to parties whom they met in the county. Both have escaped.

MONEY FOR MISSIONS.

Methodist Episcopal church appropriations for home missions are: Atlanta, $1,067; Central Alabama, $1,104; Central Missouri, $3,496; Eastern Tennessee, $1,803; Florida, $656; Little Rock, $2,705; Louisiana, $705; Mississippi, $1,803; Mobile, $1,104; Tennessee, $2,254; Texas, $3,[illegible]; Upper Mississippi, $2,223.

THERE is much excitement in Northern Michigan over the discovery of several beds of live asphalt near Rapid River, a village at the head of Little Bay Bencquetti. It is said the quality of the asphalt is equal to the famed Trinidad product.

HICKS ELECTED.

After re-electing Simon Burns, of Pittsburg, general master workman of the Knights of Labor the general assembly of the order reconsidered the action, and in Burns' place elected Henry A. Hicks, of New York, as the executive head of the order.

A GOOD REASON.

W. R. Stokman, a jeweler at Lockhart, Texas, took prussic acid Saturday. He left a note saying he killed himself because his wife did. A $10,000 estate he gave to relatives in Germany.

A GOOD REASON.

W. R. Stohman, a jeweler at Lockhart, Texas, took prussic acid Saturday. He left a note saying he killed himself because his wife did. A $10,000 estate he gave to relatives in Germany.

MISS HELEN GOULD has been made a member at large of the board of lady managers of the St. Louis exposition of 1903. Her election was unanimous. Twenty other women are to be elected soon to complete the board.

SENATOR LOW, of New York, has appointed George L. Rives, assistant secretary of state under President Cleveland, as corporation counsel.

PRINTING PRESS TRUST.

Plans are being discussed among some of the important makers of printing presses for the organizing of a consolidated company, says the Journal of Commerce. If the plans are carried out the combination will include the Cox Duplex and the Huber works, the Miehle Printing Press and Manufacturing Company, the Potter Printing Works at Springfield, Mass.; the Campbell Printing Press and Manufacturing Company; the Goss Printing Press Company; the Whitlock Printing Press and Manufacturing Company and the Walter Scott & Co. There have been reports from time to time that Hoe & Co. might enter the combination. The management of Hoe & Co. has steadily refused to enter into any amalgamation, no matter what the character, and consequently rumors of this nature find little credence in business circles. It is stated that estimates of the capital stock of the new combination range anywhere from $15,000,000 to $20,000,000.

OUR NEW ISLANDS.

Negotiations between the governments of the United States and Denmark relative to the cession to the United States of the Danish West Indies have been transferred to Washington. The negotiations were initiated by Mr. Swensen, United States minister to Copenhagen, about three years ago, and later on Mr. White, secretary of embassy at London, took up the work in behalf of the United States. The transfer to Washington was brought about through the desire of the Danish government to place its interests in the matter in the hands of Mr. Constantin Brun, the Danish minister at our capital. It is learned that within the last few days there has been increased activity in the negotiations and that sensible progress has been made toward the completion of a treaty of cession.

KISS AND MAKE UP.

Mrs. Daisy Mack, of DeKalb Ills., who secured a divorce from her husband, John F. Mack, last week, was given a surprise today when she received back $60,000 which she had given him as a wedding present. The couple separated on good terms and now it is affirmed Mrs. Mack is so affected by this generosity on the part of her former husband that the differences between them may be patched up.

W. C. T. U.

The National Woman's Christian Temperance Union of America is in session at Ft. Worth, Tex. There is great enthusiasm and a large attendance. One of the members made the startling announcement that there are saloons in Chicago that have play rooms for children and the little ones are taught to drink liquor. The following telegram was ordered sent to President Roosevelt: "The National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, in convention assembled, at Fort Worth, Tex., representing 300,000 women of the United States, sends greetings, with an appreciation of the responsibilities that have come to you. Be assured of our prayers to aid you in your work for righteousness."

MRS. SARAH ELIZABETH GRISWOLD MORSE, widow of Professor Samuel F. B. Morse, inventor of the telegraph, died in Berlin, Germany, on Thursday. She was Professor Morse's second wife and was married to him in 1848.

WAR ORDERS.

Orders have been issued by the war department directing the twenty-seventh infantry to sail for the Philippines as soon as transportation can be provided. Two battalions of the regiment are now at the Plattsburg barracks, New York, and the other at Fort McPherson, Ga. The regiment will probably proceed to Manila via New York and Suez canal. A battalion of the Twenty-third infantry, now in Colorado, has been ordered to Fort McPherson, where the other two battalions now en route home from the Philippines will be sent on arrival.

THE state of Illinois has presented a handsome silver service often pieces to the battleship named for the state.

UNITED STATES Senator Bacon, of Georgia, is home from the Philippines.

QUEEN WILHELMINA, of Holland, is reported much improved.

IMMIGRATION STATISTICS

SECRETARY OF THE NAVY LONG WANTS MORE VESSELS.

PHILIPPINE COMMISSION REPORT READY

Alabama Cotton Statistics for 1899—The Gathmann Torpedo Tested — Senator Stranahan's Plum — Agriculture Department Plans — Military.

The annual report of Commissioner General Powderly of the immigration bureau shows the total steerage arrivals in the United States during the year to have been 487,918, an increase over the preceding year of 39,346, or approximately 9 per cent. Of these 2020 came through Canadian ports and the remainder through ports of this country. There were also 74,950 other alien passengers who came in the cabin, making a total for the year of 562,868. The ratio of increase of Italian immigrants as compared with those from the same country last year is approximately 36 per cent., or more than threefold the ratio of increase from all Europe, and the increase numerically from all other countries of Europe aggregate scarcely one-fourth of that of Italy. The total steerage immigration as to sex: 331,055 males and 156,863 females; as to age: 62,562 under 14 years, 396,516 from 14 to 45 years and 28,849 of 45 years and over. It is shown that 117,587 were unable to read or write, 3,058 could read but not write; 294,860 brought each less than $30 and 56,312 had more than $30 each. During the year 363 were returned to their respective countries, having become public charges within one year after landing. The number refused a landing was 3,051 as against 4,246 last year.

The key note of the annual report of Secretary Long for 1901 is "increase," an increase in both the number of ships and the number of officers and sailors for the navy. The secretary's recommendation for new construction is as follows: Three first-class battleships; two first-class armored cruisers; three gunboats 1,000 tons trial displacement; three gunboats 200 tons trial displacement insular service; three picket boats 650 tons trial displacement. Three steel sailing training ships 2,000 tons trial displacement, with many minor and valuable auxiliaries that go to make a superior navy. The United States Navy is behind that of England, France, Germany, Russia, Japan and Italy. Another pressing need is a national reserve. The secretary recommends the revival of the grade of vice admiral; an increase of 50 per cent in the number of cadets at the naval academy; an increase of the marine corps by 750 men and increase in the corps of naval constructors and civil engineers.

Secretary Wilson has decided to send one of the department experts with a full crops of assistants to the Philippines to investigate the situation. Upon ascertaining the needs in respect to seed the department will ship to the islands such seeds as may be required. It is expected that many things not heretofore grown in the Philippines, can be produced and especial attention will be directed to the growing of new crops. The seeds will be distributed gratis

Charles A. Conant, special commissioner of the war department on coinage and banking in the Philippines, and D. P. Williams, secretary of the Philippine commission, are en route to Washington, carrying with them the annual report of the Philippine commission.

The agricultural division of the twelfth census has completed its tabulation of the cotton crop of Alabama in the year 1899. In that year there were 192,384 farms reporting cotton, with an acreage of 3,202,135, producing 1,106,840 commercial bales, or the equivalent of 1,093,694 bales of 500 pounds each. The value of this cotton to the farmers as sold by them, exclusive of the seed, was $37,300,598. The cotton ginned reported by the manufacturers' division for this state was 1,078,519 bales, of 500 pounds.

President Roosevelt has appointed Senator N. N. Stranahan, of Oswego, N. Y., collector of the port of N. Y.

The United States transport Hancock ran aground in Japanese waters last Friday. This is the third United States transport to meet with mishap in Japanese waters recently. The Sheridan has been ordered to her assistance.

Orders issued by the war department contemplate making Atlanta again a military center in the South. The twenty-third regiment is ordered to Fort McPherson.

THE TEMPERATURE OF ICE.

It Is Declared to Be Colder in Winter Than in Summer.

Is ice any colder in winter than in summer? Most people suppose not. They understand that ice is ice and cannot be made any colder or warmer.

If a thermometer is buried in ice in summer it will indicate thirty-two degrees. If you throw a piece of ice into boiling water and leave it there till it is almost gone, what is left will still be at thirty-two degrees. Ice can never be gotten above that temperature.

But while ice can never be warmed above thirty-two degrees, it will go as much below that as the water does. An iceman delivering ice one zero day in January was asked whether his ice was any colder than in July. He thought not. But as a matter of fact a piece of summer ice, if he had had it, would have been something of a foot warmer for him, as it would have been thirty degrees warmer than the air of the bottom of his wagon.

Mixing salt with ice makes it much cooler. The ice in an ice cream freezer goes down to about zero. This is why the point zero on our common thermometers was fixed where it is. It was supposed to be the lowest point which could be reached by artificial means. Since then we have reached about 383 degrees below zero, by chemical processes.

Ice will cool down with everything else, on a cold night, to zero or below. What should prevent it? On a day when it is just freezing a block of iron and a block of ice outdoors will stand at thirty-two degrees. If the weather grows warmer the iron will warm up with the weather, but the ice will stay at thirty-two degrees, and melt away. But if the weather grows colder the iron and the ice will cool off, too, and one just as much as the other.

As the ice grows colder it gets harder and more brittle. There can be no "hickory bend" on the skating pond on a zero day, for ice is then too brittle. Slivers of ice dipped in liquid air become so hard that they will cut glass. Water thrown on ice in the arctic regions will shiver it like pouring boiling water upon cold glass. This is because the ice is so much colder than the water.—Denver Times.

King Oscar and the Young Reporter.

Not long ago Oscar II. went to Gothenburg to attend a dedication or the opening of something or other, where he was expected to make a speech. An enterprising reporter intercepted him at a railway station upon arrival to ask for a copy of his manuscript in advance in order that it might be published the same afternoon, for there would be no time for a stenographer to write out his notes after delivery. The King greeted him pleasantly and explained that he had no manuscript; that he intended to speak without notes. The reporter was very much disappointed. He told the King frankly that he was a new man and that his future standing with his employer might be seriously affected if he failed to get the speech. King Oscar responded sympathetically, motioned to the reporter to get into his carriage, and while they were driving to the hotel gave a brief synopsis of what he expected to say.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Paper Reading in Mexico.

The sale of daily newspapers over the country is a remarkable development of these latter years. People who formerly were contented with the State Government organ, devoted mainly to Governor's decrees and official notices, and with a column of the dryest local information, now buy daily sheets; newsboys with City of Mexico papers haunt hotels and railway stations, and there are local distributors of these journals in all the chief towns. It is an indication of the modernization of the country, this awakened appetite for the daily news. A few papers in this city date their editions one day ahead, so they may appear fresh to country readers! But this practice will soon disappear. It is inherently absurd. Everybody sees through it.—Correspondence Boston Herald.

The "Eaglet's" First Royal Act.

The King of Rome had reached the mature age of six months, when an old soldier, who had already received many favors from the Emperior, decided that he wanted more, and thought it would be a good scheme to address his petition to the heir to the throne, and thus work on Napoleon's sympathies. He addressed his petition to his Majesty the King of Rome. Napoleon smiled when he read the address, and ordered the Duke of Frioul to take the paper to the King and read it to him. This was done with due solemnity and state, and the Duke returned to the Emperor. "What did his Majesty say?" asked Napoleon. "Nothing," replied the Duke. "Silence gives consent," said the Emperor; "see that this old rascal of a soldier gets what he wants."—Paris Figaro.

Bakers Subject to Premature Death.

Bakers are more than normally subject to premature death. In the first place, there is great danger from accident in the striking of a match or taking a light into a room in which flour dust is floating. In case this is done, there follows an explosion which is likely to be very dangerous. Then in the flour itself there is a very small microbe which eventually has its effect upon the teeth, causing them to break away at the roots. This little microbe also attacks the drums of the ears and causes deafness, to say nothing of fanning the spark of consumption. Bakers do not die much from alcoholism, but they are peculiarly subject to diseases of the liver, rheumatic fever, and diabetes.

Discourses Interestingly On the Sins of Lying and Stealing.

CORRUPTION IN PRESENT DAY POLITICS

Public Crib Offers Temptations that Otherwise Honest Men Find It Hard to Resist—Liars of High and Low Degree.

We are not distressed at the overthrow of Tammany in New York. Seventy years is long enough for a party or a political power to rule a great metropolis. Corruption breeds more maggots as the city grows, for, as Thomas Jefferson said: "The growth of great cities is pestilential to good morals." The public treasury is a thing to be plundered, whether it be municipal, state or national. There are thousands of men who would not steal from me, but would steal the money I pay into the treasury, for there it becomes so mixed up that nobody knows whose money it is. It is just as it was two hundred years ago, when Swift wrote:

"Great fleas have little fleas upon their backs to bite 'em,
And little fleas have lesser fleas, and so on ad infinitum."

There is one comfort about all this public plunder. The money does not go dead. It has to be invested and gives employment to labor. A millionaire can't eat nor wear out much more than I can, nor will he lock up his money and let it rest. Not long ago I asked a clever northern man why it was that rich people who pay the most of the taxes let the pension steal go on so long and get bigger every year? He smiled and said: "Why that pension money goes mostly to the poor and we get it all back sooner or later. It is our cheapest way of supporting them, especially when we have your help." Poor Garfield. In his last message he lamented that the pension rolls had got to the alarming sum of $30,000,000, but said there was comfort in knowing that it was obliged to decrease from natural causes, for death was the common lot and the pensioners were rapidly decreasing in number. He was mistaken. They have been multiplying ever since he was killed, and now it takes $150,000,000 to pay the roll.

Public plunder would not be so bad if it was done in the open. What aggravates us is that it is done on the sly through corruption, through bribes, franchises, charters, licenses, salaries and schemes. It always vexes me to see the cook hiding something or her child carrying off a bundle on the sly and hiding it under her apron as she is going home. But they are all so kind and so willing and so good to the children that we saw wood and say nothing. They remind me of what a blind phrenologist said of a public official in Rome while feeling the bumps on his head. He did not know him at all, but said, "This man is kind-hearted and good-natured and would do you a favor if you were in distress, but he will steal. If he found a man asleep alone in a room at night he would slip his purse from out his pocket, but would kiss him before he left him." He diagnosed the man correctly, for he was turned out of office soon after for embezzling the public money, and everybody was sorry for him because he was so generous with his plunder. Stealing from the public crib seems to be a higher grade of crime than lying, though it takes lying and hypocrisy and deceit to accomplish it. I have often wondered why lying was not forbidden in the Ten Commandments. "Thou shalt not steal" is there, but "Thou shalt not lie" is not there, and yet it is accursed all through the scriptures and is the last sin recorded in the last chapter of Revelations and in nearly the last verse. "For without are dogs and sorcerers, and whore mongers and murders and whosoever loveth and maketh a lie." According to David, that sin did not leave very many to enter heaven, for he says, "I said in mine haste all men are liars." The old Scotch preacher took it for a text and his first remark was, "Ah, David, mon, if ye had waited until now ye might have said it at your leisure." Lying is no doubt the most universal sin among mankind, but it is graded and not always a sin. Stealing is always a sin, but lying must be malignant or harmful. Paul sent Titus to Crete and wrote to him that he would have a hard time in establishing a church there, for the Cretans were all liars. Crete is Candia now, an island in the Mediterranean, inhabited by Mohammedans chiefly, and travelers say that they are no better now than they were in St. Paul's day, for they are not only liars, but thieves. England used to have laws to punish common scolds, common drunkards and common vagabonds, but none to punish common liars, for they are generally harmless. Every community has one or two and they keep us amused at their Munchausen exploits in hunting and fishing and their narrow escapes. Then there are some uncommon liars—liars of the first magnitude as Shakespeare calls them, such as Baron Munchausen, Joe Mulhatton and some Chicago editors and preachers. Some of these get into the pulpit and make up pathetic stories and thrilling incidents to emphasize their sermons and create a sensation. And there are thousands of little white lies, society lies that have to be told for civility's sake—lies that flatter and please the visitor, the customer or the patient. All these are spoken lies, but there are as many acted lies in trading, such as concealing the truth and putting the best on top. In fact, everybody lies more or less except children and fools, thought most of us mean no harm by it. My old partner used to say that some mighty clever men would be shut out of heaven for swearing a lie to their tax returns, for David says, "Lord, who shall abide in Thy tabernacle; who shall dwell in Thy holy hill—he that speaketh the truth in his heart and sweareth to his own hurt and changeth not."

Withholding what is due to the state is as bad as stealing from it. And withholding what a man ought to give to the church he belongs to is almost as great a sin as that of Ananias. It is stealing from God. Nothing that a member of the church can do so readily fixes his character as a Christian as his willingness to give all that he can according to his means. Tithes and offerings have come down to us from Cain and Abel in an unbroken line. Cain was a bad man, but he paid his tithes. He was the first liar on record—the devil excepted.

Then there are the lies published every day in the great daily papers—political lies, commercial lies and medical lies to catch the ignorant and unsuspecting; some reporters lie to show their diligence in business.

High coloring, veneering, varnishing are essential qualities in a reporter, whether his journal be white or yellow. He must lie a little, even though it has to be taken back or modified the next day. And so the world wags on and the people have become so accustomed to lies that they make allowance for everything they hear or read. When the historian wanted to cap the climax of General Washington's noble character, he wove in that little story of the cherry tree and made the boy to say: "Father, I cannot tell a lie." And so I hope that all our little boys will grow up to be truthful men. Don't go behind the barn and smoke a cigarette, for that is telling a lie to your father. You can tell a lie by winking your eyes or pointing your finger or concealing what you do from your parents or your teacher. If you do wrong own it like a gentleman and you will have their respect as well as your own.

But the downfall of Tammany was no defeat of the New York democracy—for there were as many good democrats as republicans on that fusion ticket and they will help Low to clean out the Augean stables. So let the procession proceed.—Bill Arp in Atlanta Constitution.

A vigorous booming might land hundreds, or even thousands, of settlers in South Africa. Their success or failure would soon be advertised. Others purposing to leave their homes for some new country would weigh the advantages and opportunities of this region against those of other lands which, for many years to come, will still remain open to the surplus thousands of overcrowded populations. Home-making in arid South Africa will be weighed against life in Canada, in the far West of America, in distant New Zealand and Australia, in hot North Borneo, and on the pampas of South America. Cuba offers homes and the promise of prosperity to several millions; Egypt, with its new systems of irrigation, has attractions for others; the Argentine holds out possibilities of its own. South Africa has no monopoly of new lands or prospective wealth with which to tempt the intending emigrant. Enthusiasm may talk loudly of trade and population following the flag, and of a vast influx immediately upon the conclusion of hostilities in South Africa. Calmer judgment halts at such ready opinion, and notes that Canada, Australia, North Borneo, and even Cape Colony have been under the British flag for many years, and are not yet densely populated, though each of them offers greater promise of comfort and prosperity than does England's latest acquisition, states a writer in The Forum.

The belief entertained by many persons that arsenic is used in dangerous quantities in the coloring of dress goods and wall paper is not well founded, according to the Massachusetts Board of Health. The Bay State has a stringent law on the subject, providing that there shall not be in dress goods or other articles of dress more than one one-hundredth of a grain to the square yard, or in other materials or articles more than one-tenth of a grain to the square yard. The board, after an investigation, finds little if any ground for invoking the power of this law, only one piece of cloth being found to contain more than the statutory allowance of arsenic. As compared with conditions existing ten years ago, there is very little complaint regarding the use of arsenic in dyeing or in coloring wall paper.

For a long time the movement for the prevention of cruelty to animals was regarded as chimerical. Now it hauls into court the brutes who beat horses and the public helps in the good work. Sentiment of the right sort is power, reflects the Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post.

THE BANNER,

Col. M. L. Woods, State Examiner of Accounts, who has been with us the last two or three weeks, examining the books and accounts of our county officers, finished his work here and left for Montgomery on Tuesday night. We understand the Colonel said, before he left, that he had found everything alright, and he especially commended Tax Collector T. J. Hubbard for the careful manner in which his accounts were kept. We are gratified at this good showing of our county officials.

THE BANNER takes pleasure in announcing that the long-talked of steam press will soon make its appearance. For a long time past we have had to work under very unfavorable circumstances, and the consequence has been that our subscribers have received a paper not as clean and as well printed as we desired. They have been very considerate, however, and we sincerely thank them for their forbearance and kindness.

The circulation of The Banner has increased beyond our present facilities, and yet we did not feel justified in going to the necessary heavy expense of a steam press while we remained in our old office. By the end of next month we shall have moved into the new brick building next to the bank, and we are now negotiating for a new press, with which to start the new year aright.

This means an outlay of several hundred dollars, and we respectfully urge upon our subscribers that they settle their little accounts with us now and thus help us put in a press that will furnish them with a better paper. If each one of you will kindly remember that what you owe us is but a small amount and will not inconvenience you in the least to settle now, that when we get those little amounts all together they make one big sum, and that is what we need to get the new press.

We have much to thank the good people of Chilton county for, and they always kindly respond to our requests. We feel satisfied that our subscribers, now that their attention is called to their little accounts, will promptly come forward and settle them. But come quickly, gentlemen, we want to put in the new press before we move into the new building.

THE new constitution has been ratified by the people of Alabama, according to the official returns, and we shall soon be living and thriving under the new organic law. We beleive that the new constitution is good, it might have been better, but it is a distinct gain over the old one. How it was ratified is an open question. The main point now is, are the people willing to accept the new constitution irrespective of the methods by which it was acquired. If they should not be willing to accept it, how is it to be remedied? Its defects can be remedied by the next legislature submitting amendments to the vote of the people. Our faith has been somewhat shaken, but with the negro vote left out, we think the next election will come out alright.

THE governor, auditor and commissioner of agriculture are being flooded with applications for registrar under the new constitution. There are to be three in each county and the officers above named constitute the board which is to make the appointments.

EX-GOVERNOR JOHNSON ON THE ELECTION

Former Governor Joseph F. Johnston, one of the leaders of the anti ratification movement gave out the following signed statement yesterday anent the election on Monday: Ratifiers claim 27,000 majority. They have closed up their headquarters, ceased to give out any details and like the Arab "have silently folded their tents and stolen away." Let us see where this 27,000 majority is to come from and who is expected to furnish it. The census last year gives us the number of white men and colored men in each county over 21 years old. I give below what this census disclosed as to certain counties:

Counties	Majority of Negro Votes	Maj. claimed for Ratif'n
Barbour	1289	2000
Clarke	422	1022
Dallas	7346	5400
Greene	3477	1000
Hale	3485	4000
Macon	2736	1000
Marengo	4003	1500
Monroe	251	560
Montgmery	4988	3500
Perry	3429	3000
Pickens	436	150
Russell	2408	1127
Sumter	3885	3000
Wilcox	4258	3000
Total	43,877	27,199

These figures show that if the grossest frauds were not committed, that of these 43,877 negro majorities in these counties, 35,538 voted to disfranchise themselves and only 8,339 voted against ratification, leaving the majority, 37,199 claimed for ratification in these counties.

And yet those advocating ratification have the effrontry to say that in the white counties the negroes voted against ratification.

The majority claimed for ratification is exactly this shown in the counties named above, and was claimed the day before the election, and the day after the election, when no human could know. What would make a negro in Dallas vote to disfranchise himself when he might have some hope of office on account of his numbers, and in DeKalb vote against it when without such hope is one of the unfathomable mysteries.

The Booker Washington incident seems to be the explanation offered to consolidate the negro votes in the black belt for ratification.

But let us go a little further and examine some other proud majorities claimed for ratification:

Country	Negro Votes	White Votes	Ratif'n maj.
Chambers	3380	3457	3000
Talladega	3817	3990	1334
Totals	7197	7447	4334

So we see in these two sample counties where all the inspectors and clerks were ratifiers, and where there is a white majority of exactly 250, that some 4000 negroes must have voted for "white supremacy and honest electum."

Every one knows that these majorities, aggregating 31,000, are fraudulent on their face, and yet, without them, the new constitution is defeated in every other county in the state but four or five by 30,000 majority.

What honest white man wants a constitution repudiated by a majority of 30,000 white men imposed upon the state by the fraudulent count of negro votes that were not cast? What honest white man, who sincerely stands for fair elections, can damn his record by enduring and approving such unparalled and unblushing fraud?

Can the white men of the black belt, whose chief security is in the numbers and sympathy and good will of the white men in the hills and mountains, afford to give them mortal offence?

Is white supremacy to be secured and rest upon fraudulent negro votes in the black belt?

Certainly those favoring ratification have a fair chance. They started with a handsome campaign fund and replenished that. They had the active aid of every state official. They had both senators and every congressman. They had all the sheriffs but five or six and a vast majority of the Probate judges and clerks. They usurped the democratic organization. They had several hundred new speakers and nearly all the lawyers and over 100 speakers. On our side we had no campaign fund, but six papers, some five speakers, and yet three-fourths of the white counties roll up a majority of 30,000 against ratification.

Was there ever such a victory of the people against power and influence and ability and money and organization?

Is it a victory that demonstrates the ability of the Anglo-Saxon to stand against all odds, untertified and resolute.

Is it not a good time for men assuming leadership and hoping for preferment to pause, to hesitate?

Is unblushing fraud to be rebuked now or destroyed hereafter with all its apologists and defenders?

Can any one rejoice over a victory to be obtained by methods that no decent man can endorse?

Can political ambition defy all decencies, threaten the peace and endanger the honor, the progress and the glory of our commonwealth?

J. F. JOHNSTON.

Help... Nature

Babies and children need proper food, rarely ever medicine. If they do not thrive on their food something is wrong. They need a little help to get their digestive machinery working properly.

SCOTT'S EMULSION OF COD LIVER OIL WITH HYPOPHOSPHITES OF LIME & SODA will generally correct this difficulty.

If you will put from one-fourth to half a teaspoonful in baby's bottle three or four times a day you will soon see a marked improvement. For larger children, from half to a teaspoonful, according to age, dissolved in their milk, if you so desire, will very soon show its great nourishing power. If the mother's milk does not nourish the baby, she needs the emulsion. It will show an effect at once both upon mother and child.

Maybe you don't have colic. Then you don't need Dr. Thenor's Antiseptic for that purpose. But you don't know what you may get hurt, and it is a remedy to assuage for Cuts, Burns, Bruises, Sprains, inflamed eyes, Sore Throat, "Poison Oak," etc. Contains no grease, and the odor is very pleasant. Call at drug stores for it.

YOU KNOW WHAT YOU ARE TAKING

When you take Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic because the formula is plainly printed on every bottle showing that it is simply Iron and Quinine in a tasteless form. No Cure, No Pay. 50c.

WANTED—Several persons of character and good reputation in each state (one in this county required) to represent and advertise old established wealthy business house of solid financial standing. Salary $18.00 weekly with expenses additional, all payable in cash each Wednesday direct from head office. Horse and carriage furnished, when necessary. References. "Something New Under The Sun."

All Doctors have tried to cure CATARRH by the use of powders, snuffs, gases, inhalers and drugs in paste form. Their powders dry up the mucous membrane causing them to crack open and bleed. The powerful acids used in the inhalers have entirely eaten away the same membranes that their makers have aimed to cure, while pastes and ointments cannot reach the disease. An old and experienced practitioner who has for many years made a close study and specialty of the treatment of CATARRH, has at last perfected a Treatment which when faithfully used, not only relieves at once, but permanently cures CATARRH, by removing the cause, stopping the discharges, and curing all inflammation. It is the only remedy known to science that actually reaches the afflicted parts. This wonderful remedy is known as "SNUFFLES" the GUARANTEED CATARRH CURE and is sold at the extremely low price of One Dollar, each package containing internal and external medicine sufficient for a full month's treatment and everything necessary to its perfect use.

"SNUFFLES" is the only perfect CATARRH CURE ever made and is now recognized as the only safe and positive cure for that annoying and disgusting disease. It cures all inflammation quickly and permanently and is also wonderfully quick to relieve HAY FEVER or COLD in the HEAD.

CATARRH when neglected often leads to CONSUMPTION—"SNUFFLES" will save you if you use it at once. It is no ordinary remedy, but a complete treatment which is positively guaranteed to cure CATARRH in any form or stage if used according to the directions which accompany each package. Don't delay but send for it at once, and write full particulars as to your condition, and you will receive special advice from the discoverer of this wonderful remedy regarding your case without cost to you beyond the regular price of "SNUFFLES" the "GUARANTEED CATARRH CURE."

Sent prepaid to any address in the United States or Canada on receipt of One Dollar. Address Dept C 986 EDWIN B. GILES & COMPANY, 3830 and 3832 Market Street, Philadelphia.

HEAD NOISES CEASE IMMEDIATELY.

F. A. WERMAN, OF BALTIMORE, SAYS:

BALTIMORE, Md., March 30, 1901.

Gentlemen:—Being entirely cured of deafness, thanks to your treatment, I will now give you a full history of my case, to be used at your discretion.

About five years ago my right ear began to sing, and this kept on getting worse, until I lost my hearing in this ear entirely.

I underwent a treatment for catarrh, for three months, without any success, consulted a number of physicians, among others, the most eminent ear specialist of this city, who told me that only an operation could help me, and even that only temporarily, that the head noises would then cease, but the hearing in the affected ear would be lost forever.

I then saw your advertisement accidentally in a New York paper, and ordered your treatment. After I had used it only a few days according to your directions, the noises ceased, and to-day, after five weeks, my hearing in the diseased ear has been entirely restored. I thank you heartily and beg to remain Very truly yours,

F. A. WERMAN, 730 S. Broadway, Baltimore, Md.

THE HOME GOLD CURE.

An Inexpensive Treatment by which Drunkards can be Quickly Cured Daily in Spite of Themselves.

By Reason Dopes, No Weakening of the Nerves. A Pleasant and Positive Cure for the Liquor Habit.

It is now generally known and understood that drunkenness is a disease and not weakness. A body filled with poison, and nerves completely shattered by periodical or constant use of intoxicating liquors, requires an antidote capable of neutralizing and eradicating this poison, and destroying the craving for intoxicants. Sufferers may now cure themselves at home without publicity or loss of time from Business by this wonderful "HOME GOLD CURE" which has been perfected after many years of close study and treatment of inebriates. The faithful use according to directions of this wonderful discovery is positively guaranteed to cure the most obstinate case, no matter how hard a drinker. Our records show the marvelous transformation of thousands of Drunkards into sober, industrious and upright men.

WIVES CURE YOUR HUSBANDS! CHILDREN CURE YOUR FATHER! All this remedy is in no sense a nostrum but is a specific for this disease only, and is so skillfully devised and prepared that it is thoroughly soluble and pleasant to the taste, so that it can be given in a cup of tea or coffee without the knowledge of the person taking it. Thousands of Drunkards have cured themselves with this priceless remedy, and as many more have been cured and made temperate men by having the "CURE" administered by loving friends and relatives without their knowledge in coffee or tea, and believe today that they discontinued drinking of their own free will. DO NOT WAIT. Do not be deluded by apparent and misleading "improvement." Drive out the disease at once and for all time. The "HOME GOLD CURE" is sold at the extremely low price of One Dollar, thus placing within reach of every body a treatment more effectual than others costing $25 to $50. Full directions accompany each package. Special advice by skilled physicians when requested without extra charge. Sent prepaid to any part of the world on receipt of One Dollar. Address Dept. C 935, EDWIN B. GILES & COMPANY, 2330 and 2332 Market Street, Philadelphia.

REV. DR. TALMAGE.

DISCOURSE BY THE EMINENT DIVINE LAST SUNDAY.

Subject: Salvation For the Morally Shipwrecked — Yield Not to the Force of Immoral Gravitation — Helpfulness of Religion—Door of Mercy Swings Wide.

(Copyright, 1901.)

WASHINGTON, D. C.—In this discourse Dr. Talmage depicts the struggle of a man who desires liberation from the enthralment of evil and shows how he may be set free; text, Proverbs xxiii, 35: "When shall I awake? I will seek it yet again."

With an insight into human nature such as no other man ever had, Solomon in these words is sketching the mental process of a man who has stepped aside from the path of rectitude and would like to return. Wishing for something better, he says: "When shall I awake? When shall I get over this horrible nightmare of iniquity?" But seized upon by uneradicated appetite and pushed down hill by his passions he cries out: "I will seek it yet again. I will try it once more."

About a mile from Princeton, N. J., there is a skating pond. One winter day, when the ice was very thin, a farmer living near by warned the young men of the danger of skating at that time. They all took the warning except one young man. He, in the spirit of bravado, said, "Boys, one round more." He struck out on his skates, the ice broke and his lifeless body was brought up. And in all matters of temptation and allurement it is not a prolongation that is proposed, but only just one more indulgence, just one more sin. Then comes the fatality. Alas, for the one round more! "I will seek it yet again."

Our libraries are adorned with elegant literature addressed to young men, pointing out to them all the dangers and perils of life. Complete maps of the voyage of life—the shoals, the rocks, the quicksands. But suppose a young man is already shipwrecked, suppose he is already off the track, suppose he has already gone astray, how can he get back? That is a question that remains unanswered, and amid all the books of the libraries I find not one word on that subject. To that class of persons I this day address myself.

You compare what you are now with what you were three or four years ago, and are greatly disheartened. You are ready with every passion of your soul to listen to a discussion like this. Be of good cheer! Your best days are yet to come. I offer you the hand of welcome and rescue. I put the silver trumpet of the gospel to my lips and blow one long, loud blast, saying, "Whosoever will, let him come, and let him come now." The church of God is ready to spread a banquet upon your return, and all the hierarchs of heaven fall into line of bannered procession over your redemption.

Years ago, and while yet Albert Barnes was living, I preached in his pulpit one night to the young men of Philadelphia. In the opening of my discourse I said, "O Lord, give me one soul to-night!" At the close of the service Mr. Barnes introduced a young man, saying, "This is the young man you prayed for." But I see now it was a too limited prayer. I offer no such prayer to-day. It must take in a wider sweep. "Lord, give us all these souls to-day for happiness and heaven!"

So far as God may help me I propose to show what are the obstacles to your return, and then how you are to surmount those obstacles. The first difficulty in the way of your return is the force of moral gravitation. Just as there is a natural law which brings down to earth anything you throw into the air, so there is a corresponding moral gravitation. I never shall forget a prayer I heard a young man make in the Young Men's Christian Association of New York. With trembling voice and streaming eyes he said: "O God, Thou knowest how easy it is for me to do wrong and how hard it is for me to do right! God help me!" That man knows not his own heart who has never felt the power of moral gravitation.

In your boyhood you had good associates and bad associates. Which most impressed you? During the last few years you have heard pure anecdotes and impure anecdotes. Which the easiest stuck to your memory? You have had good habits and bad habits. To which did your soul more easily yield? But that moral gravitation may be resisted. Just as you may pick up anything from the earth and hold it in your hand toward heaven, just so, by the power of God's grace, a fallen soul may be lifted toward peace, toward pardon, toward salvation. The force of moral gravitation is in every one of us, but also power in God's grace to overcome that force.

The next thing in the way of your return is the power of evil habit. I know there are those who say it is very easy for them to give up evil habits. I cannot believe them. Here is a man given to intoxication, who knows it is disgracing his family, destroying his property and ruining him body, mind and soul. If that man, being an intelligent man and loving his family, could easily give up that habit, would he not do so? The fact that he does not give it up proves that it is hard to give it up. It is a very easy thing to sail down stream, the tide carrying you with great force, but suppose you turn the boat up stream—is it so easy then to row it? As long as we yield to the evil inclinations in our heart and to our bad habits we are sailing down stream, but the moment we try to turn we put our boat in the rapids just above Niagara and try to row up stream.

A physician tells his patient that he must quit the use of tobacco, as it is destroying his health. The man replies, "I can stop that habit easy enough." He quits the use of the weed. He goes around not knowing what to do with himself. He cannot add up a column of figures; he cannot sleep nights. It seems as if the world had turned upside down. He feels his business is going to ruin. Where he was kind and obliging he is scolding and fretful. The composure that characterized him has given way to a fretful restlessness, and he has become a complete fidget. What power is it that has rolled a wave of woe over the earth and shaken a portent in the heavens? He has quit tobacco. After awhile he says: "I am going to do as I please; the doctor does not understand my case. I am going back to my old habits." And he returns. Everything assumes its usual composure. His business seems to brighten. The world becomes an attractive place to live in. His children, seeing the difference, hail the return of their father's genial disposition. What wave of color has dashed blue into the sky and greenness into the mountain foliage and the glow of sapphire into the sunset? What enchantment has lifted a world of beauty and joy on his soul? He has resumed tobacco.

The fact is we all know in our own experience that habit is a taskmaster. As long as we obey it, it does not chastise us. But let us resist it and we find that we are lashed with scorpion whips and bound with ship cable and thrown into the track of bone breaking Juggernauts.

In Paris there is a sculptured representation of Bacchus, the god of revelry. He is riding on a panther at full leap. Oh, how suggestive! Let every one who is speeding on bad ways understand he is not riding a docile and well broken steed, but that he is riding a monster wild and bloodthirsty and going at a death leap.

I have also to say if a man wants to return from evil practices society repulses him. The prodigal, wishing to return, tries to take some professor of religion by the hand. The professor of religion looks at him, looks at the faded apparel and the marks of dissipation, and instead of giving him a firm grip of the hand offers him the tip end of the longer fingers of the left hand, which is equal to striking a man in the face.

Oh, how few Christian people understand how much gospel there is in a good, honest handshaking! Sometimes when you have left the need of encouragement and some Christian man has taken you heartily by the hand have you not felt thrilling through every fiber of your body, mind and soul an encouragement that was just what you needed?

The prodigal, wishing to get into good society, enters a prayer meeting. Some good man without much sense greets him by saying: "Why are you here? You are about the last person that I expected to see in a prayer meeting. Well, the dying thief was saved, and there is hope for you." You do not know anything about this, unless you have learned that when a man tries to return from evil courses of conduct he runs against repulsions innumerable.

We say of some man, "He lives a block or two from the church, or half a mile from the church." In all our great cities there are men who are 5000 miles from church—vast deserts of indifference between them and the house of God.

The fact is we must keep our respectability though thousands perish. Christ sat with publicans and sinners, but if there come to the house of God a man with marks of dissipation upon him people are almost sure to put up their hands in horror, as much as to say, "Is it not shocking?"

How these dainty, fastidious Christians in all our churches are going to get into heaven I do not know unless they have an especial train of cars cushioned and upholstered, each one a car to himself. They cannot go with the great herd of publicans and sinners.

O ye who curl your lip of scorn on the fallen, I tell you plainly that if you had been surrounded by the same influences instead of sitting to-day amid the cultured and the refined and the Christian you might have been a crouching wretch in stable or ditch covered with filth and abomination!

It is not because we are naturally any better, but because the mercy of God has protected us. Those that are brought up in Christian parentage should not be so hard on the fallen.

I think also that men are often hindered from returning by the fact that churches are anxious about their membership, too anxious about their denominations, and they rush out when they see a man about to give up sin and return to God and ask him how he is going to be baptized, whether by sprinkling or immersion, and what kind of a church he is going to join.

Oh, despise not parental anxiety! The time will come when you will have neither father nor mother, and you will go around the place where they used to watch you and find them gone from the house and gone from the field and gone from the neighborhood. Cry as loud for forgiveness as you may over the mound in the churchyard, they cannot answer. Dead! Dead!

God pity the young man who has brought disgrace on his father's name! God pity the young man who has broken his mother's heart! Better that he had never been born. Better if in the first hour of his life, instead of being laid against the warm bosom of maternal tenderness, he had been coffined and sepulchered.

There is no balm powerful enough to heal the heart of one who has brought parents to a sorrowful grave, and who wanders about through the dismal cemetery rending the air and wringing the hands and crying: "Mother! Mother!" Oh, that to-day, by all the memories of the past and by all the hopes of the future, you would yield your heart to God! May your father's God and your mother's God be your God forever!

This hour the door of mercy swings wide open. Hesitate not a moment. In many a case hesitation is the loss of all. At the corner of a street I saw a tragedy. A young man evidently doubted as to which direction he had better take. His hat was lifted high enough so you could see he had an intelligent forehead. He had a stout chest and a robust development. Splendid young man! Cultured young man! Honored young man! Why did he stop there while so many were going up and down? The fact is that every young man has a good angel and a bad angel contending for the mastery of his spirit, and there were a good angel and a bad angel struggling with that young man's soul at the corner of the street. "Come along with me," said the good angel; "I will take you home. I will spread my wings over your pillow. I will lovingly escort you all through life under supernatural protection. I will bless every cup you drink out of, every couch you rest on, every doorway you enter. I will consecrate your tears when you weep, your sweat when you toil, and at the last I will hand over your grave into the hand of the bright angel of a Christian resurrection. I have been sent of the Lord to be your guardian spirit. Come with me," said the good angel in a voice of unearthly symphony. It was music like that which drops from a lute of heaven when a seraph breathes on it.

"Oh, no," said the bad angel, "come with me. I have something better to offer. The wines I pour are from chalices of bewitching carousal. The dance I lead is over floors tessellated with unrestrained indulgence. There is no God to frown on the temples of sin where I worship. The skies are Italian. The paths I tread are through meadows daisied and primrosed. Come with me."

The young man hesitated at a time when hesitation was ruin, and the bad angel smote the good angel until it departed, spreading wings through the starlight, upward and away until a door swung open in the sky, and forever the wings vanished. That was the turning point in that young man's history, for, the good angel flown, he hesitated no longer, but started on a pathway which is beautiful at the opening, but blasted at the last. The bad angel led the way through gate after gate, and at each gate the road became rougher and the sky more lurid, and what was peculiar, as the gate slammed shut it came to with a jar that indicated it would never open. Past each portal there were a grinding of locks and a shoving of bolts, and the scenery on each side of the road changed from gardens to deserts, and the June air became a cutting December blast, and the bright wings of the bad angel turned to sackcloth, and the fountains that at the start had tossed with wine poured forth bubbling tears of foaming blood. And on the right side of the road there was a serpent, and the man said to the bad angel, "What is that serpent?" And the answer was, "That is the serpent of stinging remorse." On the left side of the road there was a lion, and the man asked the bad angel, "What is that lion?" The answer was, "That is the lion of all devouring despair." A vulture flew through the sky, and the man asked the bad angel, "What is that vulture?" The answer was, "That is the vulture waiting for the carcasses of the slain."

And then the man said to the bad angel, "What does all this mean? I trusted in what you said at the street corner; I trusted it all. Why have you thus deceived me?" Then the last deception fell off the charmer and he said, "I was sent from the pit to destroy your soul. I watched my chance for many a long year. When you hesitated that night at the street corner I gained my triumph. Now you are here. Ha, ha! You are here! Come, now, let us fill the chalice and drink to darkness and woe and death! Hail, hail!"

Oh, young man, will the good angel sent forth by Christ or the bad angel sent forth by sin get the victory over your soul? Their wings are interlocked this moment above you, contending for your soul, as above the Apennines eagle and condor fight in midsky. This hour decides eternal destinies.

THE SABBATH SCHOOL

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR NOVEMBER 24.

Subject: World's Temperance Lesson. Isa. v., 8-30 — Golden Text, Isa. v., 23 — Memory Verses, 11, 12 — Commentary on the Day's Lesson.

8. "That join house to house." Covetousness is one of the leading sins in our land at the present time. A desire to be rich, a desire to add house to house, and field to field, leads men into all sorts of wickedness and dishonest dealings. It leads to the selling of strong drink, to renting buildings for saloons and gambling dens and other unholy purposes. It is the "love of money" that is the "root of all evil."

9. "In mine ears." That is, the Lord spoke what is to follow into the ears of the prophet. "Shall be desolate." God's curse will rest on the many houses and farms which have been acquired through penuriousness and unlawful or unholy means. The houses shall stand without tenants.

10. "Ten acres—one bath." Ten acres of vineyard shall yield only about seven gallons of wine. "An homer—an ephah." The homer, or kor, was about eight bushels. An ephah was about three and one-fifth pecks. The owner would thus reap only a tenth part of the seed he had sown.

11. "Woe." Grief, sorrow, misery, a heavy calamity, a curse. "Early in the morning." When it was regarded especially shameful to drink. Acts 2: 15. Banquets for revelry began earlier than usual. Eccles. 10: 16, 17. "May follow strong drink." That they begin and continue to use it from early morn till night. "Till wine inflame them." Until there is excited, excessive action in the blood vessels, causing them to act in excitement, in anger, or any evil way which their natures might be made to feel, under the unnatural pressure upon the forces and functions of the body. In this condition no man is able to use good judgment or to execute his work correctly.

12. "The harp." A stringed instrument of triangular figure. Music was common at ancient feasts. Amos 6: 5, 6. "The viol." An instrument with twelve strings. "The tabret." A small drum or tambourine, played on as an accompaniment to singing. "Pipe." The principal musical wind instrument of the Hebrews, consisting of a tube with holes, like a flute or clarionet. It was made of reed, copper or bronze, and was used on all occasions in religious worship, processions, feasts and mourning. "Wine." Such as indulge in revels must have every sense gratified, for only by being stimulated by such excitement, could they at all be satisfied there. "They regard not." The most positive proof that such conduct is sinful. When so filled with worldly pleasure there is no taste for anything serious. "Neither consider." In punishing the guilty.

13. "Gone into captivity." The prophet sees the future as if it were before his eyes. Those who follow after strong drink are sure to end in sorrow as though they were already fallen, with no further power to act for themselves. "Because they have no knowledge." Because of their foolish recklessness in following strong drink they make drunkards of themselves. They act contrary to wisdom. They become captives because their brains are so ruined by excessive drinking that they are not capable of acting the part of prudent, careful men. "Honorable men are famished." Strong drink ruins those in honorable positions just as quickly as men of low estate. "Dried up with thirst." Both the great men and the common people suffer alike when in captivity to the cruel power of strong drink. Awful thirst follows drinking, and the burning sensation which drinking men feel is like the drying up of themselves.

14. "Hell hath enlarged herself." The grave, the unseen world of spirits. Not here, the place of torment. Poetically, it is represented as enlarging itself immensely in order to receive the countless hosts of Jews which should perish. "Their glory." All their honors shall be laid in the dust. Death will put an end to all their joys. "Their multitude." Did they glory in their numbers? Their multitude shall go down to the pit. Ezek. 31: 18; 32: 32. "Their pomp." The figure they made. "He that rejoiceth." Death will turn their mirth into mourning. He that rejoices and revels, and never knows what it is to be serious, shall go where there is weeping and wailing.

15. "Mean man—mighty man—eyes of the lofty." When death overlooks this class of men, those ruined by drink, even though they come from various positions in life, then it is that they are brought low. There is no further room for boasting. Death settles the matter.

16. "Shall be exalted in judgment." When man's glory is all passed away God is unchanged. Though men scorn His offered mercy and refuse His wise counsels He is not cast down. He is exalted. "Sanctified in righteousness." Regarded as holy by reason of His righteous dealings.

17. "Then shall the lambs." When these are gone into captivity and swallowed up in death others shall fill their place.

18. "Iniquity." Guilt incurring punishment. "Cords of vanity." Wickedness. Rabbins says, "An evil inclination is at first like a fine hair-string, but the finishing like a cart-rope."

19. "Let him make speed," etc. They challenge the Almighty to do His worst, and set His justice at defiance.

21. "Wise in their own eyes." Those who prefer their own reasonings to divine revelations, who despise or reject the gospel, or who claim to have a knowledge of it, but do not practice it.

22. "Mighty to drink." Those who boast that they can drink more than others and yet be able to stand. They shall not escape the curse of drunkenness. "To mingle strong drink." To add spices to strong drink, and the count themselves strong because they can endure the effects. Their glory is their shame.

23. "Which justify the wicked for reward." Who, as judges, pervert justice and for a bribe acquit the guilty; God will punish such. "Take away the righteousness." Though a man be proven innocent, yet because he does not give a fee he is condemned by these unjust men. Misery will overtake him.

24-30. In these verses the prophet sums up his terrible denunciations and shows how complete their ruin will be and how necessarily and unavoidably it will follow upon their sins. Because they had despised the word of God they should be destroyed like chaff before the fire by the foreign armies that should come upon them and devastate their land and carry them away captive. "Upon a guilty race, unpitied by heaven or by earth, these armies execute their commission; and leave the land desolate and dark, without one ray of comfort to cheer the horrid gloom."

THE SONG OF LIFE.

One must sing of the sunshine;
One must sing of the rain;
One must sing of the songs of joy;
And one sing woe's refrain;
Yet in the end all the songs will blend
In one harmonious strain.

One must sing of the future,
With hopes and fearings rife;
One must sing of the misty past—
Its dreaming and its strife—
Yet they will meet in a chord full sweet—
The marvelous song of life.

One must sing of the mountains;
One must sing of the sea;
One must sing us the song of love;
And one in hate's shrill key;
Yet all will rise to the blending skies
In one grand harmony.

Love and hate and compassion,
Sorrow and right and wrong,
Past and future and war and peace—
Rise in an anthem strong.
And all will grow as they ebb and flow,
To life's unceasing song.
—Josh Wink, in Baltimore American.

IN THE SWITCH-SHANTY.

Charles De Lano Hine, an ex-railway officer, turned railroad man, has an illustrated article in the Century which he calls "Gossip of the Switch-Shanty." The suggestive subhead of a western paper for the news notes of its railroad column is "Switch-Shanty Secrets." It is in the switch-shanty and about the round-house that two or three railroad men gather together to exchange views, reminiscences and predictions. When a man comes off duty, either at the end of a run or at the close of a day's work in the yard, he does not stop to gossip for the simple reason that he is hungry. When he is "going out" or "coming on" it is different. He then has a full "tender" (stomach), whatever the hour of day or night. A good railroad man, like a good soldier, eats on every possible occasion, not knowing when the next opportunity may come. With that full feeling which comes after eating, and which to a healthy man is so comfortable, the railroad man warms up to a discriminating discussion of all the railroad questions of the hour, from the latest "re-Morganization" of neighboring roads to the kind of "smokeless" coal the purchasing agent or the fuel agent is buying for engine use. The fireman with fine scorn speaks of it as "steamless" coal, an apt description of its failure to yield sufficient heat-units to keep up the required steam-pressure. With the exaggeration characteristic of men of action and of motion, from Capt. John Smith to Emilio Aguinaldo, the fireman asserts in all sincerity: "I shoveled ten ton' o' coal for the old lady last trip. Put in the last shovelful pulling into the yard. Thought we'd have to cut (detach the engine) and run for coal, but Jack (the engineman) said we could make in, and we did, by doing our durndest. Finest feller on the road ter fire fer, that Jack Pullem. He won't take no back slack when them conductors tries to rawhide (impose on) him, but he never says a word to his fireman. He knows when he's got a good man on the left-hand side (fireman). All yer got to do is to keep her hot, and turn on the injector time enough to keep the water from gettin' low in the boiler, and he'll do the rest." To the initiated this sounds very much like the satisfaction of the Irishman who enjoyed carrying a hod of bricks up the ladder because "a poor divil of a mason at the top did all the worruk for him." However, this passes unnoticed, and the group, realizing that the fireman is "hooked up" for talking, lets him continue in his audible hero-worship.

The discovery in Palestine of valuable mineral treasures making it probable that there will soon be an industrial awakening of the Holy Land.

THE ITALIAN WORKINGMAN.

The lot of an Italian workingman in this country is at times a hard one, with more cause to complain of the padrone system than the societies formed to protect them are aware, says the New York Evening Post. Last winter a gang of Italians were engaged through a padrone to work on a section railroad in the upper part of the state, in a region far from any town and on the border of Tupper lake. A sharp, cold snap set in just after the men were started on the job. Between the cold and the loneliness the gang became more and more demoralized. The number of desertions grew from day to day and the cold weather kept up, till at last the remaining workmen left in a body one freezing morning. The men worked their way slowly and painfully back to New York and arriving, of course, without a cent, applied immediately to another padrone for a job. He promised them just the work they were looking for and ordered them to appear the next day in the railroad yards at Eleventh avenue and Thirtieth street. There they were put on a car and shipped off for an all-night trip to their unknown destination. Next morning the first one to wake had to scratch the frost off the window pane to look out. The car had stopped on a siding and they had evidently reached their journey's end. A long stretch of ice-bound lake lay in front of the window, with some familiar shed-like huts along its shore. With a yell he turned to his companions: "He look!" he shouted, "Sama da-old Tuppa lake——!"

EVADE CHILD LABOR LAW.

Superintendent Bodine of the compulsory education department has filed with the board of education a report covering the work accomplished from September, 1900, to June, 1901, in truancy investigation, medical inspection and transportation service for crippled children, says the Chicago Chronicle. The report calls attention to the fact that many children of the fifth and sixth grades leave school to go to work in stores and factories, their parents filing false affidavits that the children are fourteen years of age or over in order to comply with the child labor law. This abuse was discovered through the conflict between the age records previously given at the schools by the children and the age subsequently sworn to by the parents. The affidavit system is a farce," said Superintendent Bodine. "This year the department will co-operate with the state factory inspector in a suppression of these evils, which are becoming a menace to school attendance." The report shows that during the school year 18,799 children were placed in school by truant officers. Lack of clothing prevented school attendance in 313 cases. At the request of Superintendent Bodine relief was extended by local charitable institutions. There was not a case where a child was unable to attend school for lack of a seat.

Tricks of Peanut Venders.

Boys who sell peanuts in the grandstands at the baseball grounds are never discouraged if there is "nothing doing" in their line until after the fifth inning. Patrons of the game do not begin to feel "peekish" until after 5 o'clock, and then the peanut boy begins to work diplomatically. If he sells one bag in a row of men he does not pass on to the next isle, but waits in the back seats until his first customer begins to eat peanuts. In a minute or two men who never had any thought of buying peanuts beckon to him to come forward. Usually his basket is empty before he reaches the next aisle and he goes back for a fresh supply. One bag of freshly roasted peanuts in the hands of a man who eats them as though he enjoys them is sure to create an appetite for a dozen more bags among his neighbors.

Not a Waste of Time.

"Edication is a good thing, Limpy, an' don't you run it down."

"Ever git any of it, Weary?"

"Me? Well, I shoulud say yes. I went to night school all one winter."

"An' what did you git to show for it, Weary?"

"What did I git? I got four overcoats, three hats and seven umbrellas. Don't you tell me that goin' to school is a waste o' time.

WHAT A SWITCHMAN DOES.

According to a writer in the Century, a railroad switchman is often in peril of his life. The poetry of his calling surrounds with a halo those who are its votaries. The stage driver and the locomotive engineer have a local following and are worshiped from afar by a host of admirers. It is the engineman who gets the credit for the fast run, but the fireman who keeps the engine in order, or the mechanical engineer, whose brain devised the improvements in the machine. The master mechanic and the roundhouse foreman, whose careful attention and good judgment keep the engine in order, receive a negative amount of credit. If anything goes wrong they hear of it. The fireman comes in for some of the glamour and glory, for, like the conductor and brakeman, he "runs on the road." The men who "switch in the yard" are also among the elect for their education brings them constantly in the face of death. A "switchman" is in rank and file is not the switch-tender who merely "throws switches" for approaching trains. A switchman "throws switches" but not in any fixed location, and more distinctly he "couples 'em off" (uncouples cars), goes between 'em (sets brakes) and "ties 'em together" (couples cars). He is a skillful a dodger of flying cars as is a "pony" (switch engine) of innumerable trains. The head switchman is carried on the pay rolls as a "yard conductor," but the men cling to the old appellation of "foreman" or "pony conductor." His assistants, to whom his word is law are officially designated "yard brakemen" in appropriate title, which has failed so far to supplant the good old-fashioned term "helpers."

DIED FAR FROM HOME.

Adventurous Princes Who Fell Victims to Disease or Bullets.

The death of Prince Henri of Orleans calls attention to the fact that princes who go roaming about the world have no protection against the common ills and frequently die far away from the land of their birth, of disease induced by the climate, or even sometimes from a bullet. The Prince Imperial was killed in the Zulu war in South Africa. Prince Christian Victor of Schleswig-Holstein died of fever in the Boer war, and Prince Henry of Battenberg died of fever in a little war on the Gold Coast of Africa. The Prince of Orange was a young man of great promise, and passionately fond of travel, died in Australia. Now Prince Henri of Orleans dies in Saigon, Indo-China. Prince Henri gained much notoriety through his visit to Abyssinia and his subsequent duel with the Count of Tudela, was a genuine duel, and real blood was shed in it, but the prince died, after his adventures, of an abscess on the liver. A relative of Prince Henri fought another celebrated duel in Spain. He was the Duke of Montpensier, and he fought with the Duke of Enghien, whom he killed, greatly to his chagrin, may and the surprise of the specators. They were both brothers-in-law of Queen Isabella of Spain. A Bourbon Prince who has protested vigorously against duelling in all its forms was a brother of Don Carlos, the pretender to the Spanish throne. This Prince, Don Alfonso, is a devout man and a good citizen, but he cannot enter the lists for in case of the death of Don Carlos he would become his brother's heir and representative of the Carlist cause.

Overweight.

On a hot afternoon last summer when every self-supporting woman in London was enjoying a lot of the "simply clinging" from a stout, elderly lady, somewhat resembling a violet silk balloon, waddled out of her carriage and entered the post office. The "young persons" behind the brazen latticework kept the elderly lady waiting for nearly a minute and a half before one of them was at leisure to weigh her parcel, reply to a dozen questions and issue the requisite stamps. In consequence of this seemly delay, the stout lady ordered her coachman waiting by the door while she killed time in superfluous shopping) was naturally wrathy. "And do you expect me," she asked arrogantly, "to put the stamps on myself?" "Why, no, madam," replied the postoffice girl, demurely, "I'm afraid we could hardly send you by post for 4½d."

BIG COTTON FIRE.

The worst cotton fire that has visited Albany, Ga., in fifteen years occurred Friday night, when the big warehouse of A. W. Muse & Co. was completely destroyed. During its progress the fire engine became disabled, and the flames in the warehouse were free to feed on anything they might reach. Hundreds of bales of cotton that might have been saved but for the giving out of the water supply and the subsequent breaking down of the steamer, were burned before the eyes of helpless persons. There were about 2,500 bales of cotton stored in the warehouse, and all were wholly or partially destroyed. The value of the cotton stored in the warehouse, most of which belonged to farmers, is estimated at about $87,000. The warehouse building was worth $10,000, and bagging, ties, provisions, etc., stored therein $3,000 or $4,000 more, making the total loss not less than $100,000. Fireman Edward Fields narrowly escaped a horrible death about midnight.

DANGER OF STARVATION

Governor Sayers, of Texas, Friday received a letter from Hon. F. W. Seabury, member of the Legislature, in whose district Seapata county is situated. The letter details a most deplorable condition in Seapata county. Mr. Seabury declares the condition is worse than heretofore reported, and says the people are starving, and unless immediate aid reaches them the population of the county will die of starvation. There is no chance to raise any kind of crops in the district earlier than next April or May. Mr. Seabury says there is scarcely a bit of any kind of food on hand, and appeals for outside aid at once. Governor Sayers immediately on receipt of the letter sent $500 to Mr. Seabury. Relief supplies will be gotten into Seapata county at the earliest possible moment.

ELECTED OFFICERS.

The United Daughters of the Confederacy closed its eighth annual convention at Wilmington, N. C., Saturday, to meet next year in New Orleans. An invitation was also accepted to meet in 1903 in St. Louis, during the Louisiana Purchase exposition in that city. Officers were elected as follows: President, Mrs. H. A. Rounsaville, Rome, Ga.; first vice-president, Mrs. Mollie McCall Rosenburg, Galveston, Tex.; second-vice president, Mrs. T. J. Latham, Memphis, Tenn.; recording secretary, Mrs. John P. Hickman, Nashville, Tenn.; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Virginia F. McSherry, West Virginia; treasurer, Mrs. James Leigh, of Norfolk, Va.; custodian of crosses of honor, Mrs. Gabbitt, Atlanta, Ga. Mrs. Stonewall Jackson was elected an honorary president with Mrs. M. C. Goodlett, of New York for life.

PREPARATIONS for the coronation of Edward VII are taking shape. Queen Alexandra is having the kohinoor reset in a crown for herself, which will be the most valuable in the world, which claim is now held by Portugal. Mrs. Berdley-Martin is having a tiara made in Paris, it is reported, at a cost of £250,000. It is a replica of the diadem which shone on the head of Empress Josephine. It is reported that King Edward, at the coronation, will confer the semi-royal title of duke of Inverness on the duke of Fife, son-in-law of his majesty.

TO PORTO RICO.

At a meeting of the incorporators and subscribers to the capital stock of the New York and Caribbean Steamship Co., organization of that corporation was perfected with President William Gustada, of Ponce, Porto Rico. The object of the company is to inaugurate an independent steamer freight service between Porto Rico and New York. The management expects to dispatch the first steamer from New York early in January next.

Hundreds of bales of cotton that might have been saved but for the giving out of the water supply and the subsequent breaking down of the steamer, were burned be-fore the eyes of helpless persons. There were about 2,500 bales of cot-ton stored in the warehouse, and all were wholly or partially destroyed. The value of the cotton stored in the warehouse, most of which belonged to farmers, is estimated at about $87,-000. The warehouse building was worth $10,000, and bagging, ties, pro-visions, etc., stored therein $3,000 or $4,000 more, making the total loss not less than $100,000. Fireman Ed-ward Fields narrowly escaped a hor-rible death about midnight.

DANGER OF STARVATION

Governor Sayers, of Texas, Friday received a letter from Hon. F. W. Seabury, member of the Legislature, in whose district Seapata county is situated. The letter details a most deplorable condition in Seapata county. Mr. Seabury declares the situation worse than heretofore re-ported, and says the people are starv-ing, and unless immediate aid reaches them the population of the county will die of starvation. There is no chance to raise any kind of crops in the district earlier than next April or May. Mr. Seabury says there is scarcely a lot of any kind of food on hand, and appeals for outside aid at once. Governor Sayers immediately on receipt of the letter sent $500 to Mr. Seabury. Relief supplies will be gotten into Seapata county at the earliest possible moment.

ELECTED OFFICERS.

The United Daughters of the Con-federacy closed its eighth annual con-vention at Wilmington, N. C., Satur-day, to meet next year in New Orleans. An invitation was also accepted to meet in 1903 in St. Louis, during the Louisiana Purchase exposition in that city. Officers were elected as follows: President, Mrs. H. A. Rounsaville, Rome, Ga.; first vice-president, Mrs. Mollie McIver Rosenburg, Galveston, Tex.; second vice president, Mrs. T. J. Latham, Memphis, Tenn.; record-ing secretary, Mrs. John P. Hickman, Nashville, Tenn.; corresponding sec-retary, Mrs. Virginia F. McSherry, West Virginia; treasurer, Mrs. James Leigh, of Norfolk, Va.; custodian of crosses of honor, Mrs. Gabbitt, At-lanta, Ga. Mrs. Stonewall Jackson was elected an honorary president with Mrs. M. C. Goodlett, of New York for life.

PREPARATIONS for the coronation of Edward VII are taking shape. Queen Alexandra is having the kohinoor reset in a crown for herself, which will be the most valuable in the world, which claim is now held by Portugal. Mrs. Bradley Martin is having a tiara made in Paris, it is report-ed, at a cost of £25,000. It is a re-plica of the diadem which shone on the head of Empress Josephine. It is reported that King Edward, at the coronation, will confer the semi-royal title of duke of Inverness on the duke of Fife, son-in-law of his majesty.

A DISASTROUS fire which started in the Newton (Kas.) lumber yard Saturday cost $150,000 damage. J. Stone, an employe, was badly injured by an explosion, and will probably die.

TO PORTO RICO.

At a meeting of the incorporators and subscribers to the capital stock of the New York and Caribbean Steamship Co., organization of that corporation was perfected with President William Cortada, of Ponce, Porto Rico. The object of the company is to inaugu-rate an independent steamer freight service between Porto Rico and New York. The management expects to dispatch the first steamer from New York early in January next.

Brooklyn, N.Y., Nov. 15.—A medical author-ity says: "There is hardly a family anywhere in which Garfield Tea does not often take the place of the Family Physician, for practically everyone suffers at times from disorders of stomach, liver, kidneys or bowels. Certainly, from no other medicine can such good results be obtained. This Herb remedy makes people well and thus greatly increases their capacity for enjoying life; it is good for young and old."

THE AMERICAN MONTHLY REVIEW OF REVIEWS

THE AMERICAN MONTHLY REVIEW OF REVIEWS is commended by Statesmen, Professional men and thousands of others prominent in the world's activities, for its fair discrimination in sifting the actual news from conflicting report and the presentation of current events in their just proportion. They comment on its freedom from daily-paper sensationalism. All men and women who want to know what the world is doing find it an intellectual necessity, to judge from the letters received from hundreds. Its editorials are comprehensive, and labor saving to the busy man or woman. Its timely contributions on important topics are by the best-informed writers. Its reviews of other magazines give the best of their best work. It is profusely illustrated.

These letters will enable all thoughtful men and women to judge of its value to them:

PRESIDENT

"I know that through its columns views have been presented to me that I could not otherwise have had access to; because all earnest and thoughtful men, no matter how widely their ideas diverge are given free utterance in its columns."—Theodore Roosevelt

EX-PRESIDENT

"I consider it a very valuable addition to my library."
—Grover Cleveland

"It is a publication of very great value. I have sometimes found there very important matter indeed which I should not otherwise have discovered."—George F. Hoar, U. S. Senator, Massachusetts

"I am a constant reader of the Review of Reviews and appreciate it very highly indeed. I think it a very important part of my library, and practically a necessity for one in public life."—J. B. Foraker, U. S. Senator Ohio

"It is one of the best and most satisfactory publications of the day."—Charles W. Fairbanks U. S. Senator Indiana

"I do not have a great deal of time to read magazines but I take pleasure in saying that the Review of Reviews is among the number which finds a place on my table each month."—James K. Jones U. S. Senator, Arkansas

Send for particulars as to how it can be had with an invaluable set of books for 50 cents a month.

THE MAN ON THE CORNER

[illegible] Sun, and Some Re[illegible] Saw Not.

I hear this (Thursday) morning that court will probably be in session all the week, but the grand jury will get through some time today. The case now in court is that of Mrs. Lois Cunningham vs. Mr. Jackson Lumberton. She is suing for damages for the loss of her husband who was killed by the company's log train. Next week the principle case will be that of the Christian charged with attempted murder of Mr. George Wilson. I don't know what the grand jury may bring forth.

S. S. Convention Beats 1 & 2

The Sunday school Convention of Beats 1 and 2 met with Shiloh church, Nov. 16 and 17, 1901.

Devotional services conducted by Bro. Vandiver. Miss Cora Armstrong was elected Secretary pro tem, the secretary being absent. Report from the Sun Sunday school received.

1:30 p.m. What are the duties of sub-school teachers to their school? Opened by Rev. [illegible], followed by A. L. Vandiver and others.

Officers were elected for the next year as follows: W. M. Aldridge, President; W. H. Conway, Vice President; Lizzie Lowery, Sec.

The place of meeting for the next convention was considered, Rockville and Jemison being the two places under consideration. By a vote of the convention it was decided to meet at Jemison Baptist church the third Sunday in February, 1902. J. B. Northcutt, L. H. Reddis and W. M. Aldridge were appointed as a committee to arrange a program for the next convention.

The business of the convention being over, the next subject on the program was taken up and freely discussed by Mrs. M. J. Griffin, A. L. Vandiver, W. L. Crim and others. Miss Mary Creel recited a touching piece.

2:30 a.m. What is our duty as a church to the Sunday-school? was ably discussed by Bro. J. B. Northcutt, Misses Sallie Lowery and Emma Lowery recited very appropriate pieces. The convention joined hands to sing No. 15. It being the hour for preaching, the convention gave way to Bro. Vandiver, who preached his well sermon.

7 p.m. After partaking of the refreshments the good people had joined Bro. L. Gey in prayer, which the convention was opened with recitations by Misses Lois Lowery, Ida Bushy, Martha Cox Armstrong.

The influence of the Sabbath school was discussed by Bro. Lindsey. A. L. Vandiver responded with some appropriate remarks.

The convention was interspersed with music, led by Bro. J. B. Northcutt.

The convention was entertained at Salem. We hope to meet again.

Singing "Praise God from whom all blessings flow," the convention adjourned to meet at Jemison Baptist church, third Sunday in February, 1902.

Lois Lowery, Sec.

It Saved Her Life

Gooch's Mexican Syrup has wrought a cure in this neighborhood which has astonished the people. Miss Lavia was given up to die by her attending physician. She had lung fever. The doctor said she could die before morning, and had to discontinue his medicine as it was doing her no good. Her father had a bottle of Gooch's Mexican Syrup and Gooch's Quick Relief in the house. They at once began to give the syrup in doses one hour apart, and frequently bathed her with the Quick Relief. The next morning she was better, and after using a few bottles of each, was as well as ever. It was the raising the dead, and established the reputation of Gooch's Mexican Syrup here as a remedy we can all recommend.

I hear this (Thursday) morning that court will probably be in session all the week, but the grand jury will get through some time to-day. The case now in court is that of Mrs. Lois Cunningham vs. the Jackson Lumber Co. She is suing for damages for the loss of her husband who was killed by the company's log train. Next week the principle case will be that of the Christian charged with attempted murder of Mr. George Willis. I dont know what the grand jury may bring forth.

S. S. Convention Beats 1 & 2

The Sunday school Convention of Beats 1 and 2 met with Shiloh church, Nov. 16 and 17, 1901.

Devotional services conducted by Bro. Vandiver. Miss Cora Armstrong was elected Secretary pro tem, the secretary being absent. Report from the Sunday schools was received.

1:30 p.m. What are the duties of the school teachers to their schools? Opened by Rev. J. D. Lolley, followed by A. L. Vandiver and others.

Officers were elected for the next year as follows: W. M. Aldridge, President; W. H. Conway, Vice President; Miss Lizzie Lowery, Sec.

The place of meeting for the next convention was considered, Rocky Mount and Jemison being the two places under consideration. By a vote of the convention it was decided to meet at Jemison Baptist church the third Sunday in February, 1902. J. B. Northcutt, L. H. Reynolds and W. M. Aldridge were appointed as a committee to arrange a program for the next convention.

The business of the convention being over, the next subject on the program was taken up and freely discussed by Mrs. M. J. Griffin, A. L. Vandiver, W. L. Crim and others. Miss Mary Creel recited an interesting piece.

Sunday, 9:30 a.m. What is our work as a church to the sundayschool? was ably discussed by Bro. J. M. Northcutt. Misses Sallie Lowery and Emma Lowery recited two very appropriate pieces. The convention joined in a song, "Nearer, My God, to Thee." It being the hour for preaching, the convention gave way to Bro. Vandiver, who preached his usual sermon.

2:30 p.m. After partaking of the refreshments the good people had spread, Bro. L. Loley led in prayer, after which the convention was entertained with recitations by Misses Lou Lowery, Ella Busby, Mattie Patton, Cora Armstrong.

The subject of the Sabbath-school was discussed by Bro. Lolley, A. L. Vandiver responded with some appropriate remarks.

The convention was interspersed with music, led by Bro. J. B. Northcutt.

The convention was entertained by at Sunday. We hope to meet them again.

After singing "Praise God from whom all blessings flow," the convention adjourned to meet at Jemison Baptist church, the third Sunday in February, 1902.

It Saved Her Life.

Gooch's Mexican Syrup has accomplished a cure in this neighborhood which has astonished the people. Miss Davis was given up to die by her attending physician. She had lung fever. The doctor said she would die before morning, and advised to discontinue his medicine. It was doing her no good. Her father had a bottle of Gooch's Mexican Syrup and Gooch's Quick Relief in the house. They at once began to give the syrup in doses one hour apart, and frequently bathed the chest with the Quick Relief. The next morning she was better, and after taking a few bottles of each, is almost as well as ever. It was just like raising the dead, and restored the reputation of Gooch's Mexican Syrup here as a great medicine. Yours respectfully,

TO CURE A COLD IN ONE DAY

To the Farmers of Chilton County:

I want to say a few words to my friends and neighbors of Chilton county, about the Farmers Mutual Insurance Association of Alabama, a vigorous branch of which is now growing up in our county. The object of this Association is to enable us as neighbors to do in a systematic way what we are enjoined by High Authority to do, viz: "Bear ye one another's burdens". A little help at the needed time is far better than any spasmodic giving. The Association is authorized by the Assembly, the highest authority in our State, it stands on a thoroughly legal footing, and the provisions as to pro rata assessments enable the poor as well as the rich, to protect themselves against worldly calamity. Its operations are confined to one class of risks, (Farmers and isolated residences) it is not run for profit, there are no salaried officers and you are not called on for money until the loss has occurred, and your neighbor needs your assistance. The average expence for losses is small, experience in other States, and in part of our own State, all go to prove that the average loss per year, is less than twenty cents on the one hundred dollars of property insured, in this county it has not cost twenty cents on the one hundred dollars in almost two years. I thought so highly of the plan, that I applied to Mr. Edler, the county agent, to take me in but he showed me that I was not eligible, being too close to other houses in Clanton, as a consequence I had to go to a Standard Insurance Company and pay over five times as much for two-thirds of the protection, my policy only insuring against fire and lightning, I get nothing if my house is destroyed by wind. This is a step in the right direction of teaching us to organize and protect ourselves. The question of who acts as agent is not the main question, and the only question with the farmer should be, is it safe and good for me?

S. M. ADAMS.

Chilton County Baptist Association

A meeting for the purpose of organizing the above Association will be held at Thorsby on Wednesday, December 4, 1901

Everybody wishing to attend this meeting is cordially invited.

Concord.

Rev. Robinson filled his appointment here Sunday.

Yes, some have married, and the bells are still ringing. At the home of the bride, on Monday, Nov. 18, Mr. Ernest Mims and Miss Janie Parrish, were joined in the holy bonds of matrimony. We wish them a congenial life together.

Some of our young people attended services at Poplar Sunday, and report a nice time in the afternoon.

Seek, the German, and Boot, the American, had quite a time at the goober parching Saturday night.

Mr. Marion Gore and Miss Lilla Danforth, were among those present at Concord Sunday.

We are glad to know the Banner is soon to have a steam press.

All of our correspondents seem to be asleep, Wake up! Wake up! Some of our good folks have gone courting this week.

Institute of Teacher's Institute.

The Teachers' Institute of Chilton county met Friday, Nov. 22, 1901, in the auditorium of the Thorsby Normal School; was called to order by Supt. J. W. Moore, and opened with devotional exercises conducted by Rev. P. H. Manson. After enrollment a few remarks of welcome were made by Prof. Rose, Miss Della Wambem then entertained the institute with the recitation of "The Last Hymn."

"The aim in teaching reading" was discussed in paper by Miss Mc Gehee and in a speech by Prof Tidwell. J T Moore led in discussion before the Institute "Method of teaching grammar." Adjourned by Superintendent's order for noon recess.

Called to order in the afternoon at 2:05 p.m. "The true aim of education" and "mental development" were discussed with enthusiasm by various teachers, and also by the Rev Windsor.

Adjourned to meet again Saturday morning.

Called to order at 9.35 a.m. by Superintendent. Devotional exercises were conducted by Prof J. M. Collier.

The Superintendent announced committees. He also made some interesting remarks concerning his appreciation of the present work of the teachers in the county.

"Practical Institute work" and "the teacher's responsibility" were discussed by various teachers.

Miss Dora Thorsby also entertained the Institute with a recitation, "Legend of the organ builder."

After adjournment for noon recess, the Institute met again at 2 p.m., and entered into a discussion of methods of class work.

The subjects of reading and decimal fractions were discussed by various teachers. The Institute was especially pleased with Miss Susie Hale's work in illustrating actual methods of class work in reading.

The committee on resolutions reported through its chairman, Prof. G. L. Speer, the following resolutions which were adopted single by rising vote:

Whereas, the people of Thorsby have so kindly welcomed us among them, have opened their doors to us, and have entertained us so hospitably during the session of our Institute now closing, therefore be it

Resolved, first, that our thanks are due and are hereby tendered to these good people of Thorsby for the kindness and hospitality so extended.

Resolved second, that our thanks are hereby extended to Profs. Rose and Carmichael for their untiring efforts to make this session of our Institute a success.

Resolved third, that we extend our thanks to the President and Secretary for the efficient discharge of their duties.

Resolved fourth, that the teachers of Chilton county in Institute assembled, wish to express their appreciation of the work accomplished by Supt. J. W. Abercrombie in his untiring efforts for the furtherance of education and its interests in Alabama.

Resolved fifth, that the teachers of Chilton county further endorse the work of Supt. Abercrombie by nominating him for a third term for Superintendent of Education for the State of Alabama.

Resolved sixth that this Institute extend to Miss Susie Hale of the Educational Exchange, especial thanks for her interesting and excellent work during the sessions.

The young people of Thorsby and of the Thorsby Normal School, at frequent intervals, entertained the teachers with music.

Clanton was chosen as the next place for holding the Institute.

Institute adjourned to meet at the Superintendent's call sometime in February next.

UNIVERSITY SCHOOL
PLANTERSVILLE, ALA.

Is a teaching and strictly private school for boys and girls.

Correlated to the University of Alabama and to the Alabama Polytechnic Institute.

Has fitted more pupils for college, more pupils for teaching, more pupils for advanced business positions than all other schools in Chilton county combined. It is the only school in Chilton county where pupils have a First Grade Certificate under the present school laws.

Its course of instruction is the best arranged, its methods the soundest, most thorough and up-to-date; its scholarship the most advanced; its location, buildings, grounds, furniture, equipments, the most attractive and best adapted of any school in Chilton county.

Its pupils enter any college in the South on certificate of the Principal. It deals honestly with the public, adheres to professional courtesy, and performs its promises. Its mission is to build up, not to pull down. It is not, as some are, a mere common school called "College," "Normal," etc., by which misnomers the uninformed are misled.

$101 pays all expenses of board, tuition, fuel, lights, etc., for session of nine months. School opens September 25, 1901. Write for catalogue.

Arizona olives are said to be better than the imported ones. Evidently nobody has found out, as yet, how to adulterate them.

A buried forest has been uncovered in Alaska, at the mouth of Turner Creek, which represents indisputable evidence that our northern territory once possessed a tropical, or, at least, a semi-tropical climate.

It will perhaps be a source of surprise to many Americans to know that the production of grouse in any country could be made more profitable than the raising of sheep, and yet it appears that one of the most astute proprietors of grouse moors in North Wales cleared off the sheep from his moors some years ago, with the result that the $750 a year he got for the grazing of 7000 Welsh sheep has been more than doubled in the increase of grouse rental he enjoys from this improvement.

An automobile savings bank is the latest French novelty. The authorities of Mezieres, wishing to encourage thrift among the peasants, have had it built to specifications. It is an electric motor-car containing four seats, one for the driver and three in the rear arranged around a small table. Folding shelves make a convenient desk for a person standing beside the vehicle. Under the table is a small safe. The passengers are two clerks from the local treasury department and a cashier. The cart travels about the country making short stops in the villages on pre-arranged days, and receiving such sums as the citizens or farmers of the neighborhod may wish to deposit. So far, however, the innovation has met little encouragement.

One of the subjects recently considered by the Massachusetts Bureau of Labor is the comparative cost of food cooked at home and that cooked outside. Bread furnished by the baker, for instance, costs about one cent a pound less than that baked at home, but on meat cooked at home there is a saving of about one-third. The saving is still greater on entire dinners cooked at home. In one case it was found that a family dinner cooked in the home kitchen cost an average of sixteen cents for each person, but a similar dinner, when cooked outside and sent in, cost twenty-five cents for each person. The object of this investigation was to benefit families living in cities, where, in late years, facilities for getting outside-cooked meals have been abundantly provided.

Two experiments in canal rowing by electricity are about to be made, one in Ohio, the other in the northern suburbs of London, England. The former consists of a trolley line with a standard-gauge track laid on the old towpath of the Miami and Erie canal. Motor cars of 150 horse-power will be operated on the line. Each of these will be able to haul ten heavily loaded canal boats at a speed of ten miles an hour, which will have to be kept down, however, to four miles per hour to comply with the provisions of the state charter. The canal connects Toledo and Cincinnati, and the power will be drawn from the latter city, fourteen sub-stations being scattered along the route. In the London experiment the canal barges will be drawn by an electrically propelled vehicle using the towpath and fed by an overhead trolley also.

Among recent arrival from Europe is a man who went thither in response to a cable message which notified him that his sister was dying. That was some idiot's idea of a funny practical joke, as the woman was not ill. The victim of such a cruel and wicked joke is ready to urge legislation which will impose on the practical joker penalties but little less severe than those which are provided for cases of assault and injury to the body. He maintains that no bodily harm which is not permanent can be worse than the distress of mind which he has been made to suffer. There are other practical jokes which result in wounded self-esteem or in a feeling of humiliation, and which hurt more than any bodily bruise. It was a French critic of penetration who said that man's best satisfaction is in not being a dupe. No one, however, can always protect himself against the ingenuity of the practical joker.

ALABAMA'S CONSTITUTION

GOES INTO EFFECT ON THANKSGIVING DAY.

GOVERNOR'S PROCLAMATION REGARDING IT.

Opelika's New Sewer System—After Appointments as Registrars—Church Home—Mill Burned—Up for 28 Years—Money for Missions.

THE NEW CONSTITUUTION

Goes into effect on Thanksgiving Day. The governor has issued the following proclamation giving the day special significance this year:

Whereas, It appears from the certificate of the Secretary of State and the Attorney General that on the 11th day of November, 1901, at an election held in the several counties in this State for and against constitution, that the whole number of votes cast "for constitution" is one hundred and eight thousand six hundred and thirteen (108,613). and the whole number of votes cast "against constitution" is eighty-one thousand seven hundred and thirty-four (81,734).

Now, therefore, I, William D. Jelks, by virtue of the power and authority in me vested as Governor of Alabama, do declare the majority of votes cast "for constitution" to be twenty-six thousand eight hundred and seventy-nine (26,879.)

I, therefore, proclaim that that the said new constitution so satisfied shall go into effect as the constitution of the State of Alabama on Thursday, it being the twenty-eighth day of November, 1901, and shall thenceforth be binding and obligatory as such upon the people of this State.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State to be affixed at the Capitol, in the city of Montgomery, this the 21st day of November, A. D., 1901.

(Seal.)

By the Governor.

W. D. JELKS, Governor.

ROBERT P. M'DAVID,
Secretary of State.

THE METHODISTS.

The North Alabama conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, South, meets at Anniston, this week, and the Rev. J. D. Simpson, presiding elder, expects to make one of the best reports ever sent from the Birmingham district. The year has been one of the most successful in the history of the church. The increase of membership is about 1,200. They have raised $1,200 over the assessment for missions and have made an increase of $2,500 over last year for the support of the ministry. Over $16,000 has been raised for building, repairing and furbishing churches throughout the Birmingham district. A church has been built at Ensley which will cost $15,000, and another one has been started at Pratt City to cost in the neigborhood of $8,000. A church being built at East Birmingham will cost about $2,000. The members of the church in the Birmingham district have raised for church purposes during the year over $60,000.

S. J. BARTLETT, rated as the richest man in Limestone county, died Thursday at his home near Mooresville, twenty-two miles west of Huntsville. Mr. Bartlett was about 65 years old.

STRUCK WITH A BILLIARD CUE.

In a barroom fight Saturday Joe Thomas struck General Gibbs on the head with a billiard cue and very seriously injured him. His skull was fractured. Both were employes at the Louisville & Nashville shops at New Decatur.

SMALL-SIZED HURRICANE.

A severe wind storm which came in the shape of a hurricane swept over Eufaula Saturday night. It lasted three hours and came from a southeasterly direction. Only a slight sprinkle of rain accompanied it, and at times it was alarming. Fences were blown down and limbs were twisted from the trees. Country people say that the roads are blocked by fallen trees and are impassable in many places.

HUNTSVILLE has not had a death for sixty-four days.

A NEW BANK.

The new City National Bank, of Anniston will throw open its doors December 2. Extensive improvements are now being made in the building formerly occupied by the Bank of Anniston. The new bank has complied with all the requirements of the treasury department, and has been given authority by the comptroller of the currency to begin business at that time.

OPELIKA

Has recently closed a contract with the Sanitary Sewer Company of Philadelphia for sewering the city throughout in a first-class manner at a cost of about $30,000. This cost is to be borne by the company, which has a contract for thirty years, and they will get their pay in annual rentals from those who connect with the sewers. The city has fully protected the citizens in that also, and the rates for connections are approximately the same as those charged for water works. No place in the state has needed sewers worse than Opelika. It position is such that it has a fine drainage. The city has the right to purchase the system from the company anytime after five years and the contract also provides for daily flushing.

THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH

Held its convention in Greenville last week. Many important lessons were learned, among them being a lesson on the way we American people are spending our money: $1,200,000,000 for strong drink in one year, $600,000,000 for tobacco, $400,000,000 for amusements, $300,000,000 for jewelry, $75,000,000 for candy, $25,000,000 for chewing gum, $5,000,000 for foreign missions—150 religious bodies in the United States have given this $5,000,000 and made 3,000,000 converts in heathen lands in 100 years. The convention adjourned to meet in Selma, November, 1902.

EVERBODY WANTS IT.

The state board of registrars, consisting of the governor, auditor and commissioner of agriculture, are almost overwhelmed with applications for places on the county boards. The state board will make no appointments until sometime in December, and in the meantime are arranging the applicants in alphabetical lists. When the board does take up the matter the applicants will be considered in this order, the lists being carefully gone over with a view to appointing the best men possible to the positions.

HEARD AT ONCE.

Judge J. G. Winter, one of the counsel for Dr. J. H. Crossland, charged with assault with intent to murder Captain Noble J. Wiley in Montgomery some months ago, has made a motion in the court of that city to have the trial, the date for which was set at November 26th, postponed, on the ground that defendant's counsel could not attend at that date. Judge Thomas, however, overruled the motion, and the case will be called on the day orizinally set.

MILL BURNED.

The cedar mill of McCutchen & Evans at Larkinsville wat destroyed by fire last week. The fire is supposed to have originated from sparks being blown from the boiler furnace into the cedar shavings. Two carloads of fine cedar was also destroyed. The loss is heavy, with no insurance.

STOLE TREASURE IN TRANSIT.

The fact that 112 bars of gold and silver bullion, valued at over $20,000, were stolen six months ago in transit from the smelters at El Paso, Texas, to eastern refineries has just come to light. The shipment was made over the Galveston, Harrisburg and San Antonio railway under heavy bond. It was not missed until the car reached New Orleans. It has been since learned that the bullion was thrown from the car near El Paso, and that it now lies buried in western Texas. The thieves have been traced from place to place, and a few bars have been unearthed. Detectives have a clew to the hidden treasure.

WEDDED BY WIRE.

The second wedding ceremony over the telephone line from Bowdon to Carrollton this year was performed Saturday morning. C. W. McDonald and Miss E. V. Graben, an eloping couple from over the line of Alabama, reached Bowdon early this morning, and got the telephone operator there to 'phone a marriage license and a justice of the peace to perform the ceremony over the telephone. In a few minutes the license had been procured and the ceremony was pronounced by Justice J. T. Norman, of this place Witnesses at various 'phones heard the ceremony performed.

BLOODY FEUD.

J. F. Ward, a member of the Highland, Kan., city council, crushed J. E. Springer's skull with a club, fatally wounding him, after Springer had twice shot him as the result of an old-time family feud. Ward is seriously wounded. Springer went to Ward's house with the avowed intention of shooting his adversary. He fired two shots at Ward, one of which took effect above the heart and the other in the left shoulder, when Ward felled him with a blow on the head. Springer cannot live.

BLEW HIMSELF UP.

News reaches us of the suicide of Judge M. A. Rogers, formerly of the Supreme Court of Colorado and one of the ablest lawyers in the state, at Steamboat Springs, Colo. Judge Rogers lay down with a stick of dynamite under him and lighting a cigar fired the fuse and calmly smoked until the shock of the explosion ended his life. Judge Rogers had been in Steamboat Springs all summer with his wife. No cause is known for the suicide.

FIENDISH.

Adolph Carlson, an Armourdale, Kas., saloonkeeper; Louis Arlinger, his night bartender; Tom Schwaber, a packing house employe, and the saloon porter were drugged in Carlson's place of business Saturday by two robbers who administered "knock-out drops." The robbers secured $200 in cash and $150 in checks, and then while the four men lay in a stupor on the floor, they locked the doors, set fire to the building and escaped. The fire was extinguished before much damage was done and the men were rescued unhurt.

DECLINES PAY.

It is learned that Mr. Isador Rayner, chief counsel for Rear Admiral W. S. Schley in the recent hearing before the court of inquiry, has refused to accept a fee for his services. A mutual friend of the Admiral and Mr. Rayner stated that the admiral recently sent a valuable gold watch to Mr. Rayner, and a magnificent brooch of diamonds and pearls to Mrs. Rayner.

ALABAMA REPRESENTATIVES ARE ASTIR.

Census and Election Figures to be Used Against the South—Rivers and Harbors—Richardson Will Probably be Re-elected Minority Leader.

Representative Crumpacker of Indiana will come to Washington prepared to fight throughout the session for the passage of his bill reducing the southern congressional representation. Armed with census reports on the number of negroes twenty-one years of age and over in southern states, as compared with the number of votes officially reported, he hopes to convince the house that the discrepancy calls for a new apportionment. The republican congressman is said to be in favor of legislation on the subject as this committee realizes that the result of the elections last November may be to close the effort. In the last congress when the apportionment subject was under consideration, Mr. Crumpacker and his associates met with defeat owing to the opposition of many of the leaders of the republican party, including the late President McKinley. Before the house adjourned, however, a resolution was passed calling upon the director of the census for statistics of the negro voting population. The figures will be supplied as soon as congress meets, and will be referred to the committee on the census, from which an effort will be made to report a bill modifying the measure passed last winter placing the membership of the House at 386, with six additional members from the states of Texas, Mississippi, Louisiana and Florida.

Representative Burton, of Ohio, who will head the rivers and harbors committee in the new congress, and who will probably be in February before his committee's bill is introduced. From the middle of next month until the latter part of January hearings will be given by the committee to delegations asking for rivers and harbors improvements. The bill, as passed by the house in the last congress, carried about $13,600,000. Owing to delays resulting from the failure of the bill the new measure will be in excess of this amount. If the president has been correctly quoted as favoring the irrigation of western lands, and decides to recommend the commencement of this new feature of public improvements in his message to congress there will hardly be any limit to the amount carried by the bill. Members of the rivers and harbors committee will for this reason oppose placing irrigation appropriations in a rivers and harbors bill. It is a big proposition, involving millions of dollars, and there seems to be a general feeling that it should receive special attention, and if deemed sufficiently meritorious to warrant an appropriation, a special bill.

The house democrats will meet in caucus next Saturday night for the purpose of electing a minority leader and transacting other business of importance coming before them. Representative Richardson of Tennessee, the present democratic leader, will probably be re-elected. While he has not been sufficiently aggressive to suit a number of his colleagues he is a safe man and rarely makes a mistake. Just at present when the democratic policy seems to be a negative one, his re-election is generally considered the best solution of the leadership problem.

A Coat of Tweed.

A splendid traveling coat made for a bride is of dark reversible tweed in an effective brown and white mixture, somewhat after the form of a man's frock coat with a sack back fitted at the hem. It is bordered with a broad band of stitched velvet and has a deep turnover collar. With it would look well a hat of the Alice and stitched castor felt in a sailor shape, the brim edged with white cloth, and tabs of cloth fastening with gilt buttons under a country of white chiffon.

Statue of Victoria.

One of the most impressive events of the royal visit to Ottawa, the Canadian capital, was the unveiling of a statue of the late Queen Victoria by the Duke of Cornwall and York, her grandson. The statue, which represents Canada laying a wreath at the feet of the Queen, stands before the Parliament buildings, at the head of the main legislative building, overlooking the city which Victoria chose, when it was a mere village, to be the capital of the Dominion.

A New Kind of Locket.

The modern version of the long neck chain that was in disregard to remove from popular feminine favor, but that specially attracted attention was the charm that swung from it. It looked like a tiny wallet of gold.

"What is it?" all the girls wanted to know.

The girl with the charm good naturedly explained that the locket was intended to hold the portrait of your parent and lover. All the girls knew that the locket was engaged, so when she opened her little gold book of course they expected to see a series of hairs.

So far the locket did not differ greatly from many a similar ornament. What really made the difference was the tiny magnifying glass attached to it. The portrait was thus enlarged to very satisfying proportions when wanted, at other times and to ordinary optics it was so minute as to be scarcely recognizable.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Souvenirs of Josephine.

By the death of Prince Eugene de Beauharnais, the most interesting collection of souvenirs of the Empress Josephine which have ever been collected will be scattered.

For years the Prince had had but one fad—the collecting of souvenirs of his ancestress. He gave extravagant prices for anything that could be proved to have belonged to her, and an immense sum of money was invested in his collection.

Every one supposed that he would buy Malmaison when it came into the market, but he announced that he hated the place because of Josephine's sufferings there. He did, however, buy almost everything the house contained.

It is said that the Josephine souvenirs which include valuable jewels, lace, etc., as well as a host of things which have no value save in association, are to be sold among the crowned heads to whom Prince Eugene belonged in which case they will go to his home.

The Chaperon of the South.

In many parts of the Old South the chaperon exercises chaperonage and becomes a necessity only one remove from a duenna. In society the Southern girl is under the faithful eye of this feminine Cerberus, or she is with her mother or an elderly relative. No tete-a-tete buggy-rides for her by moonlight! In many sections no tete-a-tete buggy-rides for her during sunlight! No dusky strolls accompanied only by the sighing zephyrs! Strephon sighs like a furnace, but he must do it decorously. If he calls he is not bothered by encounters in the drawing-room, but promptly at bedtime and a minute after. Nor is he supposed to cling affectionately to the front door with the soles of his shoes, and explain that parting is such sweet sorrow. He is supposed to go, and he does. These precautions are because the girl is supposed to be unable to take care of herself." It is unknown that an occasion might arise when she would be required to display such ability. They are because it is the purpose of her guardians that she shall not be placed in a position where she would be obliged to take care of herself."—R. A. Cardell in the Woman's Home Companion.

Simple Recipes for Beauty.

Our city maidens, taken as a whole, have quite a brilliant complexions as their country cousins, but a notable example among the latter declares that it is to the homely kitchen garden, stretching back from their old farmhouses, that she owes a skin that is almost invariably remarked upon for its beauty. As soon as the tomatoes begin to ripen, the first thing she does after her morning ablutions is to pile herself to the spot where they grow and to use one in lieu of soap, rubbing face, neck and hands. She takes a bit of soft cheese cloth to serve as a towel, but does not use it until the tomato has been on for a few minutes. When cucumbers are overripe she uses them in the same manner.

An English woman, who has lived in this country for 50 years, still has her clear, bright complexion, and in an answer to the question whether this much desired beauty was attributed to any particular treatment she said: "Yes, my dear," while the roses deepened in her cheeks, "hot water, both in winter and summer, and good, honest soap is my cosmetic. You know I stay in town during all the dust and heat, every day during the summer. When I come in from down street I am never comfortable until my face is well washed with soap and water almost as hot as I can bear it, with plenty of fresh hot water to rinse off every trace of soap. In winter, if I am going into the sharp air, I shade the water from hot to cold.

"Besides this fact washing after a journey I do the very same thing before breakfast and at bedtime. Since wrinkles have begun to show I have used an emollient, with gentle massage at night, not hoping to wholly remove the marks of Father Time, but to make the old fellow soften his touch as much as possible."

Could anything be simpler, less expensive and more hygienic than this? And, if successful, wouldn't it soon drive the "beauty doctors" out of existence?—Chicago Record-Herald.

The Rainy Day Outfit.

If properly clad there is no reason why rain should keep any woman indoors. A mackintosh is certainly not a necessity except one is bound for a matinee or an afternoon tea, when street cars are the means of getting to one's destination and a long gown must be worn, and even the mackintosh is no longer the formidable rubber coat of seasons past. Correct and stylish rainyday clothes appropriate for any and every occasion now consist of a short skirt, a shirtwaist, a stylish jacket, a walking hat, an umbrella, walking shoes with cork soles or shoes with a sandal rubbers and heavy, well-fitting gloves. With rainyday skirts bloomers or tights should take the place of petticoats, the skirts average about the same in cut and length as they have been doing for the last season, though the newer ones are somewhat longer, escaping the ground by not more than two and one-half inches all round. Umbrellas with small wood handles are neat, inexpensive and stylish. The natural knotted-root effect is unobstrusive but popular. Of course elaborate handle designs are used, but an umbrella is like a piano—you may content yourself with something plain and elegant or you may have one elaborately and magnificently decorated. However, if you have a propensity for lending umbrellas select the former variety.

The chief thing about the rainyday costume is that it be well fitting and stylish. Ready made rainyday suits are frequently failures because the cloth is not properly shrunken before it is cut. If the rainyday suit is to be made at home, and there is no reason why it cannot be, send the material to a tailor to be shrunken before you put your scissors to it, and when your suit is finished send it back to him to be pressed. It will cost you very little to have this done and it will repay you tenfold in appearance.

Use for the suit doubled-faced material; it requires no lining; in fact rainy skirts should never be lined, nor does the coat require a lining, save in the sleeves, though about this latter garment it is a matter of choice.

To return to the mackintosh. If one is required the most popular thing and the most stylish is the long, loose, perfectly plain ulster made of waterproof cloth and finished with stitching, buttons and a velvet coat collar.—American Queen.

Various shades of magenta form a stunning hat.

Touches of black velvet on the hat and on the gown are now becoming almost indispensable.

Chinese and Japanese embroideries look particularly well upon waists of dark blue, red or light tan silk.

Hats composed of the feathers of brilliant hued tropical birds and those of ebony plumage are included among the season's millinery novelties.

Plain, straight vests are put into waists this year. One black cheviot cloth gown has the vest of a black cloth of a basket weave, with clusters of tiny white dots in it.

There is a revived interest in rubies, especially what is called the pigeon blood ruby. Alexandrite, a polished gem stone with a red hue in it, is combined with diamonds.

Black velvet applique is in evidence at the shops, and there are, too, beautiful velvet appliques of softly shaded colors which promise stunning effects upon gowns in white or soft pastel tints.

White net dotted all over with tiny jet spots and with a border of black lace applied on the white ground and heavily encrusted with jet is among the most exquisite of the new robe materials.

Norfolk jackets will be much worn in the near future, and they are as a rule exceedingly becoming to slight women. The belt is usually removable, and may be replaced by one of patent leather if desired. The newest of these jackets are made with yokes in front.

To Clarify Molasses.

The old-fashioned way of clarifying molasses—and it is probably as good as any—is to heat it over the fire, pouring in a pint of sweet milk for each gallon. The scum which arises should be taken off before it is broken by boiling.

Lighting and Wall Paper.

Consider well the lighting of your rooms before selecting new wall coverings. Red absorbs the sun's rays, and will darken a room more than any other color. Green, too, has a decided tendency to tone down the light. Yellow, however, heightens the effect of sunlight and is admirable for dark rooms. This latter shade in a bronze tint is the fashionable fad just now in combination with dark brown fumed oak.

Dish-Washing.

The first step is well-scraped dishes. I find a dainty help in the use of cheap tissue paper for wiping out greasy dishes. Into a small dishpan half full of boiling hot water put a piece of common kitchen soap and allow it to remain only long enough to make the water slightly soapy. A regular order of dish-washing should be observed: first the glasses, next the silver, then the cups and saucers, followed by the sticky and greasy dishes, and last the pots and pans and kettles. One should have three dish-mops, a small one for the glasses and after-dinner coffee cups, another for the other dishes, and a third for the cooking utensils. If the cooking utensils are properly scraped before being put into the water they can be cleaned perfectly without the use of that abomination, a dishcloth. The mops should be carefully washed after use and be hung in a bright, warm place to dry thoroughly. Take one dish in the hand at a time and wash carefully. When dishes are handled in this way only the tips of the fingers of the left hand need come in contact with the dishwater. As soon as the dishwater in the pan gets cool or becomes at all dirty, it should be emptied out and the pan be refilled half full of boiling water. The dishwater should never be allowed to become like "boarding house soup." Dishes can, of course, be dried more easily when scalded.—Good Housekeeping.

Rice Cocoa Cream—Put four cups of milk in a double boiler and when boiling hot pour in one-half cup of washed rice, one tablespoonful of butter, one-half teaspoonful of salt, five tablespoonfuls of sugar, three tablespoonfuls of cocoa, one teaspoonful of vanilla. Steam one hour and serve ice cold.

Angel Cakelets—Beat the whites of four eggs and half a level teaspoonful cream tartar until stiff; sift together half cupful fine granulated sugar and half cupful of flour; add gradually to the eggs. Flavor with quarter teaspoon of almond. Bake in little cake pans. Sprinkle with powdered sugar and bake in a moderate oven twenty minutes.

Boiled Leg of Mutton—Dust the leg with flour and wrap in a cloth; put in a kettle of boiling water and let it boil gently twelve minutes to every pound; when about done add two teaspoonfuls of salt. When tender remove the cloth, sprinkle with tablespoonful of chopped parsley, a heaping teaspoonful of salt and a saltspoonful of pepper; serve with caper sauce.

Pumpkin Marmalade — Take four pounds of yellow pumpkins, four and a half pounds of sugar, half a dozen lemons and half a dozen oranges; cut the pumpkin into very small dice; mix the sugar with it and let stand over night. Peel the oranges and lemons with a very sharp knife, and boil the rinds two hours, changing the water twice. When the rinds are sold trim off as much of the white part as possible to prevent bitterness. Put the ingredients all together in a preserving kettle, and boil for two or three hours until the right consistency is reached. Place in jelly glasses and keep in a dark, cool place.

Brown Fricassee of Sheep's Tongues—Wash six tongues and put them in a stew pan, with boiling water to cover, and let them simmer for two hours. Let them cool in the liquor they were boiled in, then take them out, rid them of their roots and cut them in two. At dinner time season them with one teaspoonful salt, one saltspoonful pepper, and roll them in flour. Put three tablespoonfuls butter in a pan, add a chopped onion, brown, then add the tongues, brown on all sides, add two tablespoonfuls of browned flour, then one pint of stock; stir, well, add lastly one teaspoonful lemon juice. Dish on a hot platter with a border of boiled rice.

MAKING CUT GLASS.

From the Rough Flint to the Beautiful Finished Product.

It looks very easy to cut glass. It seems to be a very simple process. One is constrained to wonder how it is that skilled workers in cut glass have to serve a three years' apprenticeship. But they do it, and even then it isn't every one of them who is fitted to the vocation.

There is something very fascinating in watching the tracing of exquisite designs on a piece of glass by an expert workman. With so little apparent effort he holds it at just the right angle against the swiftly moving wheel of his lathe, the sharp edge of which furrows the smooth surface, throwing off minute particles of glass, which impart a milky color to water.

Of course, every one knows that only the best flint glass will sustain cutting, and even it must be very thick. The manufacturers of cut glass purchase it at 35 or 40 cents per pound. Only a few articles, such as goblets and wine glasses, are bought by the piece. This flint glass comes from different points throughout the country, and in its undecorated state is decidedly unattractive. In the process of decorating one-half the glass in a bowl, jar or other object is cut away, and yet the finished vessel of moderate size will weigh six or eight pounds.

Every manufacturer owns his own designs and is constantly trying to devise new and effective ones. Given the smooth flint glass, the workman to whom the execution of a design is intrusted traces it upon the object with a pigment, indicating the initial lines of the pattern first and developing its more intricate beauties by slow degrees. Then the flying wheel is guided along the lines thus traced, deeply inscribing them.

It is easily seen what a nicety of eye and hand is necessary for the work. There are three processes, called roughing, smoothing and polishing. The workman who executes the first must take care to cut into the glass only just so deep, because in smoothing it is necessary to make the cuts deeper. Thus, in the finished object the glass is cut away to an extreme thinness.

After roughing, the cuts made are opaque and rough to the touch. Smoothing removes the roughness, and polishing adds the final exquisite lustre and clearness. The first process is carried out on what is termed a steel mill, by the aid of sand and water; the second by means of a whirling stone, while wood conveys the final polish. Of course, a great deal of the fragile ware is broken in process of manufacture, although the proportion is less than might be supposed.

How fragile it is! The fact of its being half an inch thick in some places and an eighth or so in others renders it liable to destruction by variations of temperature alone, not to speak of other dangers. Nevertheless, people who can afford it will always buy it, if for no other reason than because it defies imitation. Counterfeit diamonds may sometimes deceive experts, but counterfeit cut glass never. The brilliance of its lustre is simply unobtainable by any other method than the one employed. Hence it keeps its value, and skilled workers in it continue to draw good salaries.

Among novelties recently designed is that of the mushroom effect. This is used in water, oil or cologne bottles, the stoppers of which are mushroom-shaped. When finely cut they are very handsome. Another new shape is that of a rose bowl supported by a foot. It is much prettier than the old style rose bowl, giving more opportunity for effective decoration.

There are some favorite old patterns which are always used, and among these is the chair bottom pattern, resembling a woven cane seat. The silver diamond effect, the original thickness of the glass cut in facets, is always employed by reason of its great beauty.—Philadelphia Press.

To Judge the Age of Lace.

In fixing the approximate date of any given piece of lace it is well to remember that machine-made thread was not used till after the beginning of the 18th century. Before that time the threads ran in lengths of about 20 inches, for the worker could streach no further than her distaff, and had to break off and join again; so that if after unravelling some 25 inches of thread no joint is found the lace is surely after the introduction of machine made thread. The "bride's ornee" alone are enough to go by; in the 15th century the bar had only a knot or a dot as ornament; in the 16th a double or single loop; in the 17th a star. The edging also helps; a sharp angle in the scallop fixes the date in the middle ages; the rounded scallop comes in with the 19th century; with the 17th a dotted scallop; the 18th century one is more elaborate, a large alternating with a small scallop and dots along in the centre of each.

Salad Eating Good Sense.

Even men are progressing gastronomically. Scientific dietetics has at last revealed to us the fact that the woman who eats salad on a hot day in July, August or September is displaying sound gastronomic sense. The long haired dreamer in the restaurant may have been 19 different kinds of a fool upon every other proposition in life, but he knew what to eat on a hot day. The human animal needs grass, or its equivalent, in summer. With their oil the salads supply everything a man physically needs in hot weather. All the civilized races of the world are salad eaters, but Americans eat less than do any other people. It is not a sign of mental decay or moral degeneracy for a man to eat salad; it is gastronomic sense.—What to Eat

PEARLS OF THOUGHT.

A true benefactor is one who makes us do the best we can.

Beauty without kindness dies unenjoyed and undelighting.

Greatness is never thrust on us but who leads an aimless life.

Fools create opportunities for wise men to take advantage of.

Time never sits heavily on us but when it is badly employed.

The less a man thinks or knows about his virtues the better we like him.

That action is best that procures the greatest happiness for the greatest numbers.

There never was a day that did not bring its own opportunity for doing that never could have been done before, and never can be again.

Even if work were the sole aim of life, it would be folly to neglect relaxation; for no labor can be efficiently and permanently carried on without it.

Better make of every sorrow a stepping stone to higher, nobler thought and deed than to bring it against your heart to weight you down into the slough of despond.

The making of a man's way comes only from that quickening of resolves which we call ambition. It is the spur that makes man struggle with destiny; it is heaven's own incentive to make purpose great and achievement greater.

The most solid comfort one can fall back upon is the thought that the business of one's life—the work at home after the holiday is done—is to help in some small, nibbling way to reduce the sum of ignorance, degradation and misery in the face of the beautiful earth.

A BUTTONHOLE CASE.

Brought to Decide the Precedence of the Opening.

Once upon a time, says the Boston Transcript, a case was brought before a learned judge in which the question at issue was as to whether the button was made for the buttonhole or the buttonhole for the button.

Counsel for the button held that it superfluous that the buttonhole was made for the use and behoof of the the button; still for form's sake, he would give a few reasons why his contention was the correct one. It was apparent, he said, that without the buttonhole the button would be unable to perform its function, and hence it was plain that the button preceded the buttonhole, and that the latter was invented in order that the button might be of service to mankind. It should be clear to everybody that had it not been for the button the buttonhole never would have been thought of. Its existence necessarily presupposed the existence of the button.

The lawyer for the other side was equally positive in the stand he had been employed to take. He averred that the buttonhole preceded the button; that, in fact, the button was merely an afterthought. He said that, as everybody knew, the buttonhole can be employed without the button, as witness Farmer Jones, who invariably uses a nail or sliver of wood instead of the conventional button, whereas it was impossible to make an effective use of the button without the aid and assistance of the buttonhole. Hence it was shown beyond peradventure that the buttonhole was of greater importance than the button, and it was natural to infer that the buttonhole was first invented and that the button came later simply as an ornament, or, at best, as an improvement upon the nail, sliver, or other instrumentality wherewith the buttonhole was made to perform its duty. To show the relative value of the buttonhole and the button, he said, take this simple example: When a button comes off the button can still be made serviceable, but if the buttonhole is slit open the button is of no use whatever. With this the learned counsel rested his case, although he claimed that he had not exhausted the subject.

When the court came in after recess the learned judge promptly decided the case in favor of the buttonhole—clearly a just decision, although it was wispered about the court house that the decision might have been different but for the fact that while changing his linen between adjournment and reassembling of the court his honor had dropped his collar button and hunted for it without success for half an hour, and perhaps might never have found it had he not stepped upon it. But, of course, this suggestion came from the partisans of the button and may fairly be imputed to their disappointment and chagrin.

Lime Honey the Best in the World.

The tree of a thousand uses, as the lime has been called, was formerly planted in England much more than it is today. The little row of pollard limes in front of the old farmhouse or the substantial thatched cottage is still a familiar site of unspoiled south country villages, while avenues of tall and ancient limes are very pleasant features of some of the large country houses, the manor houses in particular. It is claimed that the best honey in the world is made from the limes. Kowno honey is said to be made from no other flower. It is of a greenish hue. In Lithuania there are forests of lime trees and the hopey made there is particularly fine.—London Express.

The swiftest bird known to the naturalist is either the vulture, which is said to make 150 miles an hour, or the English kestril, which can probably equal, if not exceed, this speed.

WHEN A HORSESHOE IS UNLUCKY.

They say that a horseshoe is lucky;
Well, often that may be true;
But certainly not when the horse himself
Is handing it up to you.

A DOMESTIC OBSERVATION.

Lou—I declare, since I came back I'm quite another woman.

Biddy—Oh, won't your husband be pleased!

ANOTHER CYNIC.

"Solomon says 'In all labor there is profit.'"

"I wonder if Solomon ever tore up the sidewalk to get a nickle he had dropped through a crack?"

THE IMPORTANT QUESTION.

Mrs. Dashleigh—Do you believe it is possible, as Mrs. Roosevelt says, for a woman to dress on $300 a year?

Mrs. Kaflippe—It may be possible, but what's the use?

AN EGOTIST DESCRIBED.

"What kind of a man is Willigson?"

"Well," answered the mutual friend, "he is one of those people who think he is spiting the world because he won't write a book and tell all he knows."

HE HAD.

"Colonel," the fair grass widow asked "have you ever had a dumb, nameless dread of something that ——"

"Yes," he answered, leaping over a music rack and thus getting out of the corner, "but its gone now."

A PECUNIARY FATIGUE.

"Don't forget," said the willing worker, "that money talks."

"Yes," answered Senator Sorghum, a little glumly, "but I can't help wishing that you boys would select another photograph occasionally."

THE BRIGAND'S EXPLANATION.

"How did you come to reduce the amount demanded as a ransom for that missionary?"

"She lectured us so eloquently on the wickedness of avarice that our conscience forced us to a rebate."

CREDIT PROMPTLY CLAIMED.

"The banana peel joke seems to have gone entirely out of vogue," remarked the casual observer.

"That," replied the city official, who never misses a trick, "is entirely due to the efficiency of the street cleaning department."

LET HER AVOID RISK.

"I have been studying a picture of the woman who went over Niagara Falls in a barrel."

"And what is your conclusion?"

"That if brigands ever steal her it will take a lot of coaxing to raise a ransom fund of $50."

A SUSPICION.

"You know George Washington said he could not tell an untruth."

"Nonsense," answered the practical politician; "that was probably a campaign slander, invented to make his party managers think he was a hard man to handle."

AN IMPRESSION.

"I am very much afraid," said Miss Cayenne, "that I am losing my reputation as a keen observer and a satirist."

"What makes you think so?"

"Several people yesterday said they were glad to see me as if they really meant it."

A WORRY CLUB.

Tess—What's the trouble in that club of yours?

Jess—Oh, half the members are afraid our President will get discouraged and resign.

Tess—And how about the other half?

Jess—They're afraid she won't.—Philadelphia Press.

SOMETHING WORTH WHILE.

"Did you ever read that magazine poem which begs the fates to 'give us yesterday'?" asked the Long-haired Person. "It was sublime."

"No," answered the Short-haired Man, "But if any of those fellows write anything about 'Give us Payday,' I'll take a look at it."—Baltimore American.

VALUE RECEIVED.

"Remember," said the friend, "it is dangerous to try to deceive the people. You cannot get something for nothing."

"I know that perfectly well," answered Senator Sorghum rather indignantly. "Nobody can accuse me of trying to get votes by making speeches instead of producing cash."

SELF-CONCENTRATION.

"King Lear is a great character," remarked a friend.

"Yes," answered Mr. Stormington Barnes; "I suppose you remember my performance last season?"

"No, I must confess I have never seen you in the part."

"Indeed!" was the rejoinder in a tone of gentle surprise. "Then how on earth did you know it was a great character?"

SECOND EDITION.

THE Grand Jury filed their final report at 3 p.m. Thursday.

REPORT OF GRAND JURY.

To Hon. N. D. Denson,

Judge of the Fifth Judicial Circuit:

We, the Grand Jury, empanelled and charged by your Honor, for the Fall Term of the circuit court of Chilton county, beg leave to submit this our final report.

As a result of our labors, having enquired into 64 alleged violations of our laws, we have brought into your Honor's court 26 indictments.

Our investigations show that the county poor are well cared for, and that the public roads of the county are in fairly good condition.

The books and bonds of our county officers, as far as we have been able to ascertain from a limited examination, we find correctly kept and solvent.

Our county finances we find in good condition, and the statement submitted to us by the County Treasurer and attached hereto, and marked "Exhibit A" shows cash on hand of the General Fund $626.38, and the Fine and Forfeiture Fund, $192.68.

The county jail we find in fairly good condition. We hereby admonish the Sheriff to use added care and diligence in preventing the escape of prisoners from the custody of the law.

We desire to impress upon our county Tax Assessor the necessity of complying strictly with the law in the discharge of his official duty, and especially in the administering of the oaths required by law.

We desire to thank your honor for the able charge defining our duties, and to our Solicitor, Hon. S. L. Brewers, for his courteous assistance.

Having completed our duties we now ask to be discharged.

Respectfully submitted,
C. J. STEWART, Foreman.

THANKSGIVING DAY to-day.

THE Governor has issued a proclamation declaring the new constitution has been ratified by the people, and it becomes operative from to-day.

THIS term of circuit court is held under two constitutions. The first, or civil docket, is under the old constitution, the second, or criminal week, comes under the new.

A large number of democrats who oppose the new constitution met at Birmingham Tuesday and decided to continue a vigorous fight against the new instrument inside the democratic party. Probate Judge Mitchell, of Lauderdale, was made chairman. About one hundred prominent anti-ratifiers were in attendance. The following resolutions were adopted:

"First, the securing of the right of suffrage to all white men under the permanent as well as the temporary plan.

"Second, the securing of honest and fair primaries and elections, and putting an end to the shameless frauds which are now defeating the will of the white voters and disgracing our commonwealth.

"Third, the securing of such amendments as will strike out the odious and undemocratic features of the constitution defeated at the polls but proclaimed as ratified as will make it fair and just and secure to every white man equal rights and representation.

"Fourth, to secure the nomination of state officers, general senators and representatives by a primary election at which each candidate shall equal representation.

"Fifth, that these reforms can be secured by an active and aggressive organization within the democratic party only."

CIRCUIT COURT.

The fall term of Circuit Court convened on Monday morning, Judge N. D. Denson presiding.

After the preliminaries were all arranged the Judge made a very clear and impressive charge to the Grand Jury, who then retired. At the time of our going to press court is still in session. The Grand Jury has returned some sixteen true bills, and will probably adjourn this afternoon.

The following juries were empanelled:

Getting Thin

is all right, if you are too fat; and all wrong, if too thin already.

Fat, enough for your habit, is healthy; a little more, or less, is no great harm. Too fat, consult a doctor; too thin, persistently thin, no matter what cause, take Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil.

There are many causes of getting too thin; they all come under these two heads: over-work and under-digestion.

Stop over-work, if you can; but, whether you can or not, take Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil, to balance yourself with your work. You can't live on it—true—but, by it, you can. There's a limit, however, you'll pay for it

Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil is the readiest cure for "can't eat," unless it comes of your doing no work—you can't long be well and strong, without some sort of activity.

The genuine has this picture on it, take no other.

If you have not tried it, send for free sample, its agreeable taste will surprise you.

Farmer's Mutual Insurance Association.

A special meeting of the Chilton County branch of the Farmer's Mutual Insurance Association of Alabama was held in Clanton on Saturday, November 23rd, 1901. The meeting was called to order by County President N. J. Calloway, who stated that the business before the members present, was to reconsider the action taken at the meeting on the 3rd of last August in amending and adding to the constitution and by-laws of the county Association. President Calloway stated that he had received letters from State Agent, W. R. Greene and State President, W. A. Clyde, which had convinced him that the action of the county Association in August 3rd was illegal and in conflict with the Constitution of the State Association. Secretary and Treasurer P. D. Wilson, then read a commission from State Agent W. R. Greene, appointing Wallace C. Edler of Clanton, assistant general agent in charge of Chilton and other counties. After some little discussion by several of the members, it was moved and seconded; That all of the business passed on August 3rd be declared null and void, except the election of county President N. J. Calloway, Sec and Treas. P. D. Wilson and nine beat directors.

The vote was taken on above resolutions, and President Calloway declared it carried. As a result of this action Wallace C. Edler, is now to be recognized as the regularly authorized and lawful agent in Chilton County. No other business being before the meeting, it then adjourned.

All Doctors have tried to cure CATARRH by the use of powders, acid gases, inhalers and drugs in paste form. Their powders dry up the mucous membranes causing them to crack open and bleed. The powerful acids used in the inhalers have entirely eaten away the same membranes that their makers have aimed to cure, while pastes and ointments cannot reach the disease. An old and experienced practitioner who has for many years made a close study and specialty of the treatment of CATARRH, has at last perfected a Treatment which when faithfully used, not only relieves at once, but permanently cures CATARRH, by removing the cause, stopping the discharges, and curing all inflammation. It is the only remedy known to science that actually reaches the affected parts. This wonderful remedy is known as "SNUFFLES" the GUARANTEED CATARRH CURE and is sold at the extremely low price of One Dollar, each package containing internal and external medicine sufficient for a full month's treatment and everything necessary to its perfect use

"SNUFFLES" is the only perfect CATARRH CURE ever made and is now recognized as the only safe and positive cure for that annoying and disgusting disease. It cures all inflammation quickly and permanently and is also wonderfully quick to relieve HAY FEVER or COLD in the HEAD.

CATARRH when neglected often leads to CONSUMPTION—"SNUFFLES" will save you if you use it at once. It is no ordinary remedy, but a complete treatment which is positively guaranteed to cure CATARRH in any form or stage if used according to the directions which accompany each package. Don't delay but send for it at once, and write full particulars as to your condition, and you will receive special advice from the discoverer of this wonderful remedy regarding your case without cost to you beyond the regular price of "SNUFFLES" the "GUARANTEED CATARRH CURE"

F. A. WERMAN, OF BALTIMORE, SAYS:
BALTIMORE, Md., March 30, 1901.
Gentlemen:—Being entirely cured of deafness, thanks to your treatment, I will now give you a full history of my case, to be used at your discretion.
About five years ago my right ear began to sing, and this kept on getting worse, until I lost my hearing in this ear entirely.
I underwent a treatment for catarrh, for three months, without any success, consulted a number of physicians, among others, the most eminent ear specialist of this city, who told me that only an operation could help me, and even that only memorially, that the head noises would then cease, but the hearing in the affected ear would be lost forever.
Then saw your advertisement accidentally in a New York paper, and ordered your treatment. After I had used it only a few days according to your directions, the noises ceased, and to-day, after five weeks, my hearing in the diseased ear has been entirely restored. I thank you heartily and beg to remain Very truly yours,

THE HOME GOLD CURE.
An Ingenious Treatment by which Drunkards are Being Cured Daily in Spite of Themselves.
No Nauseous Dose, No Weakening of the Nerves. A Pleasant and Positive Cure for the Liquor Habit.
It is now generally known and understood that drunkenness is a disease and not weakness. A body filled with poison, and nerves completely shattered by periodical or constant use of intoxicating liquors, requires an antidote capable of neutralizing and eradicating this poison, and destroying the craving for intoxicants. Sufferers may now cure themselves at home without publicity or loss of time from business by this wonderful "HOME GOLD CURE" which has been perfected after many years of close study and treatment of inebriates. The faithful use according to directions of this wonderful discovery is positively guaranteed to cure the most obstinate case, no matter how hard a drinker. Our records show the marvelous transformation of thousands of Drunkards into sober, industrious and upright men.
WIVES CURE YOUR HUSBANDS!! CHILDREN CURE YOUR FATHERS!! this remedy is in no sense a nostrum but is a specific for this disease only, and is so skillfully devised and prepared that it is thoroughly soluble and pleasant to the taste, so that it can be given in a cup of tea or coffee without the knowledge of the person taking it. Thousands of Drunkards have cured themselves with this priceless remedy, and as many more have been cured and made temperate men by having the "CURE" administered by loving friends and relatives without their knowledge in coffee or tea, and believe today that they discontinued drinking of their own free will. DO NOT WAIT. Do not be deluded by apparent and misleading "improvement." Drive out the disease at once and for all time. The "HOME GOLD CURE" is sold at the extremely low price of One Dollar, thus placing within reach of every body a treatment more effectual than others costing $25 to $50. Full directions accompany each package. Special advice by skilled physicians when requested without extra charge. Sent prepaid to any part of the world on receipt of One Dollar. Address Dept. C 935, EDWIN B. GILES & COMPANY, 2330 and 2332 Market Street, Philadelphia.
All correspondence strictly confidential.

HOUSEWORK
Too much housework wrecks women's nerves. And the constant care of children, day and night, is often too trying for even a strong woman. A haggard face tells the story of the overworked housewife and mother. Deranged menses, leucorrhœa and falling of the womb result from overwork. Every housewife needs a remedy to regulate her menses and to keep her sensitive female organs in perfect condition.
WINE OF CARDUI
is doing this for thousands of American women to-day. It cured Mrs. Jones and that is why she writes this frank letter:
Glendenne, Ky., Feb. 19, 1901.
I am so glad that your Wine of Cardui is helping me. I am feeling better than I have felt for years. I am doing my own work without any help, and I washed last week and was not one bit tired. That shows what the Wine is doing for me. I am getting fleshier than I ever was before, and sleep good and eat heartily. Before I began taking Wine of Cardui, I used to have to lay down about four times every day, but now I do not think of lying down through the day. MRS. RICHARD JONES.

BILL ARP'S LETTER.

As Age Advances Darkness of Night Grows More Unwelcome.

TWILIGHT HAS LOST ALL ITS CHARM.

As Symbol of Evil the Night Is Given as a Contrast to that Which is Good—William Quotes Extensively.

I confess that I do not like the night—except when I am asleep. Of course I mean the dark night—nor do I go into raptures over what we call the twilight—that doubtful light twixt sunshine and darkness, and that literally means "light cut in two." It seems to me that these twilights grow shorter as we grow older. When the day is done the darkness does seem to fall from the wings of night, and we hasten to light the lamps, for darkness is never welcome. It is an intruder and a symbol of every evil thing. We suppose that night was created as a contrast to make us enjoy the day, just as evil was created as a contrast to that which is good. The scriptures say no good thing concerning darkness or night and when describing heaven say, "There shall be no night there." They tell us of outer darkness and thick darkness and the blackness of darkness and darkness that may be felt. Darkness was one of the ten plagues that was sent upon Pharaoh. Job cursed the day of his birth and says, "Let the day be darkness. Let the darkness and the shadow of death stain it." David saith, "Sorrow endureth for the night, but joy cometh in the morning," and tells of the pestilence that walketh in darkness. The apostles use it as a symbol of every calamity. Darkness covered the land when the Savior was crucified. The devil is called the prince of darkness. Ancient mythology describes Erebus as the dark cavern through which the spirits of the damned and wicked dead shall pass on their way to hell. And Homer writes of a country called Cimmeria afar beyond the sea where the sun never shines and the people live in darkness. Milton describes the darkness of Hades as so dense that it was visible. Speaking of evil spirits that haunt mankind, he says they move in darkness, but fear truth and chastity. "No evil thing that walks by night in fog or fire—no hag, or ghost, or goblin damned has hurtful power over a chaste and virtuous woman." Montgomery says, "Night is the time to weep. And Shakespeare says, "In the dark night, imagining some fear, a little bush appears to be a bear." Young says, "An atheist half believes in God by night," and Tennyson says of himself, "I am but an infant crying in the night—an infant crying for the light." But this is enough, and these ruminations were provoked last night about midnight—the hour when the deep sleep falleth upon a man, but not upon a woman. My wife's voice awakened and startled me. She said, "What is it? Who is it? What do you want?" Then she called me and struck a match and lighted the candle that was near. "What did you hear?" said I. "Somebody is at the door," she said, excitedly. "Which door?" said I. "This one right here—maybe somebody I sick upstairs," she said. Unlocking the door quickly, the light shone into the room, but nobody was visible. I examined the room carefully and then went into the hall and dining room and parlor and thence upstairs on tiptoe, but all was silent. When I returned she said, "Well, I did certainly hear somebody at that door, and it waked me, but maybe I was dreaming. I remember now, I did have a troubled dream, but please look under the bed before you put out the light." Such is conjugal life and felicity. For some time I laid awake listening for a noise and ruminating on human helplessness during the darkness of the night.

I remember when I had an unwilling fear of ghosts that I would not acknowledge. I got it from the awful stories that our negroes told to us children, for there was a fascination about them that drew me to their cabins by night, and I listened to their made-up tales of ghosts and witches and Jack O'Lanterns and raw head and bloody bones until I was afraid to look around behind me, and had to be guarded to the big house door when I left. But this childish fear passed away, and long since I have realized that there are no spirits to haunt us, and that "only man is vile."

My wife is not a timid woman, but she is cautious, and will not consent for me to keep a pistol in our bedroom for fear I might have a bad dream and shoot somebody through mistake. She never sleeps very sound. A mother who has nursed ten children never does, and the cracking of the paper on the wall will arouse her. She is happy now, for there is another grandchild not far away, and she goes there every day. Pretends she goes to help Jessie, but it is really to nurse and fondle Jessie's baby boy, for the maternal instinct never dies, and she has not forgotten the lullabies she sang to her children in their infancy. I remember how my aged mother, when on her last bed, dreamed away her loving life imagining there was a babe at her breast and whispering a song to it just before she died. She found two in heaven when she got there. Oh, ye young men who linger and jest in the saloon or around the gaming tables or frequent disreputable places, stop and think. Stop and think and remember the long and weary nights that a mother watched with you and never complained. Maybe her spirit is watching you now and yearning over you in the spirit land. For her sake stop and think and come back to the innocence of your childhood.

And there are some little songs that I, too, remember and can still sing to the little helpless teething things and soothe them to sleep as I walk the room. My little baby songs are stereotyped in my memory and have been handed down, tho' not published or copyrighted. They are a masculine medley of "By, baby bunting," "Hush, my dear; lie still and slumber," "Juliana Johnson, don't you cry," "Away down in Shinbone alley, "And we'll pass over the Jordan, and so forth. They are all in the same key and in the same meter and dovetail into one another and just go round and round, monotonous and mournful, until the child has to go to sleep to keep from hearing them; nevertheless, it is a fact that I can get a sick child to sleep when its mother can't—and sometimes away in the dead of night, as I walked the room in my night shirt, I have not only got the child to sleep, but the mother, too.

But I am having some little domestic troubles that are disturbing my tranquility. Night before last I slipped the keys off the nail in the back room and went to the pantry to get some nice apples I had hid away there for a surprise to the family just before bedtime. I like these little surprises and so do they. I found the cat locked up in the pantry and put her out, and then pushed the door to keep her out while I was getting the apples. It is a curious door lock, for it has no knob on the inside, and I soon found that the cat was locked out and I was locked in. I rapped and banged for awhile for somebody to hear me and come, but nobody came. Then I knocked harder and hallooed louder, but to no effect. Then I kicked the door and made all sorts of a racket, but nobody came. So I concluded they heard me, but thought it was good fun to keep me in prison and give me time to reflect on my past life and the value of freedom in this land of liberty. But I didn't ponder long on those things. I was perplexed, but, after awhile thought of my knife as a screw driver and soon had the hasp off and was out of prison. "Didn't you hear me? I inquired. "Yes, we heard you knocking. What were you doing out there?" said my wife. They thought I was fixing or mending something, and did not hear my voice, for there were two rooms and a hall between us and all the doors shut. I distributed the apples and everything was soon calm and serene, but I have an increased horror of being put in jail and I am going to behave myself and keep out.

Monday night we heard Mrs. Sheridan sing, and it was a feast. We have known her from her childhood, when she wore pantaletts and pinafores and went to school in Rome with my children. I could not realize that this was or ever had been little Sarah McDonald who used to play and romp and scream like other children; but in her youth she heard a prima donna sing, and resolved to be a great singer, too. The Scotch-Irish blood was in her veins and she succeeded. Her father and mother were poor, but that made no difference. They had faith—religious faith; Bible faith—and named their four boys Matthew, Mark, Luke and John, and their three daughters, Mary, Martha and Sarah. Mark and Luke are living in Rome yet and have prospered. Sarah chanced to visit Philadelphia some years ago and by request sang one Sabbath at a little mission church that was founded by John Wannamaker. He was there and heard her and took a great liking to her and helped her to visit Europe to have her voice trained. She soon found other friends, who have befriended her and lavished upon her their aid and blessing.

As I listened to her singing those sweet old Scottish songs I wondered if there were not many just such female voices in that audience and all they lacked was culture and determination. I recalled Gray's beautiful lines—

"Full many a gem of purest ray serene
The dark, unfathomed caves of ocean bear;
Full many a flower is born to blush unseen
And waste its sweetness on the desert air.

—Bill Arp, in Atlanta Constitution.

To Peterboro, N. H., belongs the distinction of establishing the first free public library in the world. It was incorporated in December, 1799. Although other towns had accepted gifts of libraries, and there have been in Europe for three hundred years or more municipal libraries, Peterboro was the first place to vote money for the formation and support of a free town library. Its first catalogue, issued in 1834, consisted largely of religious works, but there was a fair showing of works on travel and a respectable representation of fiction both as to quality and quantity.

In the sixteenth century the average of human life was eighteen and twenty years. At the close of the eighteenth century it was a little over thirty, while now it is over forty years, thus showing that within 300 years the average has been doubled.

KILLED IN ATHENS RIOTS

An Attempt Made to Assassinate the Greek Premier.

University Students Precipitate the Trouble—Disorders Due to a Proposed Gospel Translation.

Athens, Greece.—A remarkable politico-religious agitation has kept this city for days past in a state of excitement which has resulted in serious rioting and loss of life. The ostensible cause of the trouble is the opposition of the university students and others to the proposal to translate the Gospels into modern Greek and authorize such new version for general use. There is, however, a considerable political element in the movement, involving popular hostility to Slav influences.

In the view of those who oppose the translation Russia is working through Queen Olga against Greek national ideas and the members of the royal family, as well as the Government, are objects of their indignation. The governmental newspapers Akropolis and Asty, which support the translation proposal, also share in this hostility.

The demonstrations have been growing in violence daily, and in the course of rioting about twenty cavalrymen and a few civilians were wounded. The following day the students organized a meeting at the ruins of the Temple of Zeus and about 20,000 persons attended. The Government had supplemented the police with a large force of troops. Disturbances soon began and revolvers were freely used. In the melee seven persons were killed and thirty wounded and many persons suffered minor injuries.

Some of the rioters who recognized Premier Theotokis in the street tried to assassinate him. Several revolver shots were fired at M. Theotokis, but he escaped unharmed. The Prefect of Police and the Prefect of Athens were among the slightly injured.

Strong guards have been posted at the Palace and the residence of the Premier, and also at the offices of the Akropolis and Asty. The students hold the university as their headquarters and have adopted military discipline.

FANCY PRICES FOR MEAT CATTLE

Beef on the Hoof Sells For 21 1-2 Cents a Pound at Pittsburg.

Pittsburg, Penn.—The third annual and most successful fat stock show ever held in Pittsburg, closed with a banquet to the visiting shippers, breeders and dealers. At the auction sale of the prize winners and other cattle, all price records were broken for beef on the hoof.

Charles Escher's load of first prize winners, after spirited bidding finally sold for twenty-one and one-half cents per pound, said to be the highest price ever paid for a car load of meat cattle. The big steer, weighing 2190 pounds, raised by A. D. Bassel, of Lost Creek, W. Va., was sold for $4280.

LYNCH ELECTED AN M. P.

Fought For Boers and Will Be Arrested if He Appears in Commons.

Dublin, Ireland.—Colonel Lynch has been elected to Parliament in the voting in Galway. Lynch formerly commanded a force in the Boer army, and it is said that if he appears to take his seat he will be arrested and sent to South Africa to stand trial for treason.

The result of the election was: Lynch, 1247; Plunkett, 473.

In the event of Colonel Lynch's election being quashed on the ground that he is a traitor, Mr. Plunkett says he will decline to take the seat thus reverting to him. Lynch's friends seem satisfied he will attempt to take his seat.

GATHMANN GUN TEST ABANDONED

Board Thinks It Not Worth While to Try Any More.

New York City.—The Army and Navy officers detailed to report on the performances of the Gathmann gun have concluded to abandon any further test, after witnessing the effect of a regular service shell charged with twenty pounds of maximite.

The latter was discharged from the regular twelve-inch rifle with a reduced charge of smokeless powder, at a distance representing four miles. The service shell, with a muzzle velocity of 1800 feet a second, struck the target and shattered it to fragments.

BOSTON BANKS MERGED.

The Shawmut Absorbs the Commonwealth; Combined Capital $4,000,000.

Boston. — The National Shawmut Bank has purchased two-thirds of the stock of the National Bank of the Commonwealth and the two institutions will be consolidated at once.

The capital stock of the National Shawmut Bank is $3,000,000; that of the Commonwealth Bank $1,000,000. The aggregate deposits are nearly $50,000,000.

It is understood that a consolidation of banking interests by which the Shawmut will have a rival is contemplated. The new combination, it is said, will include eleven national banks.

REV. DR. TALMAGE.

DISCOURSE BY THE EMINENT DIVINE LAST SUNDAY.

Subject: The Power of Hope—No Better Medicine Did a Man Ever Take—Forgive the Repentant—The Perfect Life to Come—Cultivate Hope.

[Copyright, 1901.]

WASHINGTON, D. C.—In this discourse Dr. Talmage would lift people out of despondency and bring something of future joy into earthly depression. The text is Hebrews vi, 19, "Which hope."

There is an Atlantic Ocean of depth and fullness in the verse from which my text is taken, and I only wade into the wave at the beach and take two words. We have all favorite words expressive of delight or abhorrence, words that easily find their way from brain to lip, words that have in them mornings and midnights, laughter and tears, thunderbolts and dewdrops. In all the lexicons and vocabularies there are few words that have for me the attractions of the last word of my text, "Which hope."

There have in the course of our life been many good angels of God that have looked over our shoulders, or met us on the road, or cloanted the darkness away, or lifted the curtains of the great future, or pulled us back from the precipices, or rolled down upon us the rapturous music of the heavens, but there is one of these angels that has done so much for us that we wish throughout all time and eternity to celebrate it—the angel of Hope. St. Paul makes it the center of a group of three, saying, "Now abideth faith, hope, charity." And, though he says that charity is the greatest of the three, he does not take one plume from the wing, or one ray of luster from the brow, or one aurora from the cheek, or one melody from from the voice of the angel of my text, "Which hope."

That was a great night for our world when in a Bethlehem caravansary the Infant Royal was born, and that will be a great night in the darkness of your soul when Christian hope is born. There will be chanting in the skies and a star pointing to the Nativity. I will not bother you with the husk of a definition and tell you what hope is. When we sit down hungry at a table, we do not want an analytical discourse as to what bread is. Hand it on; pass it round; give us a slice of it. John speaks of hope as a "pure hope;" Peter calls it a "lively hope;" Paul styles it a "good hope," a "sure hope," a "rejoicing hope." And all up and down the Bible it is spoken of as an anchor, as a harbor, as a helmet, as a door.

When we draw a check on a bank, we must have reference to the amount of money we have deposited, but Hope makes a draft on a bank in which for her benefit all heaven has been deposited. Hope! May it light up every dungeon, stand by every sickbed, lend a helping hand to every orphanage, loosen every chain, caress every forlorn soul and turn the unpictured room of the almshouse into the vestibule of heaven! How suggestive that mythology declares that when all other deities fled the goddess of Hope remained!

It was hope that revived John Knox when on shipboard near the coast of Scotland he was fearfully ill, and he was requested to look shoreward and asked if he knew the village near the coast, and he answered: "I know it well, for I see the steeple of that place where God first opened my mouth in public to His glory, and I am fully persuaded how weak that ever I now appear I shall not depart this life till I shall glorify His holy name in the same place." His hope was rewarded, and for twenty-five years more he preached. That is the hope which sustained Mr. Morrell of Norwich when departing this life at twenty-four years of age he declared, "I should like to understand the secrets of eternity before tomorrow morning." That was the kind of hope that the corporal had in the battle when, after several standard bearers had fallen, and turned to a lieutenant-colonel and said, "If I fall, tell my dear wife that I die with a good hope in Christ and that I am glad to give my life for my country." That was the good hope that Dr. Goodwin had in his last hour when he said: "Ah, is this death? How have I dreaded as an enemy this smiling friend!"

No better medicine did a man ever take than hope. It is a stimulant, a febrifuge, a tonic, a catholicon. Thousands of people long ago departed this life would have been living to-day but for the reason they let hope slip their grasp. I have known people to live on hope after one lung was gone and disease had seemed to lay hold of every nerve and muscle and artery and bone.

Alexander the Great, starting for the wars in Persia, divided his property among the Macedonians. He gave a village to one, a port to another, a field to another and all his estate to his friends. Then Perdiccas asked, "What have you kept for yourself?" He answered triumphantly, "Hope."

And, whatever else you and I give away, we must keep for ourselves hope—all comforting, all cheering hope. In the heart of every man, woman and child that hears or reads this sermon may God implant this principle right now!

Many have full assurance that all is right with the soul. They are as sure of heaven as if they had passed the pearly panels of the gate, as though they were already seated in the temple of God unrolling the libretto of the heavenly chorister. I congratulate all such. I wish I had it, too—full assurance—but with me it is hope. "Which hope." Sinful, it expects forgiveness; troubled, it expects relief; bereft, it expects reunion; clear down, it expects wings to lift; shipwrecked, it expects lifeboat; bankrupt, it expects eternal riches; a prodigal, it expects the wide open door of the father's farmhouse. It does not wear itself out by looking backward; it always looks forward. What is the use of giving so much time to the rehearsal of the past? Your mistakes are not corrected by a review. Your losses cannot, by brooding over them, be turned into gains. It is the future that has the most for us, and hope cheers us on. We have all committed blunders, but does the calling of the roll of them make them any the less blunders? Look ahead in all matters of usefulness. However much you may have accomplished for God and the world's betterment your greatest usefulness is to come. "No," says some one, "my money is gone." "No," says some one, "the most of my years are gone and therefore my usefulness." Why, you talk like an infidel. Do you suppose that all your capacity to do good is fenced in by this life? Are you going to be a lounger and a do nothing after you have quit this world?

It is my business to tell you that your faculties are to be enlarged and intensified and your qualifications for usefulness multiplied tenfold, a hundredfold, a thousandfold.

Is your health gone? Then that is a sign that you are to enjoy a celestial health compared with which the most jocund and hilarious vitality of earth is invalidism. Are your fortunes spent? Remember, you are to be kings and queens unto God. And how much more wealth you will have when you reign forever and ever! I want to see you when you get your heavenly work dress on. This little bit of a speck of a world we call the earth is only the place where we get ready to work. We are only journeymen here, but will be master workmen there. Heaven will have no loafers hanging around. The book says of the inhabitants, "They rest not day nor night." Why rest when they work without fatigue? Why seek a pillow when there is no sight there? I want to see you after the pedestrianism of earth has been exchanged for power of flight and velocities infinite and enterprises interstellar, interworld.

I suspect that the telescope of that observatory brings in sight constellations that may comprise ruined worlds which need looking after and need help saintly and missionary. There may be worlds that, like ours, have sinned and need to be rescued, perhaps saved by our Christ or by some plan that God has thought out for other worlds as wise, as potent, as lovely as the atonement is for our world.

The laziness which has cursed us in this world will not gain the land of eternal activities—so much tonic in the air, so much inspiration in the society, so much achievement after we get the shackles of the flesh forever off. Do not dwell so much on opportunities past, but put your emphasis on opportunities to come.

Am I not right in saying that eternity can do more for us than can time? What will we not be able to do when our powers of locomotion shall be quickened into the immortal spirit's speed? Why should a bird have a swiftness of wing when it is of no importance how long it shall take to make its aerial way from forest to forest and we, who have so much nobler important errand in the world, get on so slowly? The roebuck outruns us, the hounds are quicker in the chase, but wait until God lets us loose from all limitations and hinderments. Then we will fairly begin. The starting post will be the tombstone. Leaving the world will be graduation day before the chief work of our mental and spiritual career. Hope sees the doors opening, the victor's foot in stirrup for the mounting. The day breaks—first flush of the horizon. The mission of hope will be an everlasting mission, as much of it in the heavenly hereafter as in the earthly now. Shall we have gained all as soon as we enter realms celestial—nothing more to learn, no other heights to climb, no new anthems to raise, a monotony of existence, the same thing over and over again for endless years? No! More progress in that world than we ever made in this.

Hope will stand on the hills of heaven and look for ever brightening landscapes, other transfigurations of color, new glories rolling over the scene, new celebration of victories in other worlds, heaven rising into grander heavens, seas of glass mingled with fire, becoming a more brilliant glass mingling with a more flaming fire. "Which hope."

Hope on, and, though you may never hear of your son's reformation and others may think he has left this life hopeless, who knows but that in the last moment, after he has ceased to speak and before his soul launches away, your prayer may have been answered and he be one of the first to meet you at the shining gate. The prodigal in the parable got home and sat down at the feast, while the elder brother, who never left the old place, stood pouting at the back door and did not go in at all.

To another class of persons I introduce the angel of hope, and they are the invalids. I cannot take the diagnosis of your disorder, but let hope cheer you with one of two thoughts. Such marvelous cures are being wrought in our day through medication and surgery that your invalidism may yet be mastered.

Persons as ill as you have got well. Cancer and tuberculosis will yet give way before some new discovery. I see every day people strong and well who not long ago I saw pallid and leaning heavily on a staff and hardly able to climb stairs.

But if you will not take the hand of hope for earthly convalescence let me point you to the perfect body you are yet to have if you love and serve the Lord. Death will put a prolonged anaesthetic upon your present body, and you will never again feel an ache or pain, and then in His good time you will have a resurrection body, about which we know nothing expect that it will be painless and glorious beyond all present appreciation. What must be the health of that land which never feels cut of cold or blast of heat, and where there is no east wind sowing pneumonias on the air, your fleetness greater than the foot of deer, your eyesight clearer than eagle in sky, perfect health, in a country where all the inhabitants are everlastingly well!

You who have in your body an encysted bullet ever since the Civil War; you who have kept alive only by precautions and self denials and perpetual watching of pulse and lung; you of the deafened ear and dim vision and the severe backache; you who have not been free from pain for ten years, how do you like this story of physical reconstruction, with all weakness and suffering subtracted and everything jocund and bounding added?

Do not have anything to do with the gloom that Harriet Martineau expressed in her dying words: "I have no reason to believe in another world. I have had enough of life in one and can see no good reason why Harriet Martineau should be perpetuated." Would you not rather have the Christian enthusiasm of Robert Annan, who when some one said, "I will be satisfied if I manage somehow to get into heaven," replied, pointing to a sunken vessel that was being dragged up the River Tay: "Would you like to be pulled into heaven with two tugs like that vessel yonder? I tell you I would like to go in with all my sails set and colors flying."

Again, let me introduce the element of hope to those good people who are in despair about the world's moral condition. They have gathered up appalling statistics. They tell of the number of divorces, but do not take into consideration that there are a thousand happy homes where there is one of marital discord.

They tell you of the large number in our land who are living profligate lives, but forget to mention that there are many millions of men and women who are doing the best they can.

They tell you the number of drunkeries in this country, but fail to mention the thousands of glorious churches with two doors—one door open for all who will enter for pardon and consolation, and the other door opening into the heavens for the ascent of souls prepared for translation.

From this hour cultivate hope. Do so by reading all the Scriptural promises of the world's coming Edenization, and doubt if you dare the veracity of the Almighty when He says He will make the desert roseate, and the leopard and kid will lie down in the same pasture field, and the lion, ceasing to be carnivorous, will become graminivorous, eating "straw like an ox," and reptilian venom shall change into harmlessness, so that the "weaned child shall put his hand on the cockatrice's den, and there shall be nothing to hurt or destroy in all God's holy mountain, for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea." So much for the world at large.

Then cultivate hope in regard to your own health, your own financial prosperity, your own longevity, by seeing how in other people God mercifully reverses things and brings to pass the unexpected, remembering that Washington lost more battles than he gained, but triumphed at the last, and, further, by making sure of your eternal safety through Christ Jesus, understand that you are on the way to palaces and thrones. This life a span long, ending in durations of bliss that neither human nor archangelic faculties can measure or estimate—redolence of a springtime that never ends and fountains tossing in the light of a sun that never sets. May God thrill us with anticipation of this immortal glee! "Which hope."

I said in the opening of this subject that my text was only the wave on the beach, while the whole verse from which it is taken is an ocean. But the ocean tides are coming in, and the sea is getting so deep I must fall back, wading out as I waded in, for what mortal can stand before the mighty surges of the full tide of eternal gladness? "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard; neither hath entered into the heart of man the things which God hath prepared for them that love him."

THE SABBATH

INTERNATIONAL LESSON FOR DECEMBER

Subject: The Call of Moses—Golden Text: Ex. iii, 10—Verses, 9-12—Commentary on Lesson.

Introduction—The life of Moses divided into three periods of forty each. 1. He was in Egypt during which time he was in his own home, and afterward household of Pharaoh. 2. He in Midian forty years, caring for flocks of his father-in-law, in the wilderness where he was to lead the children of Israel. 3. The last forty years of his life were spent in preparing for his life work, which was the deliverance of Israel. For forty years the people of God in bondage, as they journeyed towards Canaan.

1. "Priest of Midian." Or, priest and prince. The word has both meanings. "He led the flock beyond the desert, and came to the mountain of God, Horeb." About forty years Moses had been living as a shepherd, caring for the flocks of his father-in-law. "Back of the desert" (R. V.). During all this time he had been holding communion with God, and was being prepared for his work. But think of a man with such talents and ability such as Moses had, shut down for forty years with a few sheep. Yet this was evidently God's way. Our wanderings would many times be more acquainted with the whole matter if we could see how this would be of great importance when he came to lead his people from Egypt. "Mountain of God" is sometimes named Horeb in other places. It was called the mountain of God because God appeared upon it to Moses.

2. "Angel of the Lord." Not a created angel for he is called Jehovah in vs. 4, 6. This was none other than Christ, the Redeemer of mankind. "In a flame of fire." Representing the holiness, purity and power and energy of God. He was about to bring destruction on his enemies, and light and comfort to his people. "The bush burned." Its emblem it instructs us. As it astonishes. 3. As a magnet it attracts. 4. As a monitor it warns. This is the emblem of the state of the bush in their distress. 2. Of the state of the church in the world. 3. Of the state of every true Christian. "Not consumed." Showing that this was fire from God. 3. "Why the bush is not burned." If possible to see the cause of this strange appearance. God will reveal to souls all they need to know when they are able to follow and obey Him.

4. "God called unto of the bush." Flame is the best symbol of God. It is immaterial. 2. It is glorious. It is mysterious in its nature. 3. It is everywhere—omnipresent. 4. It enlightens the world. 5. It is the emblem of life, beauty and power. 6. It is undefiled and undefilable. 7. It purifies. 8. It is terrible as a destroyer. 9. It is warming, cheering and inviting. "And said Moses." Moses was thus addressed by name and was more surprised by what he heard than what he saw.

5. "Put off thy shoes." Put off the sandals is a very ancient form of worship. The rabbins say that priests perform their service with bare feet as a token of purity and reverence. The Mohammedans, Brahmins and Parsees worship barefooted to the present. "This was required of Moses as a sign of his reverence for God, of his humiliation for his sins, of his putting away impurity in his life and of his submission and readiness to obey God's will."

6. "I am the God." God does not say I "was" the God of my fathers but I "am" their God. The patriarchs were still living, for God is not the God of the dead but of the living. Matt. xxii, 32. "Afraid to look." He was afraid in God's presence.

7. "Seen the affliction." God says I have considered their affliction, their oppressed state, their sorrows, their sighs, their heavy burdens, I come in review before Him. He counts the sighs of His people and puts their tears into His bottle.

8. "Am come down." When something very extraordinary was said to "come down" to do it. Gen. xxxviii, 7; Ex. xix, 11. So Christ came down from heaven to save fallen man. "And a land flowing with milk and honey." God promised to bring his people out of Egypt, with its misery and impurity, into a good land, a land of good things. The milk and honey are typical of the richness and fullness of God's grace.

9. "The cry—is come unto me." God had not come down to see the miseries and subjects of His promise were in a condition as to merit His salvation, nor was He attracted by their prayers or their virtues; but it was the cry of Him that they needed the grace and assurance that He was able to give them.

10. "I will send thee." Many years before this Moses had been called to deliver his people in his own strength. Now he is taught by his own strength. Now he is taught the other lessons God would teach him and his time had come. There is a difference between God using a man and a man running against God.

11. "Who am I." Moses was not prepared for his work of leadership; eminent for learning, for experience, and yet he says, "Who am I?" The better prepared any one is for service, the less common he has for saying, "That I should go." Doubtless he was affected by the remembrance of his former failure. The work to be done was great and dangerous. 1. He was to be in danger. 2. What could he do to influence a king? It was not likely that the Egyptian would give up 2,000,000 people who were doing their work without compensation. He was to organize and discipline such a band of untrained men would require patience and ability. 4. It was difficult to induce the Israelites to follow and leave Egypt for an unknown country.

12. "Will be with thee." "I will be with you, and I will direct thee, and I will bring all these mighty things to pass." "Upon this mountain." God promised that in their return from Egypt they would stop at this mountain on the way, and would worship God in it. This would confirm the faith of Moses in all the work of the long journey they were to follow.

It is proposed to build in Paris an hotel for unemployed women. It is hoped that the United States could never be of such a thing here.

Children's Rights.

What a child wants is a chance to grow and learn by experience his duty toward the world. Our duty to children, as wise and enlightened people, is to be consistently kind and firm, because he has sensitive nerves, just as we have; to be tender, because he is dependent; to be patient, because he partakes of our own faulty nature; and loving, because only in the atmosphere of love can goodness flourish. Above all, we should be the natural protectors of his natural rights and privileges because he is a child and cannot protect himself.—Dr. Hall Winterburn in Woman's Companion.

several years the Japanese government has been conducting experiments in tobacco culture, not only with to supplying the demand of its people, but of encouraging a profitable export trade in the article. A report on the results of these experiments has just been issued by the Japanese department of agriculture and commerce, and it records a considerable measure of success. THE SABBATH SC

INTERNATIONAL LESSON CO FOR DECEMBER 1.

Subject: The Call of Moses, Ex. 3:1-10. —Golden Text: Ex. III., 10. Verses, 9-13.—Commentary on Lesson.

Introduction—The life of Moses divided into three periods of forty each. 1. He was in Egypt during which time he was brought up in his own home, and afterwards in the school of Pharaoh. 2. He was forty years, caring for the flocks of his father-in-law, in the very prime of life, where he was to lead the children of Israel. 3. The first third of his life were only a preparation for the work which was the glory of Israel. For forty years he was a keeper of God in their wanderings. They journeyed towards Canaan. 1. Priest of Midian." Or priest and prince, "the original meanings. "Led the flock" forty years Moses had been as a shepherd, caring for the flocks of his father-in-law. "Back of the desert." (R. V.) During all this time he had been holding communion with God and was being prepared for work. But think of a man with the ability such as Moses had, hidden for forty years with a few sheep! It was evidently God's plan. Sunderings would make him thoroughly acquainted with this whole region which would be of great importance when he came to lead his people out of Egypt. "Mountain of God." Sinai was named Horeb at other times. It was called the mountain of God because God appeared upon it to Moses. "Angel of the Lord." Not an angel for he is called Jehovah in v. 6. This was none other than Christ, the Redeemer of mankind. "Flame of fire." Representing God in purity and power, and showing that it was about to bring destruction on sinners, and light and comfort to his people. "The bush burned." 1. It is emblem it instructs. 2. As a rose it astonishes. 3. As a magnet it attracts. 4. As a monitor it warns. This is an emblem of the state of the Israelites in their distress. 2. Of the state of the church in the world. 3. Of the state of every true Christian. "Not consumed." Showing that this was fire from God. "Why the bush," etc. He was desirous if possible to see the cause of this strange appearance. God will reveal to his people all they need to know in order to be able to follow and obey Him. 5. "God called out of the midst of the Flame is the best symbol of God. It is immaterial. 2. It is glorious. It is mysterious in its nature. 4. And it is everywhere—omnipresent. It enlightens the world. 6. It is a type of his beauty and power. 7. It is undefiled and undefilable, absolutely pure. 8. It is terrible as a destructive force. 9. It is warming, cheering and inspiring. "And said Moses." Moses was thus addressed by name, must have been more surprised by what he heard than by what he saw.

5. "Put off thy shoes." Putting off the sandals is a very ancient place of worship. The rabbins say that the priests perform their service with bare feet, in token of purity and reverence. Mohammedans, Brahmins and Parsees worship barefooted to the present day. "This was required of Moses as a token of his reverence for God, of his humiliation for his sins, of his putting off impurity in his life and of his entire and readiness to obey God's will." 6. "I am the God." God does not say I "was" the God of thy father, but I "am" their God. The patriarchs are still living, for God is not the God of the dead but of the living. Mark, "Afraid to look." He was overcome by God's presence.

7. "Seen the affliction." They have considered their afflictions, their oppressed state, their sorrows, their cries, their sighs, their heavy bondage, have come in review before Him; He counts the sighs of His people and their tears into His bottle.

8. "Am come down." When God does something very extraordinary he is said to "come down" to do it, as in Gen. 11:5. So Christ came down from heaven to save fallen man. "And a large land." Canaan was large compared with Egypt. "With milk and honey." God compares the people out of Egypt, with its idolatry, impurity, into a good land, full of good things. The milk and honey are typical of the richness and fullness of God's grace.

9. "The cry—is come unto me." Israel had not come down to see what were the subjects of His promise were in a condition as to merit His salvation, or was He attracted by their prayers or their virtues; but it was mercy in Him that they needed the great assurance that He was able to give.

10. "I will send thee." About 430 years before this Moses had been told to deliver his people in his own strength. Now he had learned by the other lessons God would teach him and his time had come. There is a difference between God sending Moses and a man running unsent.

11. "Who am I." Moses was well prepared for this work of any man living; eminent for learning, wisdom, experience, and yet he says, "Who am I?" The better prepared any one is for work, the less opinion he has of himself. "That I should go." Doubtless he was affected by the remembrance of his former failure. The work to be done was great and dangerous. 1. His life would be in danger. 2. What could he do? Would not likely that the Egyptians would give up 2,000,000 people who were doing their work without compensation? How to organize and discipline such a mass of untrained men would require wisdom and ability. 3. It would be difficult to induce the Israelites to follow him and leave Egypt for an unknown country.

12. "Will be with thee." "I will be with thee, and My power shall direct thee, and My wisdom shall bring all these mighty things to pass." "Upon this mountain." God knew that in their return from Egypt they would stop at this mountain on their way, and would worship God in it. This would confirm the faith of Moses in all the work of the long journey they were to follow.

DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—When life looked brightest to me I became a hopeless invalid and internal complications were the result. My ovaries were inflamed, did not feel that I could walk, and lost much flesh. I spent money doctoring without any help, when a friend recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, having used it herself, that it was the medicine for me. She was so enthusiastic over it I could not delay trying it until I sent for a bottle. I have thanked God for it since, for it brought blessed health to me in less than seven weeks.

The United States collier Brutus, which arrived at New York recently from Manila, had a homeward bound pennant all the way long.

YANKEE CAPITAL IN CANADA.

The economic development of Canada is being rapidly advanced by both native and "States" capital. A great Buffalo (N. Y.) syndicate, headed by Capt. Wolverin, is pressing a scheme to build elevators at Quebec and ship grain from the West and Northwest to Europe. Sites for the new elevators have already been practically selected, and it has been found that they could be advantageously built all along the Quebec river front for nine miles, up to the site of the next bridge. The company is ready to begin operations at once, and will place ten steamers to start with, upon the route between Duluth and Quebec, to feed the elevators. Still more American capital is finding its way to Canada for investment in the pulp industry. A large syndicate, having at its head the Messrs. Clark of New York and Meaney of Toronto, has contracted with the provincial government of Quebec to expend $2,000,000 within the next two years in developing the industry upon the Labrador coast, in consideration of the action of the government in selling them a valuable water power for the sum of $15,000. This power is one of the falls of the Marguerite river on the north shore of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, and is capable of producing several thousand horse power. This syndicate will employ the power to generate electricity, and this force will be conveyed on wires to Seven Islands, some ten miles away, where there is a splendid harbor for ships of a heavy draught, and where it is consequently intended to erect the company's mills. The syndicate has already purchased several hundred square miles of valuable timber limits on the banks of the Marguerite and other streams, and now prospectors are out on various portions of the Labrador coast, spying out desirable locations for other similar industries.—Pennsylvania Grit.

THE LIFE OF A COAL MINER.

First, the boy of eight or ten is sent to the breaker to pick the slate and other impurities from the coal which has been brought up from the mine; from there he is promoted and becomes a door boy, working in the mine; as he grows older and stronger he is advanced to the position and given the pay of a laborer; there he gains the experience which secures him a place as a miner's helper; and as he acquires skill and strength he becomes, when in the height of his manhood and vigor, a full-fledged miner. If he is fortunate enough to escape the falls of rock and coal he may retain this position as a miner for a number of years, but as age creeps on and he is attacked by some of the many diseases incident to work in the mines he makes way for those younger and more vigorous following him up the ladder whose summit he has reached. He then starts on the descent, going back to become a miner's helper, then a mine laborer, now a door boy, and when old and decrepit he finally returns to the breaker where he started as a child, earning the same wages as are received by the little urchins who work at his side. There is no incentive for ambition in the average miner's life. He cannot rise to places of eminence and wealth; only one in five hundred can even be given place as a foreman or superintendent, and these are positions which few miners care to hold.—Cosmopolitan.

INVALIDED BY FASHION.

Society Girls Overworked Trying to Become Accomplished.

To learn as many of the fashionable accomplishments as possible appears to be the ambition of the girl of the period and her mamma. It is too often the case that considerations of physical health are entirely overlooked and that the fashionable girl finds herself worn out and old in appearance and disposition before she has reached the age of 22. The Ladies' Home Journal characterizes this folly properly when it says: "There are parents who, not content with the studies which their daughters have to grapple with at school, load them down with a few special studies in the 'finer arts.' I have in mind now several young girls between the precarious ages of 12 and 17, who, after they return from school, have an extra dose of painting, music or languages. 'But my daughter must know something of these things,' is the protest of the fond mother. 'She must be able to hold her own with other girls of her set.' Of course, the girl at this tender age, with such a mental load, soon goes to pieces. She becomes anaemic, listless and nervous, and then the mother wonders why! To build her up everything under the sun is tried except a lessening of mental work and the unnatural strain upon the nervous system. The girl develops into what? A bundle of nerves incased in the most fragile frame, her physical vitality sapped almost to the last dreg. And in this condition she enters the marriage state! And yet we wonder why there are so few women absolutely free from organic troubles. Is it so inexplicable?"

Pelting Brides with Flowers.

The custom of showering bridal couples with rice is as old as the monumental hills. It is sometimes attended with disagreeable results, but is still persisted in at most matrimonial functions. An improvement upon this custom which seems likely and ought to become popular was observed at a pretty wedding celebrated at Lake Geneva just before the close of the outing season. The piazzas and lawn of the bride's home were beautifully decorated with hydrangeas, which the extensive garden of the bride's home furnished in unusual profusion. The altar arranged at one end of the parlor was beautifully decorated and bowered with the same blooms mingled with ferns and evergreens. Bunches of the blossoms stood in large jars and vases in the spacious hall and banked the great fireplace. When the newly wedded pair started away in the late afternoon the guests lined the way from the house to the entrance gate of the grounds, everyone provided with hydrangeas, and through this lane of pelting flowers the bridal carriage was driven. It was a poetic and picturesque change from the usual rice shower.

A Marvelous Machine.

An invention, which it is claimed, will supplant petroleum as a motive power and will make stopping to take on a supply of electricity unnecessary for automobiles, is the work of a French scientist, one S. North. The device, according to an English contemporary, consists of an automatic generator of electricity which takes up very little space and makes electricity as the automobile proceeds on its journey. Only a small quantity of water is required for generating the electricity, and this can be easily carried in a bottle. It is stated that the French government has under consideration the advisability of adopting this new invention for submarine boats.

How in the world did Ham know anything about circuses, though?—Baltimore American.

"You remember Quorum, who was always so full of big ideas for making money?" "Quite well. What has become of him?" "That's what I was going to tell you. He had the thing figured down to a nicety, and had all the estimates to show that such a tunnel could be constructed for $2,375,000,000. He spent six months making his calculations, and then all at once he gave it up." "What did he do that for?" "The capitalists he was trying to get to back him had him run in for vagrancy."—Chicago Tribune.

"WHAR DEW I CUM IN?"

(Being the Soliloquy of a Farmer on the Free Raw Sugar Question.)

"Thar's a mighty lot er talkin' about farmers 'n thar rights,
'N the wonderful prosperity thet beet growin' invites.
Thar's a heap er foolish crowin' 'n the "beats" begin ter shout
'n holler fer the Tariff ter keep free raw sugar out!
But I notis thet the beet-producin' farms are very few,
An' the farmers through the country aint got much of it ter dew.
The hull land aint a-raisin' beets, 'n aint goin' ter begin,
Beet growin's right fer sum, I guess, but, whar dew I cum in?

The farmer gits four dollars now fer every ton o' beets—
A handsom price, I must allow—but hidin' sum deceits.
Beet sugar manufacterers admit es they hev found
Thet "granylated" costs 'em sumthin' like tew cents a pound.
In fact thet leaves a profit on which they'd greatly thrive—
Ahh—if it kin be sold fer three, why should we pay 'em FIVE?
It seems ter me es thet's a game thet's mighty like a skin—
But—if thar's any benefit—waal,—whar dew I cum in?

When Uncle Sam's in want o' cash we're glad ter help him out,
'N we'll stand all the taxes thet are needed, never doubt.
But when his pocket-book's well lined an' nary cent he lacks,
Et seems ter me his duty's ter repeal thet sugar tax.
Them fellers wot is interested see its to protect
The beet-producin' farmer thet the duty they collect,
But I guess thet explanation es a little bit too thin—
The sugar maker,—he's all right;—but whar dew we cum in?

Take off raw sugar duty an' the price will quickly fall,
To everybody's benefit, fer sugar's used by all.
The poor will bless the Government thet placed it in thar reach—
(In millions of our citizens free sugar now beseech)
The dealer 'll be delighted—less expenditure fer him—
More demand 'n bigger profits—which at present are but slim.
An' the farmer 'll be as well paid as he ever yet has been—
But he'll buy his sugar cheaper—thet's whar he an' I'll cum in.

Now, whar's the sense er reason of the sugar tax to-day,
When our treasury's a-bulgin' an' we hev no debts ter pay?
The duty on raw sugar's fifty million every year—
An' the people's got ter pay it—thet's a fact thet's very clear.
Fifty million! Great Jerusha! Ter protect beet magnates, too,
Why should they tax ALL the people—just ter help a scattered FEW?
And the FEW? Beet sugar MAKERS! Don't it really seem a sin
Thus ter help an' fill thar coffers? Whar dew you an' I cum in?

The farmer growin' beets hes got a contract price fer years—
Free raw sugar wouldn't hurt him, an' of it he hes no fears.
But mebbe, like myself—he's also growing fruit so nice—
Ter preserve it—at a profit—he needs sugar—at a price!
The repealing of the duty, surely cuts the price in two—
Thet'll make a mighty difference, neighbor, both ter me an' you!
Let the sugar manufacterer make such profits as he kin—
Ter him it may seem right enuff—but whar dew I cum in?

An' I aint agoin' ter swaller all the argyments they shout
Thet the farmers need protection—an' must tax raw sugar out.
Common sense is plainly showin' that the people in the land
Want raw sugar free in future—an' its freedom will demand.
'Tis a tax no longer needed—hateful to the public view,—
Taxing millions of our people to enrich a favored few.
They can't blind me any longer with the foolish yarns they spin,—
While they're busy making money—whar dew you an' I come in?

I'm agoin' ter keep on hustlin', talkin', plendin' with my frends,— Aint no sense in lettin' others gain thar selfish privet ends.
I'm agoin' ter write termorrer to my Congressman 'nd say
Thet he oughter do his best ter kill that tax without delay!
Feller-farmers, do your utmost—whether you grow beets or not
To repeal the tax on sugar—you can but improve your lot!
Cheaper sugar helps your pocket, greater blessings you can win—
When we've three-cent granylated—that's whar you an' I cum in!"

The Scientific Production of a laxative of known value and distinctive action is rapidly growing in public favor, along with the many other material improvements of the age. The many who are well informed must understand quite clearly, that in order to meet the above conditions a laxative should be wholly free from every objectionable quality or substance, with its component parts simple and wholesome and it should act pleasantly and gently without disturbing the natural functions in any way. The laxative which fulfils most perfectly the requirements, in the highest degree, is

Syrup of Figs

The sale of millions of bottles annually for many years past, and the universal satisfaction which it has given confirm the claim we make, that it possesses the qualities which commend it to public favor.

Its Excellence

is due to the originality and simplicity of the combination and also to the method of manufacture, which is known to the California Fig Syrup Co. only, and which ensures that perfect purity and uniformity of product essential to the ideal home laxative. In order to get always buy the genuine and note the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—printed on the front of every package. In the process of manufacturing figs are used as they are pleasant to the taste, but the medicinal virtues of Syrup of Figs are obtained from an excellent combination of plants known to be medicinally laxative and to act most beneficially.

THE AMERICAN MONTHLY REVIEW OF REVIEWS

THE AMERICAN MONTHLY REVIEW OF REVIEWS is commended by Statesmen, Professional men and thousands of others prominent in the world's activities, for its fair discrimination in sifting the actual news from conflicting report and the presentation of current events in their just proportion. They comment on its freedom from daily-paper sensationalism. All men and women who want to know what the world is doing find it an intellectual necessity, to judge from the letters received from hundreds. Its editorials are comprehensive, and labor saving to the busy man or woman. Its timely contributions on important topics are by the best-informed writers. Its reviews of other magazines give the best of their best work. It is profusely illustrated.

These letters will enable all thoughtful men and women to judge of its value to them:

PRESIDENT

"I know that through its selections views have been presented to me that I could not otherwise have had access to; because all earnest and thoughtful men, no matter how widely their ideas diverge, are given free utterance in its columns."—Theodore Roosevelt.

EX-PRESIDENT

"I consider it a very valuable addition to my library."—Grover Cleveland.

"It is a publication of very great value. I have sometimes found there very important matter indeed which I should not otherwise have discovered."—George F. Hoar, U. S. Senator, Massachusetts.

"I am a constant reader of the 'Review of Reviews' and appreciate it very highly indeed. I think it a very important part of my library, and practically a necessity for one in public life."—J. B. Foraker, U. S. Senator, Ohio.

"It is one of the best and most satisfactory publications of the day."—Charles W. Fairbanks, U. S. Senator, Indiana.

"I do not have a great deal of time to read magazines, but I take pleasure in saying that the 'Review of Reviews' is among the number which finds a place on my table each month."—Jonathan L. Rose, U. S. Senator, Arkansas.

Send for particulars as to how it can be had with an invaluable set of books for 50 cents a month.

THE MAN ON THE CORNER

Some of the Sights He Saw and Some of Those He Saw Not

A great deal of sympathy is being expressed for the mother of Mary Adams, who was sentenced to the penitentiary for twenty years for killing her husband. From all that we can learn, it seems to be a case where a gardening parent could do the most truly applied. It happens that the poor woman married the murdered man at a time from pure ignorance of the law, acting under bad advice and with no thought of wrong doing. A petition to the Governor I believe would have good results.

I am glad to learn that the Farmers' Mutual Insurance Association has straightened out its affairs, and while some few members have written down, other new members have been added, who more than make up for those who have gone. N. J. Calloway has resigned the presidency, and P. D. Wilson, under the constitution and by-laws is acting president. I understand that Alex G. Dake will be duly elected president of the Association at a meeting of the directors to be held next Saturday. The Association is really one of the best things for our people and I trust it will continue to flourish and prosper.

WOOED AND WEDDED.

MULLINS—FOSHEE

A large and fashionable assembly gathered at the residence of Mr. W. H. Foshee on Tuesday morning to witness the marriage of Mr. J. Renfroe Mullins and Miss Blanche Foshee. Rev. D. F. Barrett was the officiating minister. Immediately after the ceremony the happy couple left for Birmingham.

Mr. Mullins is one of our rising young men who is bound to make his mark, and Miss Blanche every one loves. They have known each other all their lives and their union is the culmination of love's young dream. That they may long live and prosper is the earnest wish of all their friends.

JOHNSON—GOLDTHORPE

When Dr. N. S. Johnson left for Montgomery last Sunday it was not expected he would return with a blushing bride on Monday. And when Miss Lillian Goldthorpe left Mobile to meet the Doctor at Montgomery there were few, if any, who knew what was going to happen. Miss Lillian was accompanied by her sister, Miss Nettie. But the young people had known and loved each other in Mobile and the meeting at Montgomery was by prior arrangement. Rev. N. L. Anderson made them man and wife and they came to Clanton one where all who know the Doctor are glad to welcome him home with his charming bride. We wish them many years of happiness together.

PUBLIC MEETING

To the voters of Chilton county who are in favor of all white men voting

You are hereby requested to meet in Clanton, Friday, Dec 27, 1901, at 11 a. m.

There are some important features of the new constitution that all men who wish to vote in future should understand, and after February 1, 1902, it will be too late to do anything, come all, and let us take such steps as will be best under the premises.

(Signed) J. W. Letcher, R. M. Smith, A. C. Smith, B. H. Wells, E. B. Deason, B. W. Garner, Thos. H. Williams, W. H. Conway, G. L. Langston, S. M. Adams, Lewis H. Reynolds, H. A. J. Harris, M. A. Kugore, W. L. Bone, P. M. Moore, Felix Leland, W. F. Livingston, R. M. Roebuck, J. T. Chambers.

Will Not Hide My Light Under a Bushel.

GENTLEMEN:—I will not hide my light under a bushel, for I want the people to know what your Gooch's Mexican Syrup has done for me. For four years I have been afflicted with Asthma, and could not get anything to do me any good until I got your Gooch's Mexican Syrup. I took three bottles and it cured me entirely. I give you this hoping it may be the means of saving some one from a horrible and premature death.

Yours under obligations,
REV. THOS. B. WARWICH,

Maplesville.

Some of your readers are growing sentimental on reaching the last leaf of the calendar; our year as the new boy said "is rounding up." To those who have not been afflicted with bereavements, we think it has been a most prosperous year.

Many patriotic citizens kept Thanksgiving. Some, we regret to say, enjoyed the good dinner more than obedience to the law of Teddy. Many fine turkeys came to an untimely end. Some got up a good dinner with chicken fry and pie made from the giblets.

Mr. R. D. Martin entertained our local officials with the proverbial turkey.

Mr. F. M. Matthews, wife and children, Charles, from Matthews, have daughter relations here with a visit.

Messrs. Matthews and R. O. Glover visited Mr. C. H. Dansby near Verbena. The former was delighted with the farming interests, the prosperity of the country; he raised much cotton where made, where many producers were able to sell their cotton, no surer sign of confidence.

Indeed your correspondent has rarely heard so many good things of our Republican county government, that like Agrippa we almost per[illegible] "the idea of the government owning our railroads and telegraphs and giving us free rides and free telegrams is convincing, and would it be unlawful when long distances can indulge in their favorite style of talk. Oh happy day will that be."

Miss Maud Gilmer is visiting kinsfolks here. The many friends she made here, by her affable manners, are delighted to see her again.

Mr. Rasberry and Miss Minnie Clark have visited relatives here.

Rev. W. A. Parker from near Montgomery gave us a most excellent sermon the 1st. He was appreciative of the courtesy extended him, was guest of Dr. Claughton.

Dr. F. Dubose has paid a visit to Selma lately.

We hope a good attendance on the Sabbath school convention which meets here the 3d and 4th.

VERBENA, ALA., Nov. 26, 1901.

Editor Banner.—I understand Judge Denson charged the Grand Jury to get a true bill against everyone in Beat five that have got stock running out. There are about five hundred voters in Beat five, and I don't think there are over five that have put their stock up. How did they get that stock law any how? I can tell you how they got it. About fifteen men in Beat five signed a petition and sent it to the last Legislature to get stock law in Beat five, and over three hundred signed a petition to keep out stock law in Beat five. Who prevailed with the Legislature? The fifteen did. How did they do it? I will tell you in one of their own words how they did it. He said: I am to pay $25 if they get the stock law bill passed, and he said others were to pay so much if they got the bill, I don't recollect how much. He let the cat of the bag. They bought that bill through the last Legislature. Please tell me if there is any justice in that law; is fifteen to rule five hundred. I have always been a law abiding citizen, but the stock law has been one of the hardest pills I have ever tried to swallow.

You can go through Beat five and I am satisfied that you will not find over 15 or 20 men that are in favor of stock law. They have been counting out negroes in the black belt for years. Why don't they prosecute them, they break the law when they count them out. Look at Dallas at the last election. I have been told that about five hundred voters voted in Dallas county at the last election. But when they got through counting they had over seven thousand majority for constitution.

Mr. Editor, I have been a black belt Democrat and I know what it is to be ruled by negroes, and I do not blame the men for counting the negroes. I say let the majority rule in the white counties. If they indict one I think they will have to indict nearly every one in Beat five. I don't think there has been over ten men in the Beat that have kept up their stock. I thought the law of this country were made for the good of the people, not for a few.

Hon. Chas G. Brown, Attorney General of Alabama, spoke here this year, also Col. W. W. Brandon spoke here. In their speeches both said the stock law was a bad law for this community. Well, I will close this letter, I just wanted to show you how our people stood on stock law. H. B. NORTHINGTON.

COL WOODS SLOWING REPORT

Colonel M. L. Woods, Assistant State Examiner of Public Accounts, yesterday filed with Gov. Jelks his report upon the result of his examination of the books and accounts of the officials of Chilton county. The Examiner tells the Governor in his report that the officials are faithful and efficient.

The report on R. M. Hoevcutt, former Probate Judge of Chilton County, covers the period from August 1, 1897, to November 4, 1898. Colonel Woods reports that his accounts were well kept and that his remittances were promptly made to the State Treasurer.

Colonel Woods reports that the books and accounts of Hon. S. M. Adams, present Probate Judge of Chilton County, have been properly kept and that all moneys received have been promptly paid into the State Treasury. He says that Judge Adams was uniformly courteous to him and assisted him in making the examination. The examination into the accounts of Judge Adams covered a period from November 4, 1898, to September 30, 1901.

The Examiner also reported yesterday upon the accounts of T. J. Hubbard, Tax Collector of Chilton County. The examination embraced the years 1897, 1898, 1899 and 1900. His books were carefully kept and all money was accounted for.

Colonel Woods adds:

"Mr. Hubbard is painstaking in the discharge of his official duties to a commendable degree."

Kincheon

Farmers are done gathering in this community and are enjoying a few days of rest these fine autumn days.

The school house was burned at the cross roads, two miles west of this place on Nov. 13. But we went to work with a vim and in a few days we had another house up, and our school is progressing fine under the control of Prof. Claud Byrum.

Mr. Ben Wallace gave the young people of this place a candy breaking Saturday night last, which was enjoyed by all.

Miss Effie Carter visited Miss Alice Powell last Sunday.

The good people met at the cross roads last Sunday and organized a Sunday-school. We hope much good will come from it.

Mr. Sam Deason and wife of Coosa county were welcome visitors to friends and relatives here last week.

Mr. Forest Deason of Tuskaloosa county was a welcome visitor to relatives here last week. He had not seen his brother Sam in thirty years, and one lives in Tuskaloosa county and the other in Coosa. The readers can figure up how far apart they live and see how little they visited each other.

Mrs. L. D. Deason of Clanton is visiting her son, Mr. A. W. Powell.

Mr. E. B. Deason and Miss Fannie Deason of Clanton visited Mr. I. M. Deason of Kincheon Sunday last.

Mr. G. W. Edwards' wife, we are sorry to say, is very sick; we hope she will soon be up again.

Mr. W. L. and Walter Popwell have ginned something over seven hundred bales of cotton this season at this place, which speaks well for them as business men. Go it, boys, we love to see young men coming to the front. Hurry up, and put in a saw mill, for we need some lumber to build school houses.

Mr. D. Bone had the misfortune to get one of his toes shot off last Friday by the discharge of his gun in a fall, while trying to shoot some birds. Success to the Banner.

East Chilton.

Rev. J. H. Thomas filled his regular appointment at Corinth Sunday and preached two very impressive sermons.

W. A. Goss paid a flying visit to Verbena Sunday. Mr. T. S. Pyron and charming sister, Miss Lena, of Verbena, were in our midst Sunday. Mr. Lee Robinson and sister, Miss Anna, from near Enid, attended preaching at Corinth Sunday. Mr. J. E. Goss went to Birmingham last Sunday.

Mr. Tige Gulsborn of Wadsworth's mill was here Sunday.

The sound of the mill whistle can now be heard in most any direction from East Chilton. Mr. Wadsworth will soon have his big saw mill at the mouth of Blue creek in operation. This mill is connected with the L. & N. railroad by a branch line from Cooper.

We are glad the Banner is soon to have a new home and press.

Success to the Banner and its readers.

UNIVERSITY SCHOOL
PLANTERSVILLE, ALA.

Is a training and strictly private school for boys and girls.

Correlated to the University of Alabama and to the Alabama Polytechnic Institute.

Has fitted more pupils for college, more pupils for teaching, more pupils for advanced business positions than all other schools in Chilton county combined. It is the only school in Chilton county whose pupils have a First Grade Certificate under the present school laws.

Its course of instruction is the best arranged, its methods the soundest, most thorough and up-to-date; its scholarship the most advanced; its location, buildings, grounds, furniture, equipments, the most attractive and best adapted of any school in Chilton county.

Its pupils enter any college in the South on certificate of the Principal. It deals honestly with the public adheres to professional courtesy, and performs its promises. Its mission is to build up, not to pull down. It is not, as some are, a mere common school called "College," "Normal," etc., by which misnomers the uninformed are misled.

$150 pays all expenses of board, tuition, fuel, lights, etc., for session of nine months. School opens September 25, 1901. Write for catalogue.

Think of a passage over the ocean at the average rate of 22.23 knots being that of a ship that has lost the supremacy of the Atlantic. The ship in question, the Kaiser Wilhelm, has been beaten by the Deutschland, by more than a knot and a half, so that she now has to wait for her sister, or brother, the Kronprinz Friederich to beat the Deutschland.

Carl Peters, the African explorer, gives it as the result of his experience that the mosquito is only one of the agents producing malaria. He found that the contagion was carried by wind from swampy water, and that drinking stagnant water also produced the disease. His observations were made at a station where there were no mosquitoes whatever, and would therefore seem to be more or less conclusive.

The Department of Agriculture is preparing a bulletin giving a digest of the game laws of the country, and it makes recommendation of a uniform game protective law throughout the country, making it a national rather than a State question. The American Ornithological Union has practically gained national protection for non-game birds, and the same efforts are now to be exerted toward the preservation of birds and animals that are annually hunted as game.

A good reform in the matter of obtaining pardons for convicts has just been introduced by the Governor of North Carolina. He has notified the people of his state that all petitions for pardons must first be advertised for a given period in the newspapers of the locality where the penal crime was committed. It is intended to prevent pardons being quietly railroaded through without proper examination being made into the merits of the case, which has been the old-time practice.

Professor Haeckel gives some very interesting facts in regard to the human monkeys of Java, which seem to be near to the missing link. One of the most remarkable features of these monkeys is the voice, which is capable of expressing emotions like the human voice. It would be interesting to know how much the intelligence of these monkeys could be developed by systematic training. Probably the animals could be raised by care to the mental plane of the Bushman of Australia or the Hottentot of West Africa.

Experience with wooden pavements in Boston have been satisfactory on level stretches of streets. But Boston has comparatively little area of level street surface, and on any grade exceeding two percent the wooden pavement, as generally laid, is as slippery as asphalt under similar conditions. In every other respect the wooden pavement is satisfactory, being almost noiseless, showing no wear at the end of a year's trial, and being generally superior to asphalt. So reports Bertrand T. Wheeler, superintendent of streets. Efforts are now being made to overcome the objections of slipperiness. An experimental section has been paved with wooden blocks notched on one side. Laid in this manner there is a quarter of an inch opening, or joint, every four inches in the pavement, and this is filled with Portland cement grout concrete. It is expected that this will remedy the trouble.

A curious relic of old-world belief is reported in Yatesville, Penn. Two young men, from their names evidently Italians, were out chestnutting one Sunday and on their way home dropped their bag of nuts into an old well. One of them went down into the well to get the nuts and when he did not return the other followed to see what had happened. The well was full of black damp and both were suffocated. The next day an undertaker went to their home to bury them and found that this had already been done by their parents, who had put the bodies under six inches of fresh soil in the garden, their belief being that if a person is suffocated he could be restored by burying him in fresh earth. So deep-seated was this belief in the minds of the family and neighbors of the boys that it was with the utmost difficulty they were persuaded to allow the bodies to be interred properly, and then only after another twenty-four hours had passed.

THE WILEY BOER.

In order to cope with the large number of Boers which keep in touch with Commandant General Botha east of the line of the block houses from Wilge river to Grelingstad, twelve British columns are operating between the Delagoa and Natal railways.

In the western transvaal, Colonel Kekewich and Colonel Hycke are sweeping the country in conjunction with the forces on the railway line and the constabulary posts. Block houses are to form the chief factor in the pacification of the country.

The concentration of the British columns south of the Delagoa railroad has withdrawn the troops north of the line with the result that the Boers are again back in that neighborhood where horse sickness and fever do not prevail and food is plentiful.

OF A FAMOUS NAME.

Judge Charles A. Hamilton, of Milwaukee, Wis., died at Daytona, Fla., last week, aged 75 years. Judge Hamilton was a grandson of Alexander Hamilton. He served with distinction in the civil war as lieutenant colonel of the seventh regiment of Wisconsin. Judge Hamilton was born in 1826, in New York, in a house belonging to the Hamilton family. He was educated partly in England and Germany. When he was twenty years old he went to Milwaukee, where he was admitted to the bar when about twenty-one years of old. He practiced law until 1861, when he entered the army and was mustered out as a colonel. He was severely wounded and carried the bullets to his death. After the war he was elected superior court judge.

SAID ROOSEVELT SHOULD DIE.

Philadelphia officials admitted having arrested a man for uttering anarchistic sentiments concerning President Roosevelt. The arrest was made in the business section of the city. The prisoner gave his name as William H. Miller. He was in a crowd which had gathered to read the bulletins of the football game between the army and navy elevens. He is said to have made the statement that "Roosevelt should be shot down as McKinley was." A revolver is said to have been found in his posession. Miller says he is a Swede. The official charge against him is inciting a riot and using violent language.

THE BIG LIVE STOCK EXHIBIT.

Thirty-six exhibitors with more than 2,000 animals have just added their quota to the list of exhibits for the International Live Stock Association show, which is to be held at the Union Stock Yards this week. More than 10,000 animals will be on exhibition and the money value of these prize animals is approximately three million.

WAR HAS COST ENGLAND 100,000,000 POUNDS.

During the years of the South African war the Bankers' Magazine says, the net decreases in the value of 320 selected listed British securities amounts to the enormous total of £148,946,000. Consols, which the day before the Boer ultimatum were quoted at 103¼ are 91 13-16, whereas in the same period several foreign government stocks and American railroad rose in value about £47,000,000. The decrease in foreign, British and Indian government funds amounted to £76,392,000. The common stock of nineteen British railroads lost in value in the war period over £69,000,000, while the decline in railroad debentures and preferences brings the total loss to over £100,000,000.

FERRYBOAT COLLISION.

The ferryboats Sausalito and San Rafael collided in a dense fog in San Francisco harbor last Saturday and the San Rafael sank in about fifteen minutes. It is thought that not more than twenty persons were drowned, although the San Rafael carried between 150 and 200 persons. The Sausalito was not seriously injured, and after rescuing all the passengers of the San Rafael that she could she proceeded to San Francisco under her own steam. The boats belonged to the San Francisco and Northern Pacific railroad, and plied between San Francisco and Sausalito, a suburb across the bay.

SURRENDERED.

Particulars reach here of the killing of John G. Watts, ex-United States marshal for Western Virginia, by George J. Jones, in Tazewell county last Friday. The trouble, it is said, was caused over a line fence which Jones was building. Watts commanded him to stop work, and failing to obey this order, it is alleged, Watts threatened to kill Jones and attempted to draw a revolver, whereupon Jones struck Watts over the head with an iron post-hole digger, crushing in his skull and causing instant death Jones escaped to the woods, but last night surrendered to the authorities and is now in jail.

TESTIMONIAL FOR BATTLESHIP ALABAMA.

Chairman Max Hamburger, Jr., of the commission appointed by the late Governor Samford to raise funds to purchase a suitable testimonial for the battleship Alabama has called a meeting of the commission to be held at the Exchange Hotel in Montgomery Tuesday, December 3. Mr. Hamburger has announced that $2,500 in addition to the sum already secured will be necessary to raise the fund sufficiently.

THE QUILL DRIVERS.

The biennial meeting of the Washington correspondents of the newspapers of the United States was held Saturday and the following standing committee of correspondents was elected for the fifty-seventh congress, the names being arranged in the order of the number of votes cast for them: E. E. Payne, the Associated Press; Robert J. Winne, New York Press; John P. Miller, Baltimore Sun; Raymond Patterson, Chicago Tribune; W. W. Jermiane, Minneapolis Journal.

Mrs. J. Fred Meyers, living five miles from Correctionville, Ia., wrapped her five-months-old baby in a blanket, put her in the oven of the kitchen stove to keep warm and went out in the yard to gather fuel. When, half an hour later, she came back, the baby was dead, its arms and legs being burned to a crisp.

METHODIST HOME FOR AGED.

At a recent session of the North Alabama conference in session at the Anniston First church the report of the committee to consider a plan to raise money for the erection of the proposed home for superannuated preachers and the widows and orphans of deceased preachers was made. The committee suggested an annual assessment of $10,000, 20 per cent of which to be set aside as a sinking fund. As soon as enough is accumulated in the sinking fund the money is to be used in building this home. The report was adopted. Thus $8,000 a year will be distributed while $2,000 will be annually added to the building fund. The following laymen were elected to attend the general conference in Dallas, Tex., next May: N. M. Rowe, W. E. Walt, A. C. Miller, T. C. Banks, Thomas Bradford.

AN HONEST MAN.

An instance of unusually excellent memory and commendable honesty came to light when D. W. Howton of Jefferson county came to Tuscaloosa and began a hunt for the bridge keeper who had credited him for 10 cents, the price of the toll, when he crossed he Warrior bridge on February 28, 1880. At that time the bridge was a toll bridge and Sampson McGee, grandfather of the present tax collector, was the keeper, but when Mr. Howton came to pay his bridge fare he found the elder McGee had long since died and his grandson refused to take the amount due. However, Mr. Howton induced Probate Judge Brown to take the 10 cents and 20 cents more for interest for the county and went away with a satisfied conscience. It was the first time the honest debtor had been in Tuscaloosa in twenty years.

KILLED HIS FATHER.

Wilson Atkins, a farmer of Cullman county, was killed last week by his son, Judson, 16 years old. Atkins, it is said, was abusing and striking his wife when the boy remonstrated with his father. The old man turned upon the boy, it is alleged, fiercely threatening him with death and brandishing a big chop-axe. Judson is said to have grappled with his father, disarmed him of the axe, and as the father was in the act of shooting him with a fowling piece, cleft the old man's skull. Old man Atkins has been four times marrried, his last wife and mother of the boy being much younger than himself.

"DIDN'T KNOW IT WAS LOADED."

While cleaning a shot gun last week, preparatory to a thanksgiving hunt, George Hardy, aged 19, living four miles west of Trinity, accidentally shot and perhaps fatally wounded his sister, Ada, aged 22. The gun, which was loaded with heavy shot, was thought to have been empty.

THOMAS L. FREEMAN, town marshal of Guntersville for several years, died last week in Etowah county. He was feared by the disorderly element and was covered with wounds received in street encounters.

DEPOT BURNED.

The Alabama Great Southern railroad frieght and passenger depot and the office of the Southern Express Company, at Springville, was destroyed by fire last week. The origin of the fire is at this time unknown. About one hundred and twenty-five bales of cotton, together with a lot of freight, was also destroyed. The express on hand and valuable papers were saved.

LIMESTONE MURDER.

Saturday morning twelve miles west of Athens, an unknown assassin fired a load of buckshot into the body of Daniel Morrison, an old fisherman who plied his trade on Elk river The old man left his home in the morning, went to the river and got into his boat to work his lines, when some person hiding in the trees along the bank fired on him filling his chest and tearing away a part of his head and face, and breaking both his arms. He was evidently standing up when fired on, for he fell out of the boat into the shallow water and was found there by a neighbor. He was not dead when found, but never recovered consciousness and died late in the afternoon. He lived with his only child a married daughter, and had no known enemies. There can be no reason given for his assassination. He was 73 years of age, had long lived in the neighborhood where he was killed and was well liked.

CONVENTION ENDS.

The good roads convention in Mobile adjourned Saturday afternoon and the train has gone to Montgomery, where the state convention will be held. The South Alabama Good Roads Association was organized as follows: Henry Fonde, president; J. Bestor Robertson, secretary; A. S. Lyons, treasurer, all of Mobile. Vice-presidents were selected, ten in number, one from each county represented at the meeting. A membership of two hundred was had almost before the adjournment was taken. Resolutions were adopted asking the government to locate an experiment station in Mobile county, suggesting the adoption by the Legislature of a modern and practical road law in Alabama, and making every newspaper man in Alabama an honorary member of the association. The association will be represented in Montgomery.

CENTRAL RAILROAD OF ALABAMA.

A meeting in the interest of the Central railroad of Alabama, was held at Decatur last week, and matters relative to the early construction of the road were discussed. The various committees on subscriptions, right of way, etc., which were appointed a short time ago, reported that their work was progressing most satisfactorily on running right of way through the country and in obtaining terminal facilites, and also that nearly all the cash donations of $2,500 had been raised. The committees will complete their work and work will start on the new road soon after.

FIRE AT SELMA.

At an early hour Saturday morning fire broke out in a row of houses belonging to the Estelle cotton mills and occupied by employes of the mill. The flames were not extinguished until three of the buildings had been completely destroyed, including all the personal effects of the occupants. One of the families lost $45 in cash, representing the savings of years for them. There was no insurance.

WORK on the sewerage system for Opelika will be begun shortly and the work will be pushed to completion before the summer months.

BAPTIST MINISTER DIES.

A. W. McGaha, of Huntsville, one of the best known ministers of the Baptist denomination in the South, died last week at the residence of his brother-in-law, M. B. Neece. Death was the result of a stroke of paralysis complicated with other affections.

WORKING FOR ALABAMA.

On application of congressman Richardson, the postoffice department has ordered an inspector to look over two proposed routes out of Huntsville and one out of Tuscumbia for free rural mail delivery. It is believed that the department will establish these routes as every facility for free delivery is provided.

THE Grand Lodge of Colored Masons of the state has been in session at Opelika. Their installation of officers was at the court house and was public.

THANKSGIVING ACT.

Governor Jelks' principal act on Thanksgiving day was the parole from Pratt Mines of Jack Pace, white, convicted in Franklin county and sentenced to six months' imprisonment. The cause of the parole being granted was that Pace's wife was reported to be dying, and the Governor wished to allow him to go to her. Governor Jelks made arrangements to have Pace immediately released from prison.

THAT ADDS TO STORE OF WISDOM

Life Does Not End Possibilities Leaving, and William Believes There Will Be Instruction in the Life to Come.

Montague said, "There is no enjoyment so cheap as reading and pleasure so lasting." The perusal of biography is a great comfort. I that every family had a Cyclopedia of Universal Knowledge—something they could turn to for reference instruction or entertainment. Cyclopedias cost much money, but the money spent in a year or two for articles of modern literature would pay Appleton's or some other standard. I was ruminating about this be my friend Murphy told me that Widow Cheek did not raise her young chicks but carried them about with them nestled under her wings and fed them as she journeyed from place to place. Murphy is considered author on hunting and fishing, but we do give full credit to fishermen and so I turned to the cyclopedia and found it just as he had said. Bird rarely has more than two young ones and carries them about with her nestled under her wings. This reminds me that old Tom Price, an English man of great observation, said the big owl laid but one egg and when it was hatched and the young fledged she laid another egg made the young bird cover and hatch it while she was foraging around for food for both. Observation and reflection are good school teachers, and if a man has a good cyclopedia of reference he can get a pretty good education. And there is the comfort of studying the lives of great or notable men and women. In idle moments it is a recreation to open a volume at random and to read these brief but full biographies of Socrates, Plato, Seneca, Archimedes and other great old men of the olden time, of Mozart, Handl, Raphael, Beethoven and the great masters of art and music. The other day I chanced on Cervantes—a Spaniard—the author of "Don Quixote, and it was a revelation. If he had been an English he would have taken rank with Shakespeare and Milton and Pope. In fact most of the English writers borrowed from him for they could transplant his bright sayings and quote them as English without fear of detection. "Don Quixote" (pronounced kee-ho-te) not his best work, but is the most readable and it effectually paralyzed the pompous chivalry and knight errantry of the time. The knights soon became the butt of universal ridicule. Yet there is not a malicious or malignant line in the book. One who reads such sarcasm can read and laugh until he has the side ache. Philip I saw a student reading a book convulsed with laughter. He said: "This young man is crazy or he is reading Don Quixote.'" Cervantes became a soldier in early life and joined the Christian army against the Turks. He was desperately wounded at the battle of Lepanto and lost the use of his left arm for life. But he rejoined the army again and was taken prisoner by the Moors and kept in slavery for five years. He was ransomed and then began his literary career. Ariosto and Tasso had then begun to illuminate the literary world, and Shakespeare was close behind, but Cervantes was seventeen years older than Shakespeare, and they died on the same day in the same year. For wit and epigrams Cervantes never had an equal in all the world—we find some of them in Shakespeare, but they were borrowed from Cervantes. "Make hay while the sun shines," "A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush," "Murder will out," "Little said soonest mended," "More knave than fool," "Faint heart ne'er won fair lady," "Look before you leap," "The proof of the pudding is the eating of it," "Never build castles in the air," "Honesty is the best policy," "The pot should not call the kettle black," "A stitch in time saves nine," "Don't count your chickens before they are hatched," "Don't look for birds in last year's nests," "Plain as the nose on a man's face," "You have got the wrong sow by the ear," and scores of others all from Cervantes. To cap the climax of his character, he was a good husband to his wife and children, always cheerful and had no enemies. Once he was put in prison for a debt and wrote himself out by short sketches to the press. President Gilman says that the young people read too much and clog their minds with a mass of tribes and trash, but reading the biography of great thinkers, writers, inventors and masters of art and music is storing away useful knowledge. The examples set by the great helps to mold our own characters, as Longfellow said:

Speaker Reed presided and the old officers of the House were made the unanimous choice of the caucus, and the major portion of the time was devoted to an unsuccessful effort, led by Representative Hepburn, of Iowa, to effect some changes in the rules of the last house. Cannon, Illinois, presided over the deliberations and Mr. Loudenslager, of New Jersey, acted as secretary. There were 146 of the 198 representatives members of the house. Mr. Lacey, of Iowa, placed General Henderson in nomination for speaker and he was unanimously chosen as the caucus nominee of the caucus. Mr. Henderson addressed the members of the caucus. The other day I chanced on Cervantes—a Spaniard—the author of "Don Quixote," and it was a revelation. If he had been an English man he would have taken rank with Shakespeare and Milton and Pope. Lope and Tasso had then begun to illuminate the literary world, and Shakespeare was close behind, but Cervantes was seventeen years older than Shakespeare, and they died on the same day in the same year. For plays and epigrams Cervantes never had an equal in all the world—we find some of them in Shakespeare, but they were borrowed from Cervantes. President Hillyer says that the young people read too much and clog their minds with a mass of trifles and trash, but the biography of great thinkers, inventors and masters of art and music is storing away useful knowledge. The examples set by the great helps to mold our own characters, as Longfellow said:

"The lives of great men all remind us,
We may make our lives sublime,
And departing leave behind us
Footprints on the sands of time."

What a debt of gratitude we owe to those who have gone before us. Old Dr. Johnson said to Boswell:

"We can never pay it, sir—not a tithe of it, but it is every man's duty to do something for posterity. He should write a good book or invent some useful thing or raise up a son who will be a good citizen and fight the battles of his country. If he can't do anything else, sir, he can plant a tree or a vine that will give fruit or shade to those who come after him. Let no man live a blank and die like a dog!"

I believe that our education begins here in infancy and continues through youth and manhood till we die and goes on without a recess or vacation as soon as the spirit reaches heaven—if it goes there. This life is but a probation, a kindergarten, a type of the life to come. "I want to be an angel; a harp within my hand," is a very childish idea of heaven and so is that other couplet—

"Teach me some melodious sonnet Sung by flaming tongues above."

Music will be taught there, of course, but will not be sung by tongues on fire. I believe that our elevation in science and art will be gradual and progressive, just as it is here. The intelligent soul will be employed in mastering the mysteries of heaven and earth and the universe. We strain our thoughts now to reach the remotest planet and wonder what is away beyond and where the firmament ends. Every year reveals new wonders here that were never dreamed of by our fathers. Isaac Newton said: "I have solved a little, near the shore, but the vast ocean of mystery lies beyond." We are climbing higher and higher and it is the duty of every one to climb as high as is possible so as to have a good start in the next life—otherwise we will be assigned to the first grade or perhaps go foot. I have thought that Moses and Elijah were chosen to witness the transfiguration because of their high rank in heavenly attainments. It will be all right for little children to begin at the bottom, but it will be mortifying to old people, however good they may be, to have to go into an infant class. Yes, I believe there will be schools there and teachers, whose delight will be to educate and elevate the willing minds of their pupils and witness their expansion as one by one, the mysteries of heaven's arcana are unfolded to them. What supreme delight will woman have in growing flowers into new colors and forms, in making pearls and rubies and sapphires from heaven's elements, in singing the songs of the angels and adorning the temples of God.

Yes, I heard Jenny Lind sing once, and I hope to hear her sing again. I heard George Pearce preach once, and I hope to hear him again. I used to listen with rapture to Dr. Means as he soared among the stars and lifted our young minds up higher and higher until we almost feared he could not come down without a fall. He is up among the stars now, and is happy. Yes, I hope to see John Milton there and hear him tell of Paradise regained. But this is enough, for I am not preaching now—I wish that I was. If there were no other inducements to draw us heavenward it is enough that we will meet all the great and good men of whom we have read. And now, turning from things heavenly to those that are of "earth earthy," and dirty, too, it is amusing to see our legislature having a mighty controversy about redistricting the state. They don't seem to know that congress will soon save that trouble, for the resolution is already prepared to reduce our representation from eleven to five districts. The ax is laid at the root of the tree. The New York Press says that congress will only wait for the census report to be presented and this report will show that five states have disfranchised the negroes by law and three (Georgia, Florida and Arkansas) disfranchised them in fact by other methods. Georgia is put down at 216,000 negroes practically disfranchised. The proposed cut will reduce the representation of eight states from 58 to 30 representatives. Alabama will lose four, Arkansas two, Florida one, Georgia six, Louisiana four Mississippi five, South Carolina four and Virginia two. The other southern states have not yet been sentenced. The Press says that the house is bound by no rules of court and it is not necessary to find that the negroes have been denied by law; but it is only necessary to find that their rights have been denied and the census returns will prove this and the cut will certainly be made. It is about time now for the blue and the gray to embrace again.—Bill Arp, in Atlanta Constitution.

France appears to be taking the lead in prison reform. At the new lockup, which is about eight miles from Paris, the authorities show their belief in fresh air and sunshine, and the prison is a model sanitarium. The prison is the largest in the world, and takes the place of three old ones. It is built in a very simple style, but covers, with its floral gardens and residences of officials, more than half a square mile. There are 1824 cells, but as there is accommodation on the association system for about 400 more prisoners, the total it will contain is considerably over 2000.

When a prominent man eats nowadays he finds it necessary to indicate whether the operation has any political significance or whether it is only for the purpose of satisfying hunger.

CRAZY CROCKER'S DREAM.

His Prediction of a Transcontinental Railroad Ridiculed.

The National Magazine has an interesting article on the development of American railroad systems, by E. E. Clark, grand chief conductor of the Order of Railroad Conductors.

When the late "Charlie Crocker of Central Pacific railway fame, crossing the plains in the forties was by ox-team over the old emigrant trail from Council Bluffs to San Francisco, he frequently predicted that within a comparatively few years a steam railroad would be running across the continent, following substantially the same course traveled by them. His prediction was considered so absurd by his associates that he was nicknamed "Crazy Crocker." Mr. Crocker had the satisfaction of not only seeing his prediction come true, but of being one of the leading spirits in the construction of the first transcontinental railroad.

Since Mr. Crocker's dream was realized and the first transcontinental line was completed five other distinct and separate lines have been built to the Pacific coast, namely: The Canadian Pacific, the Great Northern, the Northern Pacific, the Santa Fe, and the Southern Pacific. With the extension of the roads and the building up of large systems has come a corresponding increase in the amount of business, and the building of railroads in unsettled and comparatively unexplored portions of our domain has done more to develop the resources of the country than all other agencies put together.

The Last Goodby.

"There's one goodby that seems to drown all the others," said a veteran trans-Atlantic traveler the other day. "I don't know why it is, but the long whistles from the countless craft on the way down the upper and lower bays appear flat and wooden to the three long blasts which the red hulled lightship on Sandy Hook bar pipes out to us as, with the pilot safe in the take-off boat,' the dial marks 'full speed' in the engine room, and we go scooting off to the eastward, to begin our long trip to Europe. Salutes are a mere conventionality alongside this cheerful 'God speed you' of the lightship. It reminds one of the hearty handshake of a big hearted man when one's luck has been on the ebb.

"The formal whistles of the myriad of consequential tugs that were met on the way out, the acre of white linen that whipped the air at the pier end as we backed into the stream, the tooting of the dodging ferry boats and the screeching of the small fry going seaward through the winding channels, are one and all remembered when we turn in for the night, but forgotten when we turn out the next morning for a roll with old Neptune and coffee with shipmates. The three long blasts of the lightship, still on the bar, in all probability, but now many miles back of our creamy wake, alone remains fixed in the memory of the 'goodbyes' that came from the soul."—New York Mail and Express.

New Jersey's Lone Indian.

In a little one-room house without windows, situated in a lonely spot along the Maurice river, a short distance from Norma, N. J., lives the sole survivor of the South Jersey Indians, Dan Halstead. For more than half a century this old man, shunning the ways of civilization as much as possible, has clung to the habits of his forefathers. Halstead, though not a full-blooded Indian, is said to be a grandson of old Shamung, a great chief whose tribe had its hunting grounds along the banks of the Maurice river. The grandson of the old chief is a quiet, peaceful sort of a fellow, without kith or kin, and the only living friend he has in the world is his dog Prince, a mongrel. This dog is his sole companion. Dan Halstead lives with only one ray of hope to brighten his existence—that the red man will return some day to reclaim his hunting grounds and that he will then become a true Indian again and adopt the costume and manners of his race—Newark News.

REV. DR. TALMAGE.

DISCOURSE BY THE EMINENT DIVINE LAST SUNDAY.

Subject: Now is a Time For Rejoicing—Pens of Praise For the Victories of Peace—The Triumphs of Husbandry—Conquests of the Pen.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—This discourse of Dr. Talmage is a national congratulation over the achievements of brain and hand during the past twelve months. The texts are: I Corinthians ix, 10, "He that ploweth shall plow in hope;" Isaiah xli, 7, "He that smootheth with the hammer;" Judges v, 14, "They that handle the pen of the writer."

There is a table being spread across the top of the two great ranges of mountains which ridge this continent, a table which reaches from the Atlantic to the Pacific sea. It is the Thanksgiving table of the nation. They will come from the East and the West and the North and the South and sit at it. On it are smoking the products of all lands, birds of every aviary, cattle from every pasture, fish from every lake, feathered spoils from every farm. The fruit baskets bend down under the products plucked from the peach fields of Maryland, the apple orchards of Western New York, the orange groves of Florida, the vineyards of Ohio and the nuts thrashed from New England woods. The bread is white from the wheat fields of Illinois and Michigan, the banqueters are adorned with California gold, and the table is agleam with Nevada silver, and the feast is warmed with the fire grates heaped up with Pennsylvania coal. The hall is spread with carpets from Lowell mills, and at night the lights will flash from bronzed brackets of Philadelphia manufacture.

Welcome, Thanksgiving Day! Whatever we may think of New England theology, we all like New England Thanksgiving Day. What means the steady rush to the depots and the long rail trains darting their lanterns along the tracks of the Boston and Lowell, the Georgia Central, the Chicago Great Western, the St. Paul and Duluth and the Southern railway? Ask the happy group in the New England farm house; ask the villagers whose song of praise in the morning will come over the Berkshire hills; ask all the plantations of the South which have adopted the New England custom of setting apart a day of thanksgiving. Oh, it is a great day of national festivity! Clap your hands, ye people, and shout aloud for joy! Through the organ pipes let there come down the thunder of a nation's rejoicing! Blow the cornet! Wave the palm branches! "Oh, that men would praise the Lord for His goodness and for His wonderful works to the children of men!"

For two years and a half this nation has been celebrating the triumph of sword and gun and battery. We have sung martial airs and cheered returning heroes and sounded the requiem for the slain in battle. Methinks it will be a healthful change if on this year's Thanksgiving in church and homestead we celebrate the victories of the plow, the hammer and the pen, for nothing was done at Santiago or Manila that was of more importance than that which in the last year has been done in farmer's field and mechanic's shop and author's study by those who never wore an epaulet or shot a Spaniard or went a hundred miles from their own doorsill. Come up, farmers and mechanics and literary men and get your dues as far as I can pay them.

Things have marvelously changed. Time was when the stern edict of governments forbade religious assemblages. Those who dared to be so unloyal to their king as to acknowledge loyalty to the Head of the universe were punished. Churches awfully silent in worship suddenly heard their doors swung open, and down upon the church aisle a score of muskets thumped as the leaders bade them "Ground arms!" This custom of having the fathers, the husbands, the sons and brothers at the entrance of the pew is a custom which came down from olden time, when it was absolutely necessary that the father or brother should sit at the end of the church pew fully armed to defend the helpless portion of the family. But now how changed! Severe penalties are threatened against any one who shall interrupt religious services, and annually, at the command of the highest official in the United States, we gather together for thanksgiving and holy worship. To-day I would stir your souls to joyful thanksgiving while I speak of the mercies of God and in unconventional way recount the conquests of the plow, the hammer and the pen.

Most of the implements of husbandry have been superseded by modern inventions, but the plow has never lost its reign. It has furrowed its way through all the ages. Its victories have been waved by the barley of Palestine, the wheat of Persia, the flax of Germany, the ricestalks of China, the rich grasses of Italy. It has turned up the mammoth of Siberia, the mastadon of Egypt and the pine groves of Thessaly. Its iron foot hath marched where Moses wrote and Homer sang and Aristotle taught and Alexander mounted his war charger. It hath wrung its colter on Norwegian wilds and ripped out the stumps of the American forest, pushing its way through the savannahs of the Carolinas and trembling in the grasp of the New Hampshire yeomanry. American civilization hath kept step with the rattle of its clevises, and on its beam hath ridden thrift and national plenty.

I do not wonder that the Japanese and the Chinese and the Phoenicians so particularly extolled husbandry or that Cincinnatus went from the consulship to the plow or that Noah was a farmer before he became a shipbuilder or that Elisha was in the field plowing with twelve yoke of oxen when the mantle fell on him or that the Egyptians in their paganism worshiped the ox as a tiller of their lands.

To get an appreciation of what the American plow has accomplished I take you into the western wilderness. Here in the dense forest I find a collection of Indian wigwams. With belts of wampum the men lazily sit on the skins of deer, smoking their feathered calumets, or, driven forth by hunger, I track their moccasins far away as they make the forest echoes crazy with their wild halloo or fish in the waters of the still lake. Now tribes challenge and council fires blaze, and war whoops ring, and chiefs lift the tomahawks for battle. After awhile wagons from the Atlantic coast come to those forests. By day trees are felled, and by night bonfires keep off the wolves. Log cabins rise, and the great trees begin to throw their branches in the path of the conquering white man. Farms are cleared. Stumps, the monuments of slain forests, crumble and are burned. Villages appear, with smiths at the bellows, masons on the wall, carpenters on the housetop. Churches rise in honor of the Great Spirit whom the red men ignorantly worship. Steamers on the lake convey merchandise to her wharf and carry east the uncounted bushels that have come to the market. Bring hither wreaths of wheat and crowns of rye, and let the mills and the machinery of barn and field unite their voices to celebrate the triumph, for the wilderness hath retreated and the plow hath conquered.

Within our time the Presidential Cabinet has added a Secretaryship of Agriculture. Societies are constantly being established for the education of the plow. Journals devoted to this department are circulated through all the country. Farmers through such culture have learned the attributes of soils and found out that almost every field has its peculiar preferences. Lands have their choice as to which product they will bear. Marshy lowlands touched by the plow rise and wring out their wet locks in the trenches. Islands born down on the coast of Peru and Bolivia are transported to our fields and make our vegetation leap. Highways by the plow are changed from buggy ruts into roads like the Roman Appian way. Fields go through bloodless revolutions until there the farmhouse stands. In summer honeysuckles clamber over the trellises. On one side there stands a garden, which is only a farm condensed. On the other side there is a stretch of meadow land with thick grass, and as the wind breathes over it it looks like the deep green ocean waves. There goes a brook, tarrying long in its windings, as if loath to leave the spot where the reeds sing, and the cattle stand at noonday under the shadow of the weeping willows. In winter the sled comes through the crackling snow with huge logs from the woods, and the barn floor quakes under the thumpings of the flail or the deafening buzz of the thrashing machine. Horses stand beneath mow poles bending under loads of hay and whinny to the well filled oat bins. Comfort laughs at the wind rattling the sashes and clicking the icicles from the eaves.

Praise God for the great harvests that have been reaped this last year! Some of them injured by drought or insects or freshets were not as bountiful as usual, others far in excess of what have ever before been gathered, while higher prices will help make up for any decreased supply. Sure sign of agricultural prosperity we have in the fact that cattle and horses and sheep and swine and all farm animals have during the last two years increased in value. Twenty million swine slaughtered this last year, and yet so many hogs left.

If the ancients in their festivals presented their rejoicings before Ceres, the goddess of corn and tillage, shall we neglect to rejoice in the presence of the great God now? From Atlantic to Pacific let the American nation celebrate the victories of the plow.

I come next to speak of the conquests of the American hammer. Its iron arm has fought its way down from the beginning to the present. Under its swing the city of Enoch rose, and the foundry of Tubal Cain resounded, and the ark floated on the deluge. At its clang ancient temples spread their magnificence and chariots rushed out fit for the battle. Its iron fist smote the marble of Paros, and it rose in sculptured Minervas and struck the Pentelican mines until from them a Parthenon was reared whiter than a palace of ice and pure as an angel's dream. Damascus and Jerusalem and Rome and Venice and Paris and London and Philadelphia and New York and Washington are but the long protracted echoes of the hammer. Under the hammer everywhere dwellings have gone up, ornate and luxurious. Schoolhouses, lyceums, hospitals and asylums have added additional glory to the enterprise as well as the beneficence of the American people.

Vast public works have been constructed, bridges have been built over rivers and tunnels dug under mountains and churches of matchless beauty have gone up for Him who had not where to lay His head, and the old theory is exploded that because Christ was born in a manger we must always worship Him in a barn.

Edward Eggleston and Will Carleton and Mark Twain and John Kendrick Bangs and Marion Harland and Margaret Sangster and Stockton and Churchill and Hopkinson Smith and Irving Bacheller and Julia Ward Howe and Amelia Barr and Brander Matthews and Thomas Nelson Page and Elizabeth Stuart Phelps and William Dean Howells and a score of others, some of them fixed stars and some meteors.

As the pen has advanced our colleges and universities and observatories have followed the waving of its plume. Our literature is of two kinds—that on foot and that on the wing. By the former I mean the firm and substantial works which will go down through the centuries. When, on the other hand, I speak of literature on the wing, I mean the newspapers of the land. They fly swiftly and vanish, but leave permanent results upon the public mind. They fall noiselessly as a snow flake, but with the strength of an Alpine glacier.

This unparalleled multiplication of intelligence will either make or break us. Every morning and evening our telegraph offices, with huge wire rakes, gather up the news of the nation and of the whole world, and men write to some purpose when they make a pen out of a thunderbolt.

It needs great energy and decision and perseverance for a man to be ignorant in this country to-day. It seems to me that it requires more effort for him to keep out knowledge than to let it in. The mailbags at the smallest postoffices disgorge large packages of intelligence for the people. Academies with maps, globes and philosophic apparatus have been taking the places of those institutions where thirty or forty years ago you were put to the torture. Men selected for their qualifications are intrusted with the education of our youth instead of those teachers who formerly with a drover's shout and goad compelled the young generations up the hill of science. Happy childhood! What with broken tops and torn kites and the trial of losing the best marble and stumping your foot against a stone and somebody sticking a pin into you to see whether you will jump and examination day, with four or five wise men looking over their spectacles to see if you can parse the first page in Young's "Night Thoughts" until verbs and conjunctions and participles and prepositions get into a grand riot.

How things have marvelously changed! We used to cry because we had to go to school. Now children cry if they cannot go. Many of them can intelligently discuss political topics long before they have seen a ballot box or, teased by some poetic muse, can compose articles for the newspapers. Philosophy and astronomy and chemistry have been so improved that he must be a genius at dullness who knows nothing about them.

On one shelf of a poor man's library is more practical knowledge than in the 400,000 volumes of ancient Alexandria, and education is possible for the most indigent, and no legislature or congress for the last fifty years has assembled which has not had it in rail splitters and farmers and drovers or men who have been accustomed to toiling with the hand and the foot.

Lift up your eyes, O nation of God's right hand, at the glorious prospects! Build larger your barns for the harvests; dig deeper the vats for the spoil of the vineyards; enlarge the warehouses for the merchandise; multiply galleries of art for the pictures and statues. Advance, O nation of God's right hand, but remember that national wealth, if unsanctified, is sumptuous waste, is moral ruin, is magnificent woe, is splendid rottenness, is gilded death! Woe to us for the wine vats if drunkenness wallows in them! Woe to us for the harvests if greed sickles them! Woe to us for the merchandise if avarice swallows it! Woe to us for the cities if misrule walks them! Woe to the land if God defying crime debauches it! Our only safety is in more Bibles, more churches, more free schools, more good men and more good women, more consecrated printing presses, more of the glorious gospel of the Son of God, which will yet extirpate all wrongs and introduce all blessedness.

But the preachers on Thanksgiving morning will not detain with long sermons their hearers from the home group. The housekeepers will be angry if the guests do not arrive until the viands are cold. Set the chairs to the table—the easy chairs for grandfather and grandmother, if they be still alive; the high chair for the youngest, but not the least. Then put out your hand to take the full cup of thanksgiving. Lift it and bring it toward your lips, your hands trembling with emotion, and if the chalice shall overflow and trickle a few drops on the white cloth that covers the table do not be disturbed, but let it suggest to you the words of the psalmist and lead you thankfully to say, "My cup runneth over!"

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR DECEMBER 8.

Subject: Moses and Pharaoh Ex. xi., 1-10—Golden Text, Isa. lviii., 9—Memory Verses, 4-7—Commentary on the Day's Lesson.

Introduction.—Moses asked that they might go three days' journey into the wilderness, where they would be free from all intrusion, and where the worship of God which had been neglected could be revived. Many seem to think that this proposition on the part of Moses was not sincere, and that he intended to go and not return. But there is no suggestion that any such duplicity was planned. They would have gone and worshipped and returned, had they been permitted to do so; and then God would have made further demands upon Pharoah. It is not necessary for Jehovah to resort to trickery in order to accomplish His purposes.

1. "The Lord said." Or, as some think, the Lord had said, at some time in the past. Verses 1-3 are evidently thrown in here in parenthesis, as verses 4-8 seem to be a continuation of the interview Moses was having with Pharaoh at the close of the preceding chapter. Pharaoh had ordered Moses to leave his presence, and threatened him with death if he saw his face again (10:28, 29); and Moses said he would see his face no more, but before he left Pharaoh he threatened him with the death of the first born. It was a terrible threat, but was carried out to the letter soon after. 12:29-33. "One plague more." One more heavy blow must fall upon this hard-hearted monarch and his land, ere he will be compelled to let go the favored objects of Jehovah's sovereign grace. The king of Egypt had ample warning of the terrible calamity that was to come upon them, and if he had repented and humbled himself it might have been averted.

2. "Let every man borrow," etc. "Let them ask every man," etc. R. V. Borrow is a wrong and misleading translation. God commanded the Israelites to ask or demand a certain recompense for their past services, and He inclined the hearts of the Egyptians to give liberally; and this, far from being a matter of oppression, wrong, or even charity, was no more than a very partial recompense for the long and painful services which we may say 600,000 Israelites had rendered to Egypt, during many years. There can be no doubt that during their servitude the profits of their labor went wholly to the Egyptians. God has many ways of balancing accounts, of righting the oppressed, and compelling those who have done wrong to make restitution. "Jewels," etc. The work translated "jewels" may be translated "articles" or "goods." "The Israelites received gold and silver, probably both in coin and in plate of different kinds."

3. "Very great." Because of the miracles he had wrought and the plagues he had brought upon the people. "This seems to be mentioned as a reason why no attempt had been made against his life."

4. "About midnight." God's judgments come upon sinners when they least expect it, and in their moments of fancied security. The darkness can not hide from God; we know not what will be in the approaching night. The wicked may awake to find that the stern messenger of eternal justice has seized upon them. "Will I go out." In this last plague God is represented as descending in person. This was designed to impress Pharaoh with the terrible character of the next judgment.

5. "The first born." It has been suggested that this might not in every case have meant the oldest child in the family, as that child might now have been dead or absent; but, inasmuch as there was not a house where there was not one dead (12: 30), the word in some cases must have meant the "most eminent," or the "best beloved." In this sense the term is frequently used. "Behind the mill." The poor captive slave employed in the hardest labor. It was the custom then, as it is with the Arabs at present, to grind their corn with hand-mills, turned by their women servants, who, for that purpose, stood behind the mill.

6. "Great cry." The Egyptians were excessive in their manifestations of grief. "They whipped, beat and tore themselves, and when a relative died they ran into the streets and howled in the most lamentable and frantic manner." How dreadful must have been the scene when there was one dead in every house. No such wail ever went up before or since.

7. "Shall not a dog," etc. The Israelites were not only to be free from death, but they were to depart without being molested in any way; the dogs would not even bark at them. "Doth put a difference." The Egyptians were crying, helpless, frightened, dead. The Israelites were quiet, peaceful, protected, blessed. So the Lord always puts a difference between His people and His enemies. One has the promise of this life and of that which is to come; the other has nothing to expect but indignation and wrath from the hands of an offended God.

8. "Get thee out." See the fulfilment of this in Ex. 12: 31-36. "In a great anger." "In hot anger."—R. V. "Moses was not in an unholy passion; he was grieved at the perversity of a wicked soul."

10. "The Lord hardened Pharaoh's heart." God is sometimes said to do what He merely permits to be done, because He can not wisely prevent it. But, by studying the narrative it will be seen that Pharoah hardened his own heart. "Harden" is used nineteen times in this account. Eleven times God is said to harden Pharaoh's heart, five times the simple statement is made that it was hardened, and three times it is said that he hardened it himself. "In the narrative of what actually took place, it is not till after the sixth plague that it is said that the Lord hardened his heart, and only after the eighth plague is the agency exclusively ascribed to God."

The project to drain the Zuyder Zee, of which a good deal was spoken some five years ago, when it was made a part of the Dutch Government programme, has been withdrawn from the States General by the new Ministry. The reasons given for the withdrawal of the scheme from the Netherlands Parliament are the state of the public finances (requiring the practice of economy) and the fact that the low ruling price for arable land would make the creation of new agricultural holdings undesirable. The Zuyder Zee was once dry; but the reconquest of this part of Holland will be reserved for a future generation of Dutch.

An effort is to be made to remove a large red oak tree from the wildest section of Arkansas to Forest Park, St. Louis, without injuring it. The tree is 160 feet high and twelve feet in diameter at the base. A double tramway will be built from the tree to the river, where it will be floated and towed to St. Louis. It is estimated that this will occupy six months.

THE report of the State Examiner on the books and accounts of chilton's officials is a very flattering one, and reflects great credit upon our county officers.

IT appears from the complaints of some of our subscribers that an explanation of last week's issue of THE BANNER is required. Last week some of our subscribers received their paper on time, but it did not contain the report of the Grand Jury, others got their paper on time and in it they found the report.

The explanation is very simple. THE BANNER gives you the news, when possible while it is news. In order to give you the news on time, THE BANNER is compelled to go to press on Thursday morning or else we cannot catch the mails. We held back last week as long as we possibly could for the Grand Jury to make its report. Had we held back any longer than we did a great number of our subscribers would not have received their paper until Monday or later of this week when news would be stale. And so, to give you all the other news we gave you all the news that was possible. The Grand Jury did not report until 3 . m Thursday; we had already printed several hundred papers, but we considered the remaining subscribers, whose papers were not yet printed, were entitled to the latest news, so we took out some matter from the first edition and substituted the reyort of the Grand Jury. You can always depend upon THE BANNER giving you the very latest news.

In this connection, a word to our correspondents would be in place. News is news! If you send state news don't be surprised if it is left out. Send news while it is fresh and it there is any possibility of squeezing it into our columns we will get it in—we are noted for squeezing more into the columns of THE BANNER than any other newspaper in Alabama. Don't stretch it out, say all that you possibly can in as short a space as you know how. If you don't, we may have to cut it short. Don't send a letter of twenty pages, as a good friend did recently. We cannot give one correspondent all the paper and a supplement also. It may be the best thing that ever was written but we have not the time or space to publish it. Don't send your communications so that we receive them on Thursday morning because by that time our columns are filled up, maybe with not such interesting matter as yours, but it would delay us another day to take out the other matter and put in yours.

We could go on indefinitely, but after all it must be left to the common sense of correspondents, with this one understanding: Send us NEWS; send it while it is NEWS, not two or three weeks after the affair has happen. If you wish to express an opinion upon public events, send your letter in as soon as you can, but in any event not later than Tuesday morning of each week, or we may be unable to publish it. It takes time to set your communication even if it is not twenty pages in lenght.

THE BANNER has published more correspondence than any other paper in Alabama, but we cannot do impossibilities. We shall be in a much better position in a few weeks to meet our correspondents requirements when we get into our new building and get in our steam press.

REPORT OF GRAND JURY.

To Hon. N. D. Denson,
Judge of the Fifth Judicial Circuit:

We, the Grand Jury, empanelled and charged by your Honor, for the Fall Term of the circuit court of chilton county, beg leave to submit this our final report.

As a result of our labors, having enquired into 64 alleged violations of our laws, we have brought into your Honor's court 26 indictments.

Our investigations show that the county poor are well cared for, and that the public roads of the county are in fairly good condition.

The books and bonds of our county officers, as far as we have been able to ascertain from a limited examination, we find correctly kept and solvent.

Our county finances we find in good condition, and the statement submitted to us by the county Treasurer and attached hereto, and marked "Exhibit A" shows cash on hand of the General Fund $626.38, and the Fine and Forfeiture Fund, $192.68.

The county jail we find in fairly good condition. We hereby admonish the Sheriff to use added care and diligence in preventing the escape of prisoners from the custody of the law.

We desire to impress upon our county Tax Assessor the necessity of complying strictly with the law in the discharge of his official duty, and especially in the administering of the oaths required by law.

We desire to thank your honor for the able charge defining our duties, and to our Solicitor, Hon S. L. Brewer, for his courteous assistance.

Having completed our duties we now ask to be discharged.

Respectfully submitted.

A FINE TRIBUTE TO JUDGE ADAMS

From the Blocton Messenger.

We notice in a recent issue of the Centreville Press that "Burnt Arm" Adams met Jno. Knox in a joint debate The article is rather a severe reflection on the Rev. Sam Adams.

We believe most of the people of Bibb, irrespective of political party or religious creed, are admirers of Mr Adams. His father was killed in the service of the Confederacy and young Sam Adams is said to have plowed a steer four or five years, cultivating a small farm that hardly afforded a subsistence for his mother and younger brothers. But this boy Sam had in him the stuff that heroes are made of, and he toiled and struggled along, patiently following his little steer in the field, sharing with his mother and the little ones a frugal supper of bread and spring water, and then to his night fire of pine knots, by the flickering blaze of which he learned to read and write and make figures. But the good mother of Sam lived to see her plow boy develop into manhood; to see him converted to Jesus, and then began the life work of this earnest boy. Feeling called to preach, he received orders from the Baptist church and his first efforts in the pulpit are said to have been equally embarrassing to himself and congregation, but his seeming failures only gave strength to each succeeding effort, until the poor, gawky young preacher gradually became one of the most forcible and eloquent pulpit orators of this section

Then when a large percentage of Democrats became dissatisfied with their party machinery, Sam, who was a Democrat, espouse the cause of the Third party. He thought he was right and for him to think that was to go to work for this new cause with the same energy that had dominated his whole life. He toiled for its success and the reputation of Sam Adams as a stump speaker soon became national.

From the awkward little country boy that plowed the steer to make bread for a dear old widowed mother, Sam Adams became a great preacher, a great orator and a great leader. He is the acknowledged head of the Populist party in Alabama and was offered the nomination for Governor but refused it.

We differ with him in politics a little, but we do admire his courage, his manliness, his fearless adherence to his convictions. We admire Sam Adams as one of old Bibb's self made men—one of nature's noblemen.

HOME AND CHILD

Does your horse "feel his oats"? What a difference between the grain-fed and the grass-fed horse! The first strong and full of ginger, the second flabby, weak and tired out before he begins. The feeding makes the difference.

Children are not alike either. One is rosy, bright-eyed, full of life and laughter, another is pale, weak and dull. The feeding again is responsible.

Sickly children need special feeding. They don't "feel their oats". Scott's Emulsion adds just the right richness to their diet. It is like grain to the horse. The child gets new appetite and strong digestion.

Scott's Emulsion is more than food. It is a strong medicine. It rouses up dull children, puts new flesh on thin ones and red blood into pale ones. It makes children grow. Scott's Emulsion makes ordinary food do its duty.

This picture represents the Trade Mark of Scott's Emulsion and is on the wrapper of every bottle.

All Doctors have tried to cure CATARRH by the use of powders, acid gases, inhalers and drugs in paste form. Then powders dry up the mucous membranes causing them to crack open and bleed. The powerful acids used in the inhalers have entirely eaten away the same membranes that their makers have aimed to cure, while pastes and ointments cannot reach the disease. An old and experienced practitioner who has for many years made a close study and specialty of the treatment of CATARRH, has at last perfected a Treatment which when faithfully used, not only relieves at once, but permanently cures CATARRH, by removing the cause, stopping the discharges, and curing all inflammation. It is the only remedy known to science that actually reaches the afflicted parts. This wonderful remedy is known as "SNUFFLES" the GUARANTEED CATARRH CURE and is sold at the extremely low price of One Dollar, each package containing internal and external medicine sufficient for a full month's treatment and everything necessary to its perfect use

HEAD NOISES CEASE IMMEDIATELY.

F. A. WERMAN, OF BALTIMORE, SAYS:

BALTIMORE, Md., March 30, 1901.

Gentlemen:—Being entirely cured of deafness, thanks to your treatment, I will now give you a full history of my case, to be used at your discretion.

About five years ago my right ear began to sing, and this kept on getting worse, until I lost my hearing in this ear entirely.

I underwent a treatment for catarrh, for three months, without any success, consulted a number of physicians, among others, the most eminent ear specialist of this city, who told me that only an operation could help me, and even that only temporarily, that the head noises would then cease, but the hearing in the affected ear would be lost forever.

I then saw your advertisement accidentally in a New York paper, and ordered your treatment. After I had used it only a few days according to your directions, the noises ceased, and to-day, after five weeks, my hearing in the diseased ear has been entirely restored. I thank you heartily and beg to remain Very truly yours,

THE HOME GOLD CURE.

An Ingenious Treatment by which Drunkards are being Cured Daily in Spite of Themselves.

No Nervous Doses. No Weakening of the Nerves. A Pleasant and Positive Cure for the Liquor Habit.

It is now generally known and understood that drunkenness is a disease and not weakness. A body filled with poison, and nerves completely shattered by periodical or constant use of intoxicating liquors, requires an antidote capable of neutralizing and eradicating this poison, and destroying the craving for intoxicants. Sufferers may now cure themselves at home without publicity or loss of time from business by this wonderful "HOME GOLD CURE" which has been perfected after many years of close study and treatment of inebriates. The faithful use according to directions of this wonderful discovery is positively guaranteed to cure the most obstinate case, no matter how hard a drinker. Our records show the marvelous transformation of thousands of Drunkards into sober, industrious and upright men.

WIVES CURE YOUR HUSBANDS!! CHILDREN CURE YOUR FATHERS!! this remedy is in no sense a nostrum but is a specific for this disease only, and is so skillfully devised and prepared that it is thoroughly soluble and pleasant to the taste, so that it can be given in a cup of tea or coffee without the knowledge of the person taking it. Thousands of Drunkards have cured themselves with this priceless remedy, and as many more have been cured and made temperate men by having the "CURE" administered by loving friends and relatives without their knowledge in coffee or tea, and believe today that they discontinued drinking of their own free will. DO NOT WAIT. Do not be deluded by apparent and misleading "improvement." Drive out the disease at once and for all time. The "HOME GOLD CURE" is sold at the extremely low price of One Dollar, thus placing within reach of every body a treatment more effectual than others costing $25 to $50. Full directions accompany each package. Special advice by skilled physicians when requested without extra charge. Sent prepaid to any part of the world on receipt of One Dollar. Address Dept. THE MESSAGE

Of President Roosevelt to Congress.

IS AN INTERESTING DOCUMENT

He Refers Forcibly to All the Important Questions of the Day and Gives His Ideas as to the Best Remedies For Correcting Present Evils.

Washington, Dec. 3.—The president in his annual message to congress says:

The congress assembles this year under the shadow of a great calamity. On the 6th of September President McKinley was shot by an anarchist while attending the Pan-American exposition at Buffalo and died in that city on the 14th of that month.

Of the last seven elected presidents he is the third who has been murdered, and the bare recital of this fact is sufficient to justify grave alarm among all loyal American citizens. Moreover, the circumstances of this, the third assassination of an American president, have a peculiarly sinister significance. Both President Lincoln and President Garfield were killed by assassins of types unfortunately not uncommon in history, President Lincoln falling a victim to the terrible passions aroused by four years of civil war and President Garfield to the revengeful vanity of a disappointed office seeker. President McKinley was killed by an utterly depraved criminal belonging to that body of criminals who object to all governments, good and bad alike, who are against any form of popular liberty if it is guaranteed by even the most just and liberal laws and who are as hostile to the upright exponent of a free people's sober will as to the tyrannical and irresponsible despot.

Anarchy and Anarchists.

The president continues with a eulogy of Mr. McKinley, then turns to the subject of anarchy, denouncing its doctrines and preachers. He says:

I earnestly recommend to the congress that in the exercise of its wise discretion it should take into consideration the coming to this country of anarchists or persons professing principles hostile to all government and justifying the murder of those placed in authority. Such individuals as those who not long ago gathered in open meeting to glorify the murder of King Humbert of Italy perpetrate a crime, and the law should insure their rigorous punishment. They and those like them should be kept out of this country, and if found here they should be promptly deported to the country whence they came, and farreaching provision should be made for the punishment of those who stay. No matter calls more urgently for the wisest thought of the congress.

A Subject For Federal Courts.

The federal courts should be given jurisdiction over any man who kills or attempts to kill the president or any man who by the constitution or by law is in line of succession for the presidency, while the punishment for an unsuccessful attempt should be proportioned to the enormity of the offense against our institutions.

Anarchy is a crime against the whole human race, and all mankind should band against the anarchist. His crime should be made an offense against the law of nations, like piracy and that form of man stealing known as the slave trade.

The president next considers business conditions, which he finds highly satisfactory. He continues:

The tremendous and highly complex industrial development which went on with ever accelerated rapidity during the latter half of the nineteenth century brings us face to face at the beginning of the twentieth with very serious social problems. The old laws and the old customs which had almost the binding force of law were once quite sufficient to regulate the accumulation and distribution of wealth. Since the industrial changes which have so enormously increased the productive power of mankind they are no longer sufficient.

Trade Combinations.

The growth of cities has gone on beyond comparison faster than the growth of the country, and the upbuilding of the great industrial centers has meant a startling increase not merely in the aggregate of wealth, but in the number of very large individual and especially of very large corporate fortunes. The creation of these great corporate fortunes has not been due to the tariff nor to any other governmental action, but to natural causes in the business world, operating in other countries as they operate in our own.

The process has groused much antagonism, a great part of which is wholly without warrant. It is not true that as the rich have grown richer the poor have grown poorer. On the contrary, never before has the average man, the wageworker, the farmer, the small trader, been so well off as in this country and at the present time. There have been abuses connected with the accumulation of wealth, yet it remains true that a fortune accumulated in legitimate business can be accumulated by the person specially benefited only on condition of conferring immense incidental benefits upon others. Successful enterprise of the type which benefits all mankind can only exist if the conditions are such as to offer great prizes as the rewards of success.

Reasons For Caution.

The president adds that there are many reasons for caution in dealing with corporations. He says:

The same business conditions which have produced the great aggregations of corporate and individual wealth have made them very potent factors in international commercial competition.

Moreover, it cannot too often be pointed out that to strike with ignorant violence at the interests of one set of men almost inevitably endangers the interests of all. The fundamental rule in our national life—the rule which underlies all others—is that, on the whole and in the long run, we shall go up or down together.

The mechanism of modern business is so delicate that extreme care must be taken not to interfere with it in a spirit of rashness or ignorance. In dealing with business interests, for the government to undertake by crude and ill considered legislation to do what may turn out to be bad, would be to incur the risk of such farreaching national disaster that it would be preferable to undertake nothing at all. The men who demand the impossible or the undesirable serve as the allies of the forces with which they are nominally at war, for they hamper those who would endeavor to find out in rational fashion what the wrongs really are and to what extent and in what manner it is practicable to apply remedies.

How to Correct the Evils.

All this is true, and yet it is also true that there are real and grave evils, one of the chief being overcapitalization because of its many baleful consequences, and a resolute and practical effort must be made to correct these evils.

It is no limitation upon property rights or freedom of contract to require that when men receive from government the privilege of doing business under corporate form, which frees them from individual responsibility and enables them to call into their enterprises the capital of the public, they shall do so upon absolutely truthful representations as to the value of the property in which the capital is to be invested. Corporations engaged in interstate commerce should be regulated if they are found to exercise a license working to the public injury. It should be as much the aim of those who seek for social betterment to rid the business world of crimes of cunning as to rid the entire body politic of crimes of violence. Great corporations exist only because they are created and safeguarded by our institutions, and it is therefore our right and our duty to see that they work in harmony with these institutions.

Publicity the First Essential.

The first essential in determining how to deal with the great industrial combinations is knowledge of the facts—publicity. In the interest of the public the government should have the right to inspect and examine the workings of the great corporations engaged in interstate business. Publicity is the only sure remedy which we can now invoke. What further remedies are needed in the way of governmental regulation or taxation can only be determined after publicity has been obtained by process of law and in the course of administration. The first requisite is knowledge, full and complete—knowledge which may be made public to the world.

Artificial bodies, such as corporations and joint stock or other associations, depending upon any statutory law for their existence or privileges should be subject to proper governmental supervision, and full and accurate information as to their operations should be made public regularly at reasonable intervals.

The large corporations, commonly called trusts, though organized in one state, always do business in many states, often doing very little business in the state where they are incorporated. There is utter lack of uniformity in the state laws about them, and, as no state has any exclusive interest in or power over their acts, it has in practice proved impossible to get adequate regulation through state action. Therefore, in the interest of the whole people, the nation should, without interfering with the power of the states in the matter itself, also assume power of supervision and regulation over all corporations doing an interstate business.

Amend Constitution If Necessary.

When the constitution was adopted, at the end of the eighteenth century, no human wisdom could foretell the sweeping changes, alike in industrial and political conditions, which were to take place by the beginning of the twentieth century. At that time it was accepted as a matter of course that the several states were the proper authorities to regulate, so far as was then necessary, the comparatively insignificant and strictly localized corporate bodies of the day. The conditions are now wholly different, and wholly different action is called for.

I believe that a law can be framed which will enable the national government to exercise control along the lines above indicated, profiting by the experience gained through the passage and administration of the interstate commerce act. If, however, the judgment of the congress is that it lacks the constitutional power to pass such an act, then a constitutional amendment should be submitted to confer the power.

There should be created a cabinet officer, to be known as secretary of commerce and industries, as provided in the bill introduced at the last session of the congress. It should be his province to deal with commerce in its broadest sense, including among many other things whatever concerns labor and all matters affecting the great business corporations and our merchant marine.

Labor.

The president declares that he regards it necessary to re-enact the Chinese exclusion law. In regard to labor he says that the government should provide in its contracts that all work should be done under "fair" conditions and that all night work should be forbidden for women and children as well as excessive overtime. He continues:

Very great good has been and will be accomplished by associations or unions of wageworkers when managed with forethought and when they combine insistence upon their own rights with law abiding respect for the rights of others. The display of these qualities in such bodies is a duty to the nation no less than to the associations themselves. Finally, there must also in many cases be action by the government in order to safeguard the rights and interests of all. Under our constitution there is much more scope for such action by the state and the municipality than by the nation. But on points such as those touched on above the national government can act.

He asserts that the immigration laws are unsatisfactory and that a law should be enacted to keep out not only anarchists, but persons of a low moral tendency, or of unsavory reputation, and those who are below a certain standard of economic fitness to enter our industrial field as competitors with American labor.

The Tariff and Reciprocity.

The president declares that nothing could be more unwise than to disturb the business interests of the country by any general tariff change at this time. He adds:

Yet it is not only possible, but eminently desirable, to combine with the stability of our economic system a supplementary system of reciprocal benefit and obligation with other nations. Such reciprocity is an incident and result of the firm establishment and preservation of our present economic policy. It was specially provided for in the present tariff law.

Reciprocity must be treated as the handmaiden of protection. Our first duty is to see that the protection granted by the tariff in every case where it is needed is maintained, and that reciprocity be sought for so far as it can safely be done without injury to our home industries. Just how far this is must be determined according to the individual case, remembering always that every application of our tariff policy to meet our shifting national needs must be conditioned upon the cardinal fact that the duties must never be reduced below the point that will cover the difference between the labor cost here and abroad. The well being of the wageworker is a prime consideration of our entire policy of economic legislation.

Need For Wider Markets.

Subject to this proviso of the proper protection necessary to our industrial well being at home, the principle of reciprocity must command our hearty support. The phenomenal growth of our export trade emphasizes the urgency of the need for wider markets and for a liberal policy in dealing with foreign nations. Whatever is merely petty and vexatious in the way of trade restrictions should be avoided. The customers to whom we dispose of our surplus products in the long run, directly or indirectly, purchase those surplus products by giving us something in return. Their ability to purchase our products should as far as possible be secured by so arranging our tariff as to enable us to take from them those products which we can use without harm to our own industries and labor or the use of which will be of marked benefit to us.

It is most important that we should maintain the high level of our present prosperity. We have now reached the point in the development of our interests where we are not only able to supply our own markets, but to produce a constantly growing surplus for which we must find markets abroad. To secure these markets we can utilize existing duties in any case where they are no longer needed for the purpose of protection, or in any case where the article is not produced here and the duty is no longer necessary for revenue, as giving us something to offer in exchange for what we ask. The cordial relations with other nations which are so desirable will naturally be promoted by the course thus required by our own interests.

The natural line of development for a policy of reciprocity will be in connection with those of our productions which no longer require all of the support once needed to establish them upon a sound basis and with those others where either because of natural or of economic causes we are beyond the reach of successful competition.

I ask the attention of the senate to the reciprocity treaties laid before it by my predecessor.

The Merchant Marine.

The condition of the American merchant marine is such as to call for immediate remedial action by the congress. It is discreditable to us as a nation that our merchant marine should be utterly insignificant in comparison to that of other nations which we overtop in other forms of business. We should not longer submit to conditions under which only a trifling portion of our great commerce is carried in our own ships. To remedy this state of things would not merely serve to build up our shipping interests, but it would also result in benefit to all who are interested in the permanent establishment of a wider market for American products and would provide an auxiliary force for the navy. Ships work for their own countries just as railroads work for their terminal points. Shipping lines, if established to the principal countries with which we have dealings, would be of political as well as commercial benefit. From every standpoint it is unwise for the United States to continue to rely upon the ships of competing nations for the distribution of our goods. It should be made advantageous to carry American goods in American built ships.

At present American shipping is under certain great disadvantages when put in competition with the shipping of foreign countries. Many of the fast foreign steamships, at a speed of fourteen knots or above, are subsidized, and all our ships, sailing vessels and steamers alike, cargo carriers of slow speed and mail carriers of high speed, have to meet the fact that the original cost of building American ships is greater than is the case abroad; that the wages paid American officers and seamen are very much higher than those paid the officers and seamen of foreign competing countries, and that the standard of living on our ships is far superior to the standard of living on the ships of our commercial rivals. Our government should take such action as will remedy these inequalities. The American merchant marine should be restored to the ocean.

Financial.

The passage of the act establishing gold as the standard money has, it is declared, been shown to be timely and judicious. The president adds:

In many respects the national banking law furnishes sufficient liberty for the proper exercise of the banking function, but there seems to be need of better safeguards against the deranging influence of commercial crises and financial panics. Moreover, the currency of the country should be made responsive to the demands of our domestic trade and commerce.

Economy in expenditures is urged. Amendment of the interstate commerce act is advised to insure the cardinal provisions of that act. The work carried on by the department of agriculture is next considered and praised highly. The president then turns to forest preservation and irrigation of arid lands, saying that both are highly necessary. He would put all the work in connection with the forest reserves in charge of the bureau of forestry.

Irrigation.

The president continues by tracing the connection between the forest reserves and the water supply. He says:

The forests are natural reservoirs. By restraining the streams in flood and replenishing them in drought they make possible the use of waters otherwise wasted. They prevent the soil from washing and so protect the storage reservoirs from filling up with silt. Forest conservation is, therefore, an essential condition of water conservation.

The forests alone cannot, however, fully regulate and conserve the waters of the arid region. Great storage works are necessary to equalize the flow of streams and to save the flood waters. Their construction has been conclusively shown to be an undertaking too vast for private effort. Nor can it be best accomplished by the individual states acting alone. The government should construct and maintain these reservoirs as it does other public works. Where their purpose is to regulate the flow of streams, the water should be turned freely into the channels in the dry season to take the same course under the same laws as the natural flow.

The reclamation of the unsettled arid public lands presents a different problem. Here it is not enough to regulate the flow of streams. The object of the government is to dispose of the land to settlers who will build homes upon it. To accomplish this object water must be brought within their reach.

The pioneer settlers on the arid public domain chose their homes along streams from which they could themselves divert the water to reclaim their holdings. Such opportunities are practically gone. There remain, however, vast areas of public land which can be made available for homestead settlement, but only by reservoirs and main line canals impracticable for private enterprise. These irrigation works should be built by the national government. The lands reclaimed by them should be reserved by the government for actual settlers, and the cost of construction should, so far as possible, be repaid by the land reclaimed. The distribution of the water, the division of the streams among irrigators, should be left to the settlers themselves in conformity with state laws and without interference with those laws or with vested rights.

The declaration is made that in the arid states the only right to water which should be recognized is that of use. The president says that the doctrine of private ownership of water apart from land cannot prevail without causing wrong.

Insular Problems.

Insular questions are next treated. In Hawaii our aim must be to develop the territory on the traditional American lines. Porto Rico is declared to be thriving as never before. The attention of congress is called to the need of legislation concerning the island's public lands. In Cuba it is stated that much progress has been made toward putting the independent government of the island upon a firm footing, and it is declared that independence will be an accomplished fact. The president adds:

Elsewhere I have discussed the question of reciprocity. In the case of Cuba, however, there are weighty reasons of morality and of national interest why the policy should be held to have a peculiar application, and I most earnestly ask your attention to the wisdom, indeed to the vital need, of providing for a substantial reduction in the tariff duties on Cuban imports into the United States.

In dealing with the Philippine people we must show both patience and strength, forbearance and steadfast resolution. Our aim is high. We do not desire to do for the islanders merely what has elsewhere been done for tropic peoples by even the best foreign governments. We hope to do for them what has never before been done for any people of the tropics—to make them fit for self government after the fashion of the really free nations.

The only fear is lest in our overanxiety we give them a degree of independence for which they are unfit, thereby inviting reaction and disaster. As fast as there is any reasonable hope that in a given district the people can govern themselves self government has been given in that district. There is not a locality fitted for self government which has not received it. But it may well be that in certain cases it will have to be withdrawn because the inhabitants show themselves unfit to exercise it; such instances have already occurred. In other words, there is not the slightest chance of our failing to show a sufficiently humanitarian spirit. The danger comes in the opposite direction.

Troubles Ahead Yet.

There are still troubles ahead in the islands. The insurrection has become an affair of local banditti and marauders, who deserve no higher regard than the brigands of portions of the old world. Encouragement, direct or indirect, to these insurrectos stands on the same footing as encouragement to hostile Indians in the days when we still had Indian wars.

The president declares that the time has come for additional legislation for the Philippines. He says:

It is necessary that thes congress should pass laws by which the resources of the islands can be developed, so that franchises (for limited terms of years) can be granted to companies doing business in them and every encouragement be given to the incoming of business men of every kind. It is urgently necessary to enact suitable laws dealing with general transportation, mining, banking, currency, homesteads and the use and ownership of the lands and timber. These laws will give free play to industrial enterprise, and the commercial development which will surely follow will afford to the people of the islands the best proofs of the sincerity of our desire to aid them.

The Cable and the Canal.

I call your attention most earnestly to the crying need of a cable to Hawaii and the Philippines, to be continued from the Philippines to points in Asia. We should not defer a day longer than necessary the construction of such a cable. It is demanded not merely for commercial but for political and military considerations. Either the congress should immediately provide for the construction of a government cable or else an arrangement should be made by which like advantages to those accruing from a government cable may be secured to the government by contract with a private cable company.

No single great material work which remains to be undertaken on this continent is of such consequence to the American people as the building of a canal across the isthmus connecting North and South America. Its importance to the nation is by no means limited merely to its material effects upon our business prosperity, and yet with a view to these effects alone it would be to the last degree important for us immediately to begin it. While its beneficial effects would perhaps be most marked upon the Pacific coast and the gulf and South Atlantic states, it would also greatly benefit other sections. It is emphatically a work which it is for the interest of the entire country to begin and complete as soon as possible.

I am glad to be able to announce to you that our negotiations on this subject with Great Britain, conducted on both sides in a spirit of friendliness and mutual good will, have resulted in my being able to lay before the senate a treaty which, if ratified, will enable us to begin preparations for an isthmian canal at any time and which guarantees to this nation every right that it has ever asked in connection with the canal. It specifically provides that the United States alone shall do the work of building and assume the responsibility of safeguarding the canal and shall regulate its neutral use by all nations on terms of equality without the guarantee or interference of any outside nation from any quarter.

The Monroe Doctrine.

The Monroe doctrine should be the cardinal feature of the foreign policy of all the nations of the two Americas, as it is of the United States. The Monroe doctrine is a declaration that there must be no territorial aggrandizement by any non-American power at the expense of any American power on American soil. It is in nowise intended as hostile to any nation in the old world. Still less is it intended to give cover to any aggression by one new world power at the expense of any other. It is simply a step, and a long step, toward assuring the universal peace of the world by securing the possibility of permanent peace on this hemisphere.

During the past century other influences have established the permanence and independence of the smaller states of Europe. Through the Monroe doctrine we hope to be able to safeguard like independence and secure like permanence for the lesser among the new world nations.

This doctrine has nothing to do with the commercial relations of any American power save that it in truth allows each of them to form such as it desires. In other words, it is really a guarantee of the commercial independence of the Americas. We do not ask under this doctrine for any exclusive commercial dealings with any other American state. We do not guarantee any state against punishment if it undertakes it itself, provided that punishment does not take the form of the acquisition of territory by any non-American power. Our attitude in Cuba is a striking guarantee of our own good faith. We have not the slightest desire to acquire any territory at the expense of any of our neighbors.

The Navy.

The president devotes considerable space to the navy, the upbuilding of which, he says, should be steadily continued. The navy offers us, it is believed, the only means of making good the Monroe doctrine, and a strong navy is the best guarantee against war. He recommends that provision be made not only for more ships, but for more men. Four thousand additional men and 1,000 additional marines should be provided, as well as an increase in officers. After indorsing the naval militia forces the president says:

But in addition we should at once provide for a national naval reserve organized and trained under the direction of the navy department and subject to the call of the chief executive whenever war becomes imminent. This should be a real auxiliary to the navy in securing peace establishment and also material to be drawn on at once for manning our ships in time of war.

The Army.

It is not necessary to increase our army beyond its present size at this time, but it is necessary to keep it at the highest point of efficiency. The individual units who as officers and enlisted men compose this army seem to have good reason to believe it is fully efficient as those of any other army in the entire world. It is our duty to see that their training is of a kind to insure the highest possible expansion of power to these units when acting in combination.

A general staff should be created. Promotions should be made with regard to the good of the service. Congress ought to provide, the president adds, for field exercises. He continues:

Action should be taken in relation to the militia and to the raising of volunteer forces. Our militia law is absolete and worthless. The organization and armament of the national guard of the several states, which are recognized as militia in the appropriations by congress, should be made identical with those provided for the regular army. The obligations and duties of the militia in time of war should be carefully defined and a system established by which under which the method of procedure of raising volunteer forces should be prescribed in advance.

The Merit System.

The president indorses the merit system of making appointments and says:

I recommend the passage of a law which will extend the classified service to the District of Columbia and at least enable the president thus to extend it. In my judgment all laws providing for the temporary employment of clerks should hereafter contain a provision that they be selected under the civil service law.

It is important to have this system obtain at home, but it is even more important to have it applied rigidly in our insular possessions. The importance of improving the consular service by the passage of new laws is emphasized.

The president then turns to the Indian question. He says:

We should now break up the tribal funds, doing for them what government does for the tribal lands, that is, they should be divided into individual holdings. There will be a transition period during which the funds will in many cases have to be held in trust. This is the case also with the lands. A step should be put upon indiscriminate permission to Indians to lease their allotments. The policy should be steadily to make the Indian work like any other man on his ground. The marriage laws of the Indians should be made the same as those of the whites. In the schools the education should be elementary and largely industrial.

Cordial support from congress of people is asked for the St. Louis exposition. The Charleston exposition is commended to the good will of the people. The work of the Pan-American exposition is praised.

It is recommended that the office as now constituted should be made a permanent government bureau.

The Postal Service.

A tribute is paid to the postal service and the extension of free rural delivery is commended. The postal department should be sustained, the president says, in its efforts to remove the evils in connection with second class mail matter.

Much attention is paid to the situation in China, and the progress toward the establishment of peace there is appreciated. Stress is laid on the importance of our continuing to exercise moderation in the dealings with China. The president concludes his message as follows:

The death of Queen Victoria touched the people of the United States with a deep and heartfelt sorrow, to which our government gave full expression. President McKinley died, and in return received from every quarter of the British empire expressions of sympathy no less sincere. The death of the Empress Dowager of China in Germany also aroused the profound sympathy of the American people. Our sympathy was cordially reciprocated by Germany when the emperor was assassinated. Indeed from every quarter of the civilized world we received at the time of the president's death assurances of such grief and such sympathy as touch the hearts of our people in the midst of our affliction. We can only thank the Almighty that we are at peace with the nations of the world, and we firmly intend that we shall be such as to continue these international relations on terms of respect and good will.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

An Anatomical Explanation for That Quality in the Eyes.

It is a well-known fact the stronger activity of the nerves of the right half of the body (for not only the hand is concerned) must be ascribed to a preponderance of the left side of the brain, whose finer development, especially as the seat of the center of speech, is a matter of common knowledge. In a paper by Dr. Luddeckens in the Algemeines Journal der Uhrmacherkunst valuable information regarding the two hemispheres of the brain is furnished. A sketch touching on the history of evolution leads from the original symmetry of the organism to a subsequent symmetrical arrangement of the heart and the large blood vessels, from which it follows quite naturally that the two halves of the head are not placed on an equal footing as regards the distribution of the blood, and consequently of the blood pressure; and that, on the contrary, there must be, under normal conditions, a strong pressure on the arteries of the left side of the head. This theory is borne out by well known experience of anatomists and pathologists says the London Express, and a series of interesting observations. Of especial interest is the effect of the higher blood pressure upon the left eye. Dr. Luddeckens found in the latter, as compared with the right one, in a surprisingly large number of cases, a narrow pupil in consequence of a more filled-up condition of the vessels of the iris and upon closer examination a shorter construction of the eyeball. This furnishes reason for the fact that in a large number of persons the left eye is the better one. Thus the finer development of the left half of the brain is explained very simply by the fact that it is better supplied with blood, and the question why the seat of the center of speech and why most people are right-handed is solved in the most natural manner.

PAPER IS WIDELY USED.

NOW EMPLOYED IN A GREAT DIVERSITY OF WAYS.

Ten Years' Improvements—Glass Ceilings Made of Paper—Cars Which Roll on Paper Wheels—Paper Vests and Paper Underclothing—Household Articles.

Paper manufacturers have developed their industry in two ways in recent years, and the results justify all the labor and experiment carried on through the application of science and chemistry, claims the Scientific American. The application of machinery to cheapen the process of converting the raw material into different grades of paper has enormously stimulated paper production in this country, and the various processes employed have often been described.

But a no less important expansion of the paper industry has been in increasing the manifold uses to which paper can be put. Here, too, science has been the chief agent, and it has wrought remarkable changes and improvements. Chemistry has been laboring in this field for two decades, and from the laboratory have come discoveries that have made possible the enormous side products of the paper trade that are now manufactured on a large scale.

One of the things in the paper industry that seemed almost incredible a number of years ago was the manufacture of car wheels. It seemed incomprehensible to the lay mind that wheels made of compressed paper would stand the strain better than wheels made of steel. But the manufacture of paper wheels is no longer a novelty, and they are made in a great variety of sizes and shapes for use on roller skates up to heavy car wheels. After the car wheels made of paper were announced somebody applied paper to the construction of hollow telegraph poles, which were designed to take the place of those which had heretofore disgraced our streets and highways. But paper telegraph poles have never proved of any great value except to illustrate to the skeptical what can be done with paper.

There have in recent years been made of paper, water and sewer mains which promise to be of value. These are hardened and treated chemically, so that they are more impervious to water than some of the iron and earthenware mains. It remains to be proved by actual test whether they can outlast some of the latter. The announcement was made a few years ago that paper window panes had actually been made and used, but these were much like the oyster-shell window panes of the Filipino huts. They may admit a certain amount of light to brighten up the interior, but they could never be looked through with any degree of satisfaction. Still, a semi-opaque glass is often needed for the ceilings of public buildings, where the light admitted must be dimmed and diffused in passing through the substance. Paper window panes have been used in this way with more or less success.

By means of improved machinery and new chemical processes wood pulp can be drawn out into the thinnest imaginable sheets. In this spinning and squeezing the paper does not lose its toughness. Thus thin paper napkins and tablecloths are produced and printed with fancy borders and patterns. Some of these articles are almost as tough as linen in resisting the attempt to tear them. Of course, they will not stand wetting and soon lose their toughness when moistened. But otherwise they make serviceable substitutes for table linen. Likewise the paper vests and paper underclothing and lining of winter suits are prepared for practical use, and they accomplish nearly all that is claimed for them. The paper vests and linings are made so thin that their weight is practically nothing, and yet they keep out the wind and cold. They are chemically treated so that they will last a long time. They are also manufactured so that they do not make the rustling sound usually characteristic of paper, and they are pliable enough not to stand out or bulge the cloth in any way.

Waterproofing and, more recently, fireproofing of paper have occupied the attention of chemists and practical papermakers. Paper made waterproof and as fine as the ordinary napkins and tablecloths would prove a boon to many lines of industries, especially at restaurants and hotels. It is said that public eating houses are waiting anxiously for durable paper napkins and tablecloths. Waterproof paper is made today, but not in such a way as to be valuable for table use. Waterproof paper sheets are frequently glued to cloth, and in this way the latter is rendered impervious to moisture. This waterproof paper is good, however, only for limited lines of articles.

Lately the paper pulp mills have been experimenting with fireproof paper. In fact, the experiments in producing fireproof paper paved the way for making fireproof wood. The wood pulp that is compressed into molds for general household uses, such as for wainscoting, dadoes, ceilings and moldings, can be made fireproof in the same way as the paper. The fireproofing material is introduced and mixed with the wood pulp when the latter is in a soft, pliable condition, and when hardened through hydraulic pressure the chemicals remain in the wood.

This is one of the most interesting lines of experiments yet attempted by the wood pulp mills. It opens up a world of new possibilities. Should they succeed in producing perfect fireproof wood pulp there would be nothing to prevent them from furnishing our builders and marine architects with nearly all the interior wood-trimmings in pressed material. The demand for such fireproof wood pulp products would be extensive. Our Navy Department is demanding such material for their battleships and cruisers, and the builders of the great skyscrapers in our cities are just as anxiously looking around for the same thing. If fireproof wood pulp could be produced satisfactorily it would enter into our daily lives in innumerable ways.

When we consider the great number of household articles already made of wood pulp, it can readily be understood that a fireproofing process for paper and wood would be immediately of great value to all. The interior trimmings of railroad cars, public halls and hotels are nearly all made of hardwood treated with oil, so that it is more inflammable than in the natural state. All this trimming of wood forms a daily menace to thousands of people, and should a fire occur it would sweep irresistibly through these handsome steamship saloons and parlor cars. The whole trade is merely waiting for the proper fireproof wood to make revolutionary changes in its methods.

There are innumerable smaller trades built up in recent years as the result of improvements in manufacturing paper. Thus in the electric light business compressed paper, chemically prepared, is of great value, and it is employed for insulating purposes on a large scale. Paper is in increasing demand for packing perishable goods. Butter, cheese and similar products packed in waterproof oiled paper will keep twice as long as when wrapped in any other substance. This packing paper is rendered absolutely air-tight. Druggists use large quantities of it for wrapping around the corks of their bottles, and even in sealing up boxes of medicine which need to be kept from the air as much as possible. In this way results are obtained which cannot be approached by any other cheap material. Filter papers are also articles of considerable commercial value. Thousands of tons of fine filtering paper are used every year in the drug trade.

JACKSON'S TACTICS.

He Wasted No Time at Drills but Had Good Marksmen.

"The battle of New Orleans was the first occasion in history," said an ex-officer of volunteers, "in which highly-disciplined troops working together with machine-like precision, were pitted against individual marksmen, and it is a curious fact that the tactics adopted by the Americans in that engagement are just now, after the lapse of nearly a century, being recognized by modern military authorities as the proper way to fight. Our British cousins are a little slow to learn," continued the ex-officer, "and history has to repeat itself a few times before it attracts their attention. Nevertheless, it seems very strange that the lesson they received at Chalmette in 1815 should have been duplicated in almost every particular only two years ago at the Tugela river. On both occasions they were confronted by earthworks manned by civilian sharpshooters and attempted to rush them with compact masses of splendidly drilled professional soldiers, and on both occasions they were frightfully and expeditiously licked. After the Tugela river disaster they began to do a little hard thinking and finally came to the conclusion that one skilled rifleman who fights on his own hook and brings down a man every time he pulls the trigger is worth 20 fancy drilled soldiers who fire in squads and never hit anything except the landscape. But they might have acquired exactly the same information 86 years ago at New Orleans, and when I read the accounts of that remarkable battle I am filled with admiration for the genius of Andrew Jackson. The majority of his troops were rough backwoodsmen who knew nothing about the manual of arms, but were magnificent rifle shots. Jackson wasted no time at drills, and the only advice he gave was not to throw away any ammunition and wait until they saw the whites of their eyes before they fired. That was his sole chance of winning the day, and if he had commanded a similar number of trained veterans he would have been simply overwhelmed. As it was, his backwoodsmen picked off the British one by one and literally annihilated whole battalions before they could reach the foot of the intrenchments."

Florida's Substitute for Lobster.

The lobster of our North Atlantic coast is so near extinction that Massachusetts has practically forbidden its capture since only adult ones may be taken under the law, and only small ones can be found. But why conclude the North Atlantic coast has a monopoly with which we may not compete? Below Miami we have a substitute for the lobster that lives in the crevices of the rock till his season comes, and then he sprawls over acres of sand, fat and fine. This Florida sea crawfish is of excellent flavor, grows to four pounds in weight, is abundant and easily taken. He is not only the equal of the lobster, but better. It only remains that he be introduced to the gourmand with proper preparation and he will immediately become a favorite.—Florida Times-Union.

The Only Difference.

The Chicken (patronizingly)—What! You have a lucky bone the same as I! Why, you don't know what you are squeaking about.

The Rabbit (gayly)—Certainly. You don't know what you are clucking about. My lucky bone is in my left hind leg.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Populations in Cities.

In Rhode Island 81.2 per cent of the population in 1900 lived in cities or towns of 8,000 inhabitants or more, while this element also constitutes 76 per cent of the population in Massachusetts, 68.5 per cent in New York, 61.2 per cent in New Jersey and 53.2 per cent in Connecticut.

Britains Growing Taller.

No nation is increasing in height and weight so rapidly as the English, says a British student. The proof of this is shown in statistics recently collected of the height of 10,000 boys and men. At the age of 17 these averaged 5 feet 8 inches; at the age of 22, 5 feet 9 inches. In 50 years the average has gone up for the whole nation from 5 feet 7½ inches to 5 feet 8½ inches.

Cures Blood Poison, Cancer, Ulcers, Eczema, Etc.—Medicine Sent Free.

If you have offensive pimples or eruptions, ulcers on any part of the body, aching bones or joints, falling hair, mucous patches, swollen glands, skin itches and burns, sore lips or gums, eating, festering sores, sharp, gnawing pains, then you suffer from serious blood poison or the beginnings of deadly cancer. You may be permanently cured by taking Botanic Blood Balm (B. B. B.), made especially to cure the worst blood and skin diseases. It heals every sore or ulcer, stops all aches and pains and reduces all swellings. Botanic Blood Balm cures all malignant blood troubles, such as eczema, scabs and scales, pimples, running sores, carbuncles, scrofula, etc. Especially advised for all obstinate cases that have reached the second or third stage. Druggists, $1. To prove it cures, sample of medicine sent free and prepaid by writing Dr. Gillam, 12 Mitchell Street, Atlanta, Ga. Describe trouble and free medical advice given.

Asthma

"One of my daughters had a terrible case of asthma. We tried almost everything, but without relief. We then tried Ayer's Cherry Pectoral and three and one-half bottles cured her."—Emma Jane Entsminger, Langsville, O.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral certainly cures many cases of asthma.

And it cures bronchitis, hoarseness, weak lungs, whooping-cough, croup, winter coughs, night coughs, and hard colds.

Three sizes: 25c., enough for an ordinary cold; 50c., just right for bronchitis, hoarseness, hard colds, etc.; $1, most economical for chronic cases and to keep on hand.

AN OPEN LETTER

Address to Women by the Treasurer of the W. C. T. U. of Kansas City, Mrs. E. C. Smith.

"My Dear Sisters:—I believe in advocating and upholding everything that will lift up and help women, and but little use appears all knowledge and learning if you have not the health to enjoy it.

MRS. E. C. SMITH.

"Having found by personal experience that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a medicine of rare virtue, and having seen dozens of cures where my suffering sisters have been dragged back to life and usefulness from an untimely grave simply by the use of a few bottles of that Compound, I must proclaim its virtues, or I should not be doing my duty to suffering mothers and dragged-out housekeepers.

"Dear Sister, is your health poor, do you feel worn out and used up, especially do you have any of the troubles which beset our sex, take my advice; let the doctors alone, try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; it is better than any and all doctors, for it cures and they do not."—Mrs. E. C. Smith, 1212 Oak St., Treasurer W. C. T. HOUSEWORK

Too much housework wrecks women's nerves. And the constant care of children, day and night, is often too trying for even a strong woman. A haggard face tells the story of the overworked housewife and mother. Deranged menses, leucorrhœa and falling of the womb result from overwork. Every housewife needs a remedy to regulate her menses and to keep her sensitive female organs in perfect condition.

WINE OF CARDUI

is doing this for thousands of American women to-day. It cured Mrs. Jones and that is why she writes this frank letter:

Glendeane, Ky., Feb. 10, 1901.

I am so glad that your Wine of Cardui is helping me. I am feeling better than I have felt for years. I am doing my own work without any help, and washed last week and was not one bit tired. That shows that the Wine is doing me good. I am getting fleshier than I ever was before, and sleep good and eat heartily. Before I began taking Wine of Cardui, I used to have to lay down five or six times every day, but now I do not think of lying down through the day. MRS. RICHARD JONES.

VOL. X | CLANTON, ALA. THURSDAY DECEMBER 12, 1901 | NO. 8

THE MAN ON THE CORNER

Some of the Sights He Saw, and Some He Saw Not.

A great deal of sympathy is being expressed for the unfortunate Mary Adams, who was sentenced to the penitentiary for two years for bigamy. From all I can learn it seems to be a case where the sentencing power could be well and justly applied. It appears that the poor woman married the second time from pure ignorance of the law, acting under bad advice, and with no thought of wrong doing. A petition to the Governor I believe would have good results.

I am glad to learn that the Farmers' Mutual Insurance Association has straightened out its affairs, and while some few members have withdrawn, other new members have been added, who more than make up for those who have gone. N. J. Calloway has resigned the presidency, and P. D. Wilson, under the constitution and by-laws is acting president. I understand that Alex G. Dake will be duly elected president of the Association at a meeting of the directors to be held next Saturday. The Association is only one of the best things for our people and I trust it will continue to flourish and prosper.

WOOED AND WEDDED.

MULLINS—FOSHEE

A large and fashionable assembly gathered at the residence of Mr. W. H. Foshee on Tuesday evening to witness the marriage of Mr. J. Renfroe Mullins and Miss Blanche Foshee. Rev. D. F. Ellinor was the officiating minister. Immediately after the ceremony the happy couple left for Birmingham.

Mr. Mullins is one of our rising young men who is bound to make his mark, and Miss Blanche everyone loves. They have known each other all their lives and their union is the culmination of love's young dream. That they may long live and prosper is the earnest wish of all their friends.

JOHNSON—GOLDTHORPE.

When Dr. N. S. Johnson left for Montgomery last Sunday it was not expected he would return with a blushing bride on Monday. And when Miss Lillian Goldthorpe left Mobile to meet the Doctor at Montgomery there were few, if any, who knew what was going to happen. Miss Lillian was accompanied by her sister, Miss Nettie. But the young people had known and loved each other in Mobile, and the meeting at Montgomery was by prior arrangement. Rev. N. L. Anderson made them man and wife, and they came to Clanton one where all who know the Doctor are glad to welcome him home with his charming bride. We wish them many years of happiness together.

PUBLIC MEETING

To the voters of Chilton county who are in favor of all white men voting:

You are hereby requested to meet in Clanton, Friday, Dec 27, 1901, at 11 a.m.

There are some important features of the new constitution that all men who wish to vote in future should understand, and after February 1, 1902, it will be too late. Come one, come all, and let us take such steps as will be best in the premises.

I don't think we could spend Christmas in a better way than to come together and discuss those questions that pertain to the upbuilding of the Master's cause.

T. J. DEASON, Pastor.

The "biggest little thing" and one of the most useful you can offer a friend as a Christmas present is a bottle of Dr Tichenor's Antiseptic. A clean, pleasant remedy for cuts, burns, bruises, nail punctures, sore throat, inflamed eyes, stings of insects, "poison oak," etc. Used internally, it gives quick relief in cases of colic and derangement of stomach or bowels. Free from opiates and positively harmless.

Several out of our community attended court last week

We had the pleasure of attending a wedding at the residence of Mr. J. W. Hayes Sunday. It was Mr. Oscar Bean and Miss Lillie Hayes that were joined in the bonds of holy wedlock. I suppose there were a hundred spectators and between seventy-five and a hundred eat of the bountiful dinner that was prepared. Rev. Albert Foshee officiated.

Mr. S. H. Wilson, Treasurer of Winston county, visited his son, Mr. Harvey Wilson, Friday. Mr. Mr. Wilson preached quite an interesting sermon at Cedar Grove Sunday evening. He seems to have made a good impression on those he met. And all of us were sorry to see him take his leave for Double Springs Monday. Come again, Mr. Wilson.

Mr. A. L. Collins is building him a dwelling on the Clanton and Thorsby road. We predict that the "square" is coming out of the "kinks."

We are having a nice school here now under the supervision of Prof. Means and Miss Samiels. They don't seem to making as much fuss as we had in our last school, but it is reported by good authority that they are having better results in imparting their knowledge to their pupils. It doesn't take the greatest noise to accomplish the most good.

MARRIED

HARRISON—BRISTOW.

At the residence of Mrs. Bristow of Jemison at 5 o'clock p.m., December 11, the bright lights shone over fair women and brave men. Many hearts beat happily when Mr. J. H. Harrison led to the marriage altar Miss Jessie Bristow, and the mellow voice of Rev. I. Windsor, pronounced the beautiful ceremony that united their lives as one. Congratulations were showered upon this happy couple, who left immediately for Pensacola, Fla. on a bridal tour.

BRISTOW—MURPHY.

The marriage of Mr. J. C. Bristow of Jemison, and Miss Willie Murphy at the residence of Mrs. Claudie Session on December, 11, was quite a pretty home affair, Rev. I. Windsor officiated. Miss Murphy the bride, is a beautiful and attractive young woman. The groom is a most genial and excellent gentleman, whose popularity attests his great worth.

Could hardly express the thanks of Homer Hall, of West Point, Ia. Listen why: A severe cold had settled on his lungs causing a most obstinate cough. Several physicians said he had consumption, but could not help him. When all thought he was doomed he began to use Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption and writes—"it completely cured me and saved my life. I now weigh 227 lbs." It's positively guaranteed for Coughs, Colds and Lung troubles. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles 10c at Clanton Drug co., and F. A Gulledge, Verbena.

52 Banners cost only 75 cents.

OXANTON, - - - ALABAMA,

The Molly Pitcher of Siberia appears to be Mme. Anna Youdina, of Blagovestschensk, who fought gallantly in defense of that city when it was attacked by Chinese last year. As a reward of merit the municipal authorities have made her a citizen.

During the last fiscal year the United States Bureau of Engraving and Printing made 4,235,088,000 postage stamps. In addition the reserve stock was broken into, for the postmasters required 4,276,087,682. Envelope makes must also have done a large business.

An insurance statistician has compiled an interesting statement of the number and kind of accidents last year. Among others 555 persons fell off railway trains, 272 were hurt by ladders, 2569 were hurt from riding or driving, ten by automobiles, 224 by bumping into furniture, nine "hurtfully took off shoes."

One of the most interesting features at the New York Zoological Gardens was the orang-outang Rajah, an animal of unusual intelligence, who died the other day. Rajah's sedulous efforts to learn ways that are human were crowned with success. He not only wore clothing, ate with a knife and fork and used a napkin, but rode a tricycle, and, at the time of his death, was just learning to skate on roller-skates. His value was placed at $1000.

The most healthful place in the United States is Marion, Iowa, according to the statistics of the Marine Hospital Service. With a population of 4100 there were only six deaths in 1900, making the death rate only 1.46 per one thousand inhabitants. The average death rate in all the 1190 towns and cities from which the statistics were obtained was 17.47. Of the populous States, Iowa showed a death rate of 11.17, North Dakota's rate was 6.05.

The British have found a social use for the biograph. With them the moving picture is no longer monopolized by the theatre and its audiences. It is a thing of private and personal entertainment, a sort of glorification of the old family portrait collection. Lady Beautiful gets a new gown and is straightway biographed in a succession of graceful posings. Lady Beautiful gives an afternoon tea and biographs her guests in the act of raising their dainty cups and of gesturing to their lightsome chatter. Lady Matronly biographs her nursery and Lady Bowwows her doggery, and so on.

"It was not many years ago," says Country Life in America, "that people lived in the suburbs as a matter of economy. Now they live in these parts because higher ideals may often be attained here. From reports personally obtained from twenty-eight of the largest cities in America, North, South, East and West, it was shown that during two recent years over $420,000,000 had been incorporated and spent in private purchases and the development of lands adjacent to large cities, for suburban operations. Over $60,000,000 have been voted and spent by trolley and railroad companies to extend their service beyonds the limits of these cities. Nearly half a billion dollars have, therefore, been invested within two years in the proposed development of suburban properties, in addition to the millions of dollars already so invested."

Sir Christopher Furness, an Englishman, who has just visited America, and who is recognized as one of the most eminent authorities on financial and economical matters, declares that "The United States is destined to become the greatest financial power in the world." He adds: "With her vast resources and millions of energetic people, she cannot be dowfed. We see indications of it everywhere. What happened when we were called upon to borrow money some months ago? Who bought the bonds? Where did they go? They went to America. Americans were ready on the spot to produce any amount of money that was necessary or desired. I dare say they could have been taken up at home, but they were not. The Americans did not give us the chance. Thus it is everywhere. This is just one illustration, but it is a good one, and hundreds of others can be found on every hand.

A B.G PROTEST MEETING

REVOLUTION IN BRITISH IRON INDUSTRY.

THE PRINCE OF WALES IS AN ORATOR

To Break up Alleged Oil Swindle—Revolution is Said to be About Over—Boers Wanted in Holland—A Wreck on the Central of Georgia.

BIG PROTEST MEETING.

A program of protest against British methods in the South African war was carried out before an in immense audience in the Auditorium theatre. Chicago, on the 8th inst. Following an eloquent address by W. Bourke Cockran and earnest speeches by others, resolutions for the appointment of a committee to bring the sentiments of the meeting before the president were adopted. Although an admission was charged, the funds being intended to aid the Boers and especially their women and children, standing room was at a premium and many were unable to gain admittance. The program opened with the song, "The True Heart," sung by nineteen good singing societies of Chicago, Brother Hiram Thomas, head of the Peoples church, followed with a prayer for the women and children in South African prison camps. There were five hundred people on the stage when Mr. Cockran, the orator of the evening, arose and bowed in recognition of the tumult of applause which greeted him.

CRISIS IN BRITISH IRON.

Under this caption, the Statist, after expatiating upon the enormous developements in this line in the United States to the detriment of Great Britain, earnestly advocates the importing of ore from Newfoundland and Nova Scotia and the establishment in England of basic furnaces, by which alone that ore can be treated. The revolution in the British industry must begin with the construction of basic furnaces for the utilization of phosphoric ores which will soon be all that is available. But that will not suffice to preserve our steel-making industry. We must also merge our smelting and steel-making in one continuous, economical process. In corroboration of the Statist's remarks, it is expected that in the Scotch steel trade many works will remain closed throughout January.

THE KING AN ORATOR.

The evolution of the Prince of Wales from a sailor into an orator caused great comment and satisfaction. His Guild Hall speech was perfectly free from that platitudinous element usually notably in royal utterance in England. His declaration that the old country must wake up if it wanted to hold its own almost took his hearers' breath away. It is probable that the Prince was entirely responsible for the construction of the speech, as he used copious notes. His delivery, earnestness and willingness to commit himself to such sentiments have raised him higher in the estimation of the people than any previous action. Several of the papers declared that the elocution of Lord Salisbury, Lord Roseberry and Mr. Chamberlain fell quite flat after the Prince of Wales' effort.

The attempt of the Federal authorities to break up what is alleged to be an oil mill trust existing in Mississippi is attracting widespread attention, and thus far the oil mill men seem to have the best of the fight, notwithstanding the fact that numerous indictments have been brought against them.

REVOLUTION ABOUT OVER.

Colonel Barara, the wounded insurgent leader who surrendered and was brought to Colon, believes that the revolutionists will confine the fighting to the interior of the Department of Panama, and certainly will not attack along the line of the Panama railroad before next March. He declares that General Porraras, a revolutionary leader, has about 500 men and a good supply of ammunition. Colonel Barara considers that practically all of the best insurgent officers on the Isthmus have surrendered.

HOLLAND WANTS BOERS.

When parliament reassembles the British government will bring forward a new proposal in regard to the reconcentrado camps in South Africa. It is believed that this proposal will suggest the distribution of the refuges in the settled districts. Holland has asked the powers to support her in a demand that the people in these camps be brought to Holland.

CHAFFEE'S REPORT.

The War Department has made public the first annual report of Maj.-Gen. A. P. Chaffee, Military Governor of the Philippines. Commenting upon the plan of gradually replacing military with civil administration, General Chaffee recommends that there be no further material reduction of troops before January, 1903. In anticipation of a partial concentration of the troops in the Philippines next year, General Chaffee names $2,500,000 as his estimate of cost for the construction of quarters and barracks. Great attention is paid in appended reports to the subject of the prevalence of venerial diseases in the army of the Philippines, and the measures to segregate dissolute women and by rigid physical inspection guard against a dread of the disease.

DISCUSSES THE MESSAGE.

LaPatria, a liberal newspaper of Mexico City, warns the Mexicans that they need not hope to look to Europe for help against the North American aggregation so much talked of by the clerical papers, but adds: "We fear nothing from the United States. That great republic plants itself on the Monroe doctrine and that of peace in his hemisphere. The United States offers as a pledge of its sincerity the the support they gave Mexico during her war with Napoleon III." El Correlo Espania, the organ of the resident Spanish colony, praises Roosevelt's message as being well written and full of altruism and optimism, but for all his fine sentiments, there is Cuba in servitude to the United States by right of the Platt law embodied in her new constitution.

ROYALTY IN DANGER.

Prince Henry has not appeared in public since the recent disclosures in regard to the domestic troubles in the Court of the Netherlands. If he did he would certainly be mobbed. His picture has been withdrawn from the Kinematograph exhibitions in the music halls throughout Holland, owing to fiery demonstrations of anger provoked.

THE RIGHT WAY.

A. R. Peacock, one of the Pittsburg group of steel made multi-millionaires, has discovered a new way of avoiding the disgrace of dying rich. He is looking up the friends of his youth, whose ships failed to come in as well laden with gold as his own, and is presenting them with consolation prizes in the form of homesteads of their own selection.

CONVENTION MEETS IN MAY.

The Southern Industrial Association, called to meet in Memphis, January 11, 1902, has been postponed until May. This information was given out by Colonel N. F. Thompson, secretary. The postponement is for various reasons and is said to be satisfactory to the people of Memphis who will do the entertaining.

VANDERBILT FINED $200.

William K. Vanderbilt has been condemned in a French court to pay 1,000 francs damages as a result of a collision between his automobile and a dog cart at d'Eauville last year.

Another Chinese has been murdered in San Francisco as a result of the Wong Chin family feud in Chinatown. While walking along the street Wong Get was approached from behind and shot four times in the back, the wounds proving fatal in a short time. The murderer was arrested.

STORM DISABLES SHIP.

The British steamer Durango, Captain Anderson, which sailed from Baltimore November 30, via Hampton Roads, December 1, for Rotterdam, with a general cargo, arrived at St. Johns, N. F., with her machinery disabled, owing to having encountered the terrific storms which have been raging on the Atlantic.

More than 85,000 visitors were in attendance at the Chicago Live Stock show last Friday. The show has been a great success.

MOBS ATTACK POLICE.

At Scranton, Pa., Sunday an attempt was made by three deputies to arrest boys who were stoning cars on South Main avenue, manned by non-union men. A big crowd set upon the officers, and in the face of flying bullets overpowered them and beat them severely. Two of the deputies are in the hospital. The third was able to go home.

LIVE WASHINGTON ITEMS

SECRATARY ROBERT'S REPORT IS ENCOURAGING.

THE PRESIDENT WILL REACH CONCLUSION

Richarson and Pettus See President—The House Will Probably Pass the Philippine Measure—The Revision Committee Making Great Progress.

The report of George E. Roberts, director of the mint, for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1901, shows the coinage amounted to 176,999,132 pieces, of the value of $186,340,781. Of this $99,065,715 was in gold, $24,298,850 in silver dollars, $10,963,648 in fractional silver and $2,000,568 in minor coins. There also was coined at the Philadelphia mint 226,000 gold pieces of the value of $349,014 for the government of Costa Rica. Coinage operations were conducted during the year in the mints at Philadelphia, San Francisco and New Orleans. The Philadelphia mint is now in its new quarters and the old site will be offered for sale to the highest bidder on December 19, 1901. An upset price of $2,000,000 has been placed on it. The original cost of the ground to the government was $35,840. The new mint under construction at Denver has made slow progress during the year and the supervising architect finds an additional appropriation necessary before the final contracts can be let. The appropriation for the site and building was $500,000 and for equipment $150,000.

The original deposits of gold at the mint and assay offices amounted to $153,101,580, an increase of $19,181,561 over the preceding year. The estimated production of gold in the United States during the calendar year 1900 was of the value of $79,171,000 and notwithanding the fact that this country led the world in productions, its imports exceeded its exports by $12,866,010. The production of North America, practically all of which comes to the United States was $116,051,500. The world's coinage of gold in the calendar year 1900 was $354,936,497 and of siver $177,011,902. The industry consumption of gold in the United States during the calendar year 1901 is estimated at $16,867,500 and of the world approximately $75,000,000. The stock of subsidary coin in the country is limited by law to $100,000,000 and of November 1, 1901, the existing stock was $90,613 512. It is suggested that the limit of the country's stock of subsidiary coin be raised to at least $120,000,000. No good reason is apparent, says the report, why the coinage of dollar pieces should not be allowed to cease and all of the silver on hand be used in subsidiary coinage.

The only message of importance which the senate has on its calendar for the present week is the new Hay-Pauncefote treaty, making provision for the abrogation of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty and opening the way for the construction of an isthmian canal by the United States. Acting for the committee on foreign relations Senator Lodge will ask the senate to go into executive session for the consideration of the treaty and each day thereafter until the convention is disposed of.

The reported assignment of Monsignor Scalabraini of Placenza, Italy, as the successor of Cardinal Martinelli, the papal delegate in this country, is regarded as very improbable by officials of the delegation in this city. Monsignor Scalabraini is regarded as one of the ablest ecclesiastics of the church in Italy and for some years has been in charge of his present diocese in Piacanza.

It is expected that by the end of the week, The President will reach a conclusion upon the Alabama Federal offices. He has already consulted the several members of the Congressional delegation, Booker T. Washington and ex-Governor Johnston. Washington is to be called in for a final conference.

Senator Pettus and Representatives Richardson and Bowie saw the president and asked that Captain John Bacon McDonald, Third Cavalry, be appointed to one of the vacant positions in the line of brigadier-general.

The house will probably pass the measure to meet the situation created by the Philippine decision of the Supreme Court. Up to the present time, however, the Republican members of the Ways and Means Committee have not decided upon the character of the measure which will be reported.

The revision committee of the General Presbyterian Assembly is making progress, but in discussing the great questions pending progress must be slow and nothing final can be reached for a week or more.

SHORT STATE ITEMS.

DALLAS county's circuit clerkship still hangs fire in the courts.

THIRTY people left Cherokee bound for texas and Oklahoma.

EX-GOVERNOR JOHNSTON was in Washington last week on private business.

GEORGE LILZES, of Birmingham, took morphine to relieve pain and never awoke.

GADSDEN'S first street fair is over. It is said to have been immoral and demoralizing.

OIL excitement at Cordova has subsided and is rarely mentioned there nowadays.

JOHN SHURART, colored was convicted of murder at Gadsden and sentenced to the penitentiary for life.

CORDOVA is going to make an effort to get Eli Riskins, the famous humorist, to deliver a lecture at that place.

THE dummy line from Birmingham to Bessemer will be changed into an electric car line. Work will commence at once.

REV. MR. THOMPSON, of Lafayette, has accepted the call to the pastorate of the Bessemer Baptist church.

GADSDEN becomes a better cotton market each season. During the last four days of last week 1,100 bales came to town.

TUSCALOOSA was cut off from mail service for 18 hours last week, caused by two bad wrecks on the A. G. S. railroad.

MR. PILLSBURY, the chess champion, gave an exhibition of his powers in the games of chess and checkers at Tuscaloosa recently.

The Woman's club has turned over to Mayor Cochrane, of Tuscaloosa, the sum of $14 50 to be used in the work of keeping the streets in repair.

THE infant child of J. L. Johnson, of near Gadsden, was found dead one morning recently, having smothered to death. The remains were carried to Edwardsville, Ala., for interment.

ATTALLA'S city council has raised the saloon license from $500 to $2,500. Only two out of the four present saloon-keepers declare their intention of taking out license another year.

DR. W. E. DAVIS' buggy was struck by a dummy in Birmingham last Sunday and his wife thrown out and slightly injured. Dr. Davis does not blame anyone as his horse became frightened at some lime barrels and backed into the dummy.

D. B. KIERCE, who was struck on the head by a piece of square iron, which was caught in the spokes of the big wheel in the blowing room of the Ensley furnace, died at Dr. Cunningham's Hospital.

ARTICLES of incorporation for the Gadsden Pipe and Foundry Company have been filed in the probate office. The company is capitalized at $50,000. This is an other industry organized by home capital.

RICHARD STEELE, son of the late Sylvester Steele, of Elyton, died at Montevallo last week, after an illness of less than twelve hours. He was taken suddenly with paralysis which proved fatal. He leaves a wife and five children.

THE contract for the building of the Searles extension of the Tidewater branch of the Mobile & Ohio Railroad has been let to W. J. Oliver & Company, of Savannah, and work will begin on the road at once. This is the road which will connect Tuscaloosa with the coal fields in the northern part of this county.

THE stove foundry which was built by home capital at Gadsden is now in full operation. They are daily turning out stoves, grates, pots and all kind of hollow ware. The president and general manager says he finds a ready sale for the products, and by the first of January hopes to have stock enough on hand to commence to fill some of the orders.

Emil L. Boas, local agent of the Hamburg-American Steamship Line, is in Germany conferring with the high officials of the company concerning the operation of the ocean line in conjunction with an American railroad. It is said in shipping circles that it would be impossible for Americans to secure control of the Hamburg-American Line, the capitalization of which is about $80,000,000, and that Mr. Boas' mission abroad was to lay before the Hamburg-American Company plans and arrangements for a deal with the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe railroad.

SHEFFIELD COTTON MILL.

It is stated that Sheffield will have a cotton mill. While it will not be a very large one, having only five thousand spindle, it will be the starter of a movement in the construction of cotton mills there that all hope will develop. New York parties are managing, but Philadelphia parties are putting up the money. The Birmingham parties who purchased the properties of the land companies in Sheffield will sell enough property for their plant when the titles have been investigated and deeds have been changed.

BURNED TO DEATH.

Little Susie Lee Yearty, the 11-year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Yearty, died at the home of her parents last week in Bessemer. She fell into the fire while her mother was down town on business and died from the effects of her burns.

TOOK LEG BAIL.

Thirty-nine prisoners, serving sentences for minor crimes, beg their way to liberty through a six-inch hole of the Southside Birmingham prison at Avenue D and Nineteenth street Sunday morning between 3 and 4 o'clock and thirty-two of them are now at large. Thirty five of them were negroes. With pocket knives these men dug their way through the wall, and from that time thirty-six of them escaped. Seven were recaptured yesterday by some of the authorities who were sent out as detectives by Warden Shields, who is in charge of the jail.

COURT MARTIAL DELAYED.

A communication in the form of a "round robin" will be presented to the governor of Alabama, as commander-in-chief of the national guard, asking why the court martial of Lieutenant Colonel Osceola Kyle has been delayed and why the personel of the court has been changed. This petition, request or "round robin" has been or is being compiled by a committee of local military officers.

KILLED A MINISTER.

The Rev. J. W. Bradford, Methodist minister at Brookside, was shot and killed by R. D. Coffman, justice of the peace, Sunday at 5 o'clock p. m. The trouble is said to have grown out of a remark made by Mr. Bradford derogatory to Coffman's character while addressing the Sunday school.

TROOPS GUARD NEGROES.

The militia sent to Andalusia to protect the negroes in jail are still on duty. Governor Jelks has been asked to order the troops to remain until a trial is given the negroes, as the citizens fear to have the militia leave until the case has been disposed of. State Solicitor Parks has arrived and it is understood the negroes will be given a hearing next Monday. The town continues under martial rule.

The Berlin correspondent of the London Times says President Roosevelt's message to Congress has been utilized by the supporters of the anti-trust bill. The hopes raised in the minds of the anti-protectionists by Mr. McKinley's utterances on the subject of reciprocal commercial treaties have been dashed by Mr. Roosevelt's compromising tone and the support of the bill have been quick to point "American danger" in the language of their arguments. Nevertheless, says the correspondent, the conservatives do not approve the general tenor of the message. The Kreuz Zeitung in an article full of bitter irony says President Roosevelt was to establish an era of honest government by annihilate the empire rule of trusts, and to "break down the wall of high protection."

LEVI SHERRILL, charged with forging the name of his father to a government claim, was tried before Judge Cargile at Scottsboro, and bound over to the circuit court. It is said that Sherrell forged the name of Mr. Sherrell, mother of William Sherrell, who some time ago died in the Philippines, to a claim for pay due Mr. Sherrell, which he collected and appropriated to his own use without authority.

As a rule, practical jokers are not discouraged, since there is always danger that the joker will be content with exposing the weaknesses and frailties of people. It is also true, that usually no person is indignant, furious and unforgiving under a joke than the practical joker himself.

BILL ARP'S LETTER

Bartow Man Says Negro Education is a Flat Failure.

ADVISES THE USE OF OTHER PLAN

Says Present Generation of Negroes Have Gained No Advantage By All of Their Schooling.

A neighbor said to me, Major, what in all this racket about—this rumpus and this swimporium about the nigger? Have they broke loose? Have they risen again? You remember how they used to rise before the war, but they generally went to the corn field or the cotton patch. I've been reading the New York Journal and it looks like something must have happened out in Mississippi or somewhere, and the bishops and college folks and bank women are mightily bothered about 'em."

Well, it is amusing to read the platitudes and theories about the negro. A few of them are sensible, some of them a delusion, and some are almost idiotic. With most of them education seems to be the panacea for everything and some of them want kindergarten schools for the babies and separate schools for the mothers to learn physiology. Some of the northern female antiquities want social equality and hint at miscegenation as the coming remedy. Some say total separation is the only solution and the negro must go, and some say that every dollar spent on their education widens the gulf between the races. One very sensible writer says stop the voting and stop paying taxes for the education.

Take them all together and they don't harmonize on any plan, though a large majority, with Dr. Curry in the lead, are for education—more education. Well, it is possible for even a great and good a man as Dr. Curry to be mistaken. He and Bishop Candler and some others on that line have made a life long business of educating young people, and I am naturally disposed to magnify its importance, but it seems to me when we try an experiment for thirty years and spend over one hundred millions of dollars on it and the negroes get worse instead of better, it is time to halt and try some other method.

These negroes are a new generation and know nothing of slavery. The northern idea seems to be that they are the same negroes we had before the war, and that they have recently emerged from slavery and semi-barbarism, and must be educated into good citizenship. This is a mistake. The old-time negroes had a very good education—not in book learning, but by contact and association with their masters and their masters' families and neighbors. Education is not all gotten from books. It comes through the ear as well as through the eye. Our old-time slaves were better educated for usefulness and happiness than are the college graduates of today. They had more common sense and far more morality. We had among them carpenters, masons, blacksmiths, tanners, shoemakers, tinners, wagon makers, painters, paperers, railroaders, and we had good farmers and ginners and millers and hostlers.

Among the women we had weavers, carders, spinners, seamstresses, chambermaids, butter makers, cooks and nurses and they were all educated in their business. I owned a carpenter who could plan and build a first-class house and make a handsome mantel and run a modern staircase. I owned another who grew up from infancy with my children, and who could paint and paper and cook and put down carpets and other things, and he was my faithful bodyguard during the war and is still devoted to my family. Education—why, the children taught Tip to read, and that was enough for him, and he was always happy and contented. He had the daily benefit of example and precept. Why is it that we have now over 4,000 convicts and did not have one then. All this maudlin philanthropy has come from the idea that our negroes were savages until freedom came, when the truth is they were better fed and clothed and housed and far happier than the poor of the northern states. I do not remember he have ever punished but one of our slaves—our own boys got most of the whippings, and the negroes grew up in fear of it. It is not the lack of education that increases crime and fills our prisons, for it is recorded that 47 per cent of the convicts can read and write. What is wanted is good moral training and the fear of punishment for crime. The negroes get some of this from their parents or their teachers or preachers, while in slavery their race trait of stealing little things was curbed and restrained, but it has come back in full force and now all of this generation will steal with but few exceptions. We have not had but one domestic in twenty-five years who would not steal, or, as they call it, take little things on the sly. We expect them to steal and are never disappointed. It is just as much a race trait in the negro as it is in the Arabs or the posterity of Ishmael. It is to the credit of the negro that he will not cheat you nor betray your confidence. It is to the discredit of Jews and Gentiles that they will cheat you or deceive you if they can "honorably."

SHEFFIELD COTTON MILL.

It is stated that Sheffield will have a cotton mill. While it will not be a very large one, having only five thousand spindle, it will be the starter of a movement in the construction of cotton mills there that all hope will develop. New York parties are managing, but Philadelphia parties are putting up the money. The Birmingham parties who purchased the properties of the land companies in Sheffield will sell enough property for their plant when the titles have been investigated and deeds have been changed.

BURNED TO DEATH.

Little Susie Lee Yearty, the 11-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Yearty, died at the home of her parents last week in Bessemer. She fell into the fire while her mother was down town on business and died from the effects of her burns.

TOOK LEG BAIL.

Thirty-nine prisoners, serving sentences for minor crimes, dug their way to liberty through a six-foot-inch wall of the Southside Birmingham prison at Avenue D and Nineteenth street Sunday morning between 3 and 4 o'clock and thirty-two of them are now at large. Thirty-five of them were negroes. With pocket knives these men dug their way through the wall, and from that lone thirty-nine of them escaped. Seven were recaptured yesterday by some of the trusties who were sent out as detectives by Warden Shields, who is in charge of the jail.

COURT MARTIAL DELAYED.

A communication in the form of a "round robin" will be presented to the governor of Alabama, as commander-in-chief of the national guard, asking why the court martial of Lieutenant Colonel Osceola Kyle has been delayed and why the personel of the court has been changed. This petition, request or "round robin" has been or is being compiled by a committee of local military officers.

KILLED A MINISTER.

The Rev. J. W. Bradford, Methodist minister at Brookside, was shot and killed by R. D. Coffman, justice of the peace, Sunday at 5 o'clock p. m. The trouble is said to have grown out of a remark made by Mr. Bradford derogatory to Coffman's character while addressing the Sunday school.

TROOPS GUARD NEGROES.

The militia sent to Andalusia to protect the negroes in jail are still on duty. Governor Jelks has been asked to order the troops to remain until a trial is given the negroes, as the citizens fear to have the militia leave until the case has been disposed of. State Solicitor Parks has arrived and it is understood the negroes will be given a hearing next Monday. The town continues under martial rule.

The Berlin correspondent of the London Times says President Roosevelt's message to Congress has been utilized by the supporters of the tariff bill. The hopes raised in the minds of the anti-protectionists by Mr. McKinley's utterances on the subject of reciprocal commercial treaties have been dashed by Mr. Roosevelt's uncompromising tone and the supporters of the bill have been quick to put the "American danger" in the forefront of their arguments. Nevertheless, says the correspondent, the conservatives do not approve the general tone of the message. The Kreuz Zeitung, in an article full of bitter irony, says President Roosevelt was to usher in an era of honest government to annihilate the empire rule of trusts, but to "break down the wall of high protection."

LEVI SHERRILL, charged with forging the name of his sister to a government claim, was tried before Judge Cargile at Scottsboro, and bound over to the circuit court. It is alleged that Sherrell forged the name of Jane Sherrell, mother of William Sherrell, who some time ago died in the Philippines, to a claim for pay due the latter Sherrell, which he collected and appropriated to his own use without authority.

As a rule, practical jokes should be discouraged, since there is always the danger that the joker will not be content with exposing the weaknesses and frailties of people. It is strange, but true, that usually no person is more indignant, furious and unforgiving under a joke than the confirmed practical joker himself.

BILL ARP'S LETTER

Bartow Man Says Negro Education is a Flat Failure.

ADVISES THE USE OF OTHER PLANS

Says Present Generation of Negroes Have Gained No Advantage By All of Their Schooling.

A neighbor said to me, "Major, what is all this racket about—this rumpus—this symposium about the nigger? Where they broke loose? Have they risen again? You remember how they used to rise before the war, but they generally went to the corn field or the cotton patch. I've been readin' The New York Journal and it looks like something must have happened out in Mississippi or somewhere, and the bishops and college folks and yankee women are mightily bothered about 'em.

We think it amusing to read these elaborate plans and theories about the negro. A few of them are sensible, some of them a delusion, and some are almost crazy. With most of them education seems to be the panacea for everything and some of them want kindergarten schools for the babies and separate schools for the mothers to learn physiology. Some of the northern female antiquities want social equality and want miscegenation as the coming remedy. Some say that separation is the only solution and the negro must go. And some say that every dollar spent on their education widens the gulf between the races. One very recent writer says stop their voting and stop paying taxes for their education.

Take them all together and they don't harm us on any plan, though a large majority with Dr. Curry in the lead, are for education—more education. We think it possible for even so great and good a man as Dr. Curry to be mistaken. He and Bishop Candler and some others on that line have made a strong business of educating young people and are naturally disposed to magnify the importance, but it seems to me that we try an experiment for the years and spend over one hundred millions of dollars on it, and the results are worse instead of better it seems to halt and try some other method.

These people are a new generation and know nothing of slavery. The northern idea seems to be that these are the same negroes we had before the war, and that they have recently emerged from slavery and semi-barbarism, and must be educated into good citizenship. This is a mistake. The old-time negroes had a very good education—not in book learning, but by contact and association with their masters and their masters' families and neighbors. Education is not all gotten from books. It comes through the ear as well as through the eye. Our old time slaves were better educated for usefulness and happiness than are the college graduates of today. They had more common sense and far more morality. We had among them carpenters, masons, blacksmiths, tanners, shoemakers, tinners, wagon makers, painters, paperers, railroaders, and we had good farmers and ginners and millers and hostlers.

Among the women we had weavers, carders, spinners, seamstresses, chambermaids, butter makers, cooks and nurses and they were all educated in their business. I owned a carpenter who could plan and build a first-class house and make a handsome mantel and run a modern staircase. I owned another who grew up from infancy with my children, and who could paint and paper and cook and put down carpets and other things, and he was my faithful bodyguard during the war, and is still devoted to my family. Education—why, the children taught Tip to read, and that was enough for him, and he was always happy and contented. He had the daily benefit of example and precept. Why is it that we have now over 4,000 convicts and did not have one then. All this maudlin philanthropy has come from the idea that our negroes were savages until freedom came, when the truth is they were better fed and clothed and housed and far happier than the poor of the northern states. I do not remember to have ever punished but one of our slaves—our own boys got most of the whippings and the negroes grew up in fear of it. It is not the lack of education that increases crime and fills our prisons, for it is recorded that 47 per cent of the convicts can read and write. What is wanted is good moral training and the fear of punishment for crime. The negroes get none of this from their parents or their teachers or preachers, while in slavery their more trait of stealing little things was curbed and restrained, but it has come back in full force and now all of this generation will steal with but few exceptions. We have not had but one domestic in twenty-five years who would not steal, or, as they call it, take little things on the sly. We expect them to steal and are never disappointed. It is just as much a race trait in the negro as it is in the Arabs or the posterity of Ishmael. It is to the credit of the negro that he will not chase you nor betray your confidence. It is to the discredit of Jews and Gentiles that they will cheat you or defraud you if they can "honorably."

But the most alarming trait among the negroes is their utter disregard for chastity and their conjugal obligations. A large majority of the negro women are harlots and their children are bastards. This lack of womanly virtue is no drawback on their social standing or their church membership. If a woman belongs to the Daughters of Zion and pays her mite to the preacher, she is one of the saints. A negro is never turned out of church. They never suffer from remorse or the stings of conscience. They fear ghosts and graveyards, but not hell or the devil. Their religion is a compound of emotion and superstition. Neither the jail nor the gallows gives them much concern, for they spend their time in eating or sleeping, and then go straight to Jesus. They are a curious and interesting race of people. Imitative as monkeys, they readily fall into all the vices and follies of the white folks—negro boys all smoke cigarettes. The young bucks about the towns and cities wear tan shoes, and the girls wear spectacles and black stockings because the white girls do. A lady who has recently gone to Washington city to live writes to The New York Press that she cannot get a reliable or trustworthy negro servant, and says: "Have all the good negroes gone down south to Booker Washington's school? What has become of all that faithful, dog-like service the southerners tell us about? I have tried a whole procession of them, and they have worn out my patience. The last one I engaged came next morning at 10 o'clock wearing a white tulle hat and a pink satin bodice!"

But we still find them willing and useful about the house, and patriarchs like my wife and myself who have to keep open house for our numerous offspring and kindred and friends can hardly get along without them. I can still black my shoes and go to the market and the postoffice and work in the garden, and I don't mind making one fire in the morning, if I feel well enough to get up, but there are numerous little things I don't like to have to do. Old Uncle Tom is chopping wood for me now, and my wife has just sent him a cup of coffee and some biscuit to help out his dinner. She has great regard for these old, humble, good-natured negroes. I don't believe Uncle Tom would steal, for he says it was whipped out of him when he was a boy. Pity it isn't the rule now to whip them and save them from the chaingang. What a den of negro burglars and thieves there must be in Atlanta, judging from the daily business of the recorder's court. I reckon it is as bad in the other cities, but we don't hear of it. Bishop Gailor says the Tennessee people have tried education long enough and the people will no longer be overridden with a hord of trifling illiterate and immoral negroes. Mississippi declares that although the negroes outnumber the whites, they pay only 10 per cent of the poll tax and get back 60 per cent for thir own education, and that it has got to be stopped. If a negro won't pay a dollar a year for the education of his children, they don't deserve it, and the people have determined to quit spending half a million a year upon them. Georgia seems determined to do the same thing and our people all say amen. Let them have the taxes they pay and no more. Education is too cheap anyhow. Old Cononel Howard, whom everybody in this community loved and honored, was one of the best scholars and the best read man I ever met, and he told me that he never had but a few months' schooling and he prized his education all the more because he got it hard, for he was poor and had to work by day and study by the light of a tallow candle by night.

Well, this is enough for one time—whether it be orthodoxy or heterodoxy, it is my doxy and nobody is responsible for it but myself. I have some cardinal principles about the negro that I dare to maintain. I would lynch every brute who assaulted a white woman. I could see him massacred or burned or hanged, drawn and quartered. If this be treason, make the most of it. I would pursue him with arms and pitchforks, as Israel Putnam pursued the wolf that devoured the lambs of his flock. Even the law excuses some homicides when done in the heat of passion and before a man has time to cool. A father or a husband or a brother of the victim never cools. It rankles and stings to the quick as long as life lasts. If the officer gets the brute first let him keep him, but I have little respect for the officer who runs his horse to get him first. I have not forgotten the ten years we lived in the country and the apprehension I felt every day that I was away from home. The citizens who live in towns or cities and whose wives and daughters are protected by day and by night know nothing about the shadowy fear that follows those who live in the country and have no protection against the brutes. This fear is the greatest impediment to the country schools and the controlling reason that causes every prosperous farmer to rent out his farm and move to town. It was this that broke up our school and brought my family and most of the neighbors to Cartersville.

And now the northern press is gloating over the prospect of reducing our representation, because the negro has been disfranchised. "Let them do it," says Bishop Gailor—we must control the negro or the south will be ruined by them. After it is done will we have peace—or will the republican and the G. A. R.'s (grab all, republicans), hunt for something else to feed upon? Well, Mordecai is still sitting at the gate, but it was Haman who was hanged.

P. S.—I have just read Bishop Kelly's reply to the symposium and heartily indorse every word of it. He understands the negro and knows what he is writing about. And I have read Professor Council's earnest pleading for the negro girls who are nursing the little white children all over the sunny south. He begs the mothers of these children to train these nurses in good morals and virtuous conduct and save them from shame and disgrace. His letter is admirable, and so are all his writings and speeches. I have great respect for him.—Bill Arp, in Atlanta Constitution.

PICTURES THAT ARE OLD.

That Is the Test of Value in Some Cases Says a Dealer.

"There is nothing more pathetic in the world," said a local art dealer, "than a poor gentleman or a lady with a worthless picture which he or she believes to be valuable and wants to sell. New Orleans is simply overflowing with cases of that kind, because there are such an enormous number of pictures here that are merely old and have no other interest. In nine cases out of ten the possessor of one of these blackened, mildewed, worm-eaten canvases will feel satisfied that he has an art treasure of extraordinary value; often there is a family tradition that it is an 'old master,' and the prices placed on such lumber would be laughable if they were not pathetic. I laid down a rule years ago," the dealer went on, "never to allow sentiment to enter into business; but quite recently I broke it in behalf of the owner of a picture of the kind to which I refer, and have since had occasion to regret that I didn't stick to my principles. It was an old friend, who had a painting that he believed firmly to be a masterpiece from one of the great European galleries. The subject was mythological, introducing several goddesses and graces, but the surface was so discolored by smoke and time that it was almost impossible to distinguish any of the figures. I could see enough, however, to tell me that it was a mere daub, and when he asked me to put it on sale at my store I at first declined. He pleaded so earnestly, however, that I finally told him to send it around, and agreed to advise him of any advantageous proposition. Two or three days later a stranger dropped in and amazed me by offering $75 for the picture. I accepted at once, but before delivering it I sent word to my friend, who came around in hot haste and repudiated the bargain. Moreover, he was highly indignant that I should have dreamed of accepting such a beggarly pittance and said so much that I got mad myself and ordered him to remove the picture at once, which he did, and took it to a second-hand store near Jackson Square.

"Now comes the curious sequel. In less than a week a fat, prosperous-looking gentleman brought the identical painting into the store to be framed and boxed for shipment to Chicago. He told me he had paid $300 for it. 'I don't know who painted it,' he said, 'and don't care; the thing I want is genuine age, and it's certainly got that—lots of it.' My friend now believes firmly that I tried to juggle him out of his treasure at a fraction of its value, and I have taken a solemn oath never to have anything more to do with old pictures of any description. I ought to add that the Chicago lunatic was a bird of great rarity. If he was plentiful there would be an immense boom in the local old-master market."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

How Russian Peasants Live.

Most of the Russian peasants pass a great deal of their life in workshops where they work, eat and sleep, the same room sheltering a number and probably a pig into the bargain. There are few beds. Instead, all around the four walls of the room is fixed what may be literally described as a bench. It is made of wood, and at this works the peasant by day and on it he sleeps by night, each man at his own spot. The conditions of the Russian workshop, or factory, and the Russian prison and military barracks, so far as interior arrangements are concerned, are akin. Chairs there will also be and tables, rudely fashioned, as a rule, by the men themselves.—London Saturday Review.

Lamp-Post Street Booths.

An English plan in some of the smaller towns is to build stands around the base of electric lamp posts, fitting them up with electric light and renting them to costermongers. They would doubtless be popular with the Italian fruit venders in America.

Irrigation has enabled Arizona to add olives and dates to her products. If the regions now within the rain belt do not look a little out the so-called arid regions, through irrigation, will leave them in the lurch. If irrigation is good for one section, it is good for all, and there is no reason why even the most favored regions should not arrange for irrigation, if only to be held in reserve in the event of drought, reflects the St. Louis Star.

Multiple telegraphy has made a seven-league stride from four messages on one wire to sixteen, if reports from Paris of the success of the new Mersadier system be not tinged all rose color. To send at one and the same time sixteen messages, while receiving an equal number, is certainly a feat in single wire telegraphy.

REV. DR. TALMAGE.

DISCOURSE BY THE EMINENT DIVINE LAST SUNDAY.

Subject: Dreams—They Are the Avenue Through Which God Has Again and Again Marched Upon the Human Soul—Proof of Immortality—Warned by God

WASHINGTON, D. C.—In this discourse Dr. Talmage discusses a much talked of subject, and one in which all are interested. The text is Joel ii. 28: "I will pour out My spirit upon all flesh. Your old men shall dream dreams, your young men shall see visions."

In this photograph of the millennium the dream is lifted into great conspicuity. You may say of a dream that it is a nocturnal fantasia, or that it is the absurd combination of waking thoughts, and with a slur of intonation you may say, "It is only a dream," but God has honored the dream by making it the avenue through which again and again He has marched upon the human soul, decided the fate of nations, and changed the course of the world's history. God appeared in a dream to Abimelech, warning him against an unlawful marriage; in a dream to Jacob, announcing by the ladder set against the sky full of angels, the communication between earth and heaven; in a dream to Joseph, foretelling his coming power under the figure of all the sheaves of the harvest bowing down to his sheaf; to the chief butler, foretelling his disimprisonment; to the chief baker, announcing his decapitation; to Pharaoh, showing him first the seven famine struck years, under the figure of the seven lean cows devouring the seven fat cows; to Solomon, giving him, the choice between wisdom and riches and honor; to a warrior, under the figure of a barley cake smiting down a tent, encouraging Gideon in his battle against the Midianites; to Nebuchadnezzar, under the figure of a broken image and a hewn down tree, foretelling the overthrow of his power; to Joseph, of the New Testament, announcing the birth of Christ in his own household, and again bidding him fly from Herodic persecutions; to Pilate's wife, warning him not to become complicated with the judicial overthrow of Christ.

We all admit that God in ancient times and under Bible dispensation addressed the people through dreams. The question now is, does God appear in our day and reveal Himself through dreams? That is the question everybody asks, and that question I will try to answer. You ask me if I believe in dreams. My answer is, I do, but all I have to say will be under five heads.

Remark the First—The Scriptures are so full of revelation from God that if we get no communication from Him in dreams we ought, nevertheless, to be satisfied.

With twenty guidebooks to tell you how to get to New York or Pittsburg or London or Glasgow or Manchester do you want a night vision to tell you how to make the journey? We have in this Scripture full direction in regard to the journey of this life and how to get to the celestial city, and with this grand guidebook, this magnificent directory, we ought to be satisfied. I have more faith in a decision to which I come when I am wide awake than when I am sound asleep. I have noticed that those who give a great deal of their time to studying dreams get their brains addled. They are very anxious to remember what they dreamed about the first night they slept in a new house. If in their dream they take the hand of a corpse they are going to die. If they dream of a garden it means a sepulcher. If something turns out according to a night vision, they say: "Well, I am not surprised; I dreamed it." If it turns out different from the night vision, they say, "Well, dreams go by contraries." In their efforts to put their dreams into rhythm they put their waking thoughts into discord. Now, the Bible is so full of revelation that we ought to be satisfied if we get no further revelation.

Sound sleep received great honor when Adam slept so extraordinarily that the surgical incision which gave him Eve did not wake him, but there is no such need for extraordinary slumber now, and he who catches an Eve must needs be wide awake! No need of such a dream as Jacob had, with a ladder against the sky, when ten thousand times it has been demonstrated that earth and heaven are in communication. No such dream needed as that which was given to Abimelech, warning him against an unlawful marriage, when we have the records of the county clerk's office. No need of such a dream as was given to Pharoah about the seven years of famine, for now the seasons march in regular procession and steamer and rail train carry breadstuffs to every famine struck nation. No need of a dream like that which encouraged Gideon, for all through Christendom it is announced and acknowledged and demonstrated that righteousness sooner or later will get the victory.

If there should come about a crisis in your life upon which the Bible does not seem to be sufficiently specific go to God in prayer, and you will get especial direction. I have more faith ninety-nine times out of a hundred in directions given you with the Bible in your lap and your thoughts uplifted in prayer to God than in all the information you will get unconscious on your pillow.

I can very easily understand why the Babylonians and the Egyptians, with no Bible, should put so much stress on dreams, and the Chinese in their holy book, Chow King, should think their emperor gets his directions through dreams from God, and that Homer should think that all dreams came from Jove, and that in ancient times dreams were classified into a science, but why do you and I put so much stress upon dreams when we have a supernal book of infinite wisdom on all subjects? Why should we harry ourselves with dreams? Why should Eddystone and Barnegat lighthouses question a summer firefly?

Remark the Second—All dreams have an important meaning. They prove that the soul is comparatively independent of the body. The eyes are closed; the senses are dull, the entire body goes into a lethargy which in all languages is used as a type of death, and then the soul spreads its wing and never sleeps. It leaps the Atlantic Ocean and mingles in scenes 3000 miles away. It travels great reaches of time, flashes back eighty years, and the octogenarian is a boy again in his father's house. If the soul before it has entirely broken its chain of flesh can do all this, how far can it leap, what circles can it cut when it is fully liberated? Every dream, whether agreeable or harassing, whether sunshiny or tempestuous, means so much that, rising from your couch, you ought to kneel down and say: "O God, am I immortal? Whence? Whither? Two natures. My soul caged now—what when the door of the cage is opened? If my soul can fly so far in the few hours in which my body is asleep in the night, how far can it fly when my body sleeps the long sleep of the grave?" Oh, this power to dream, how startling, how overwhelming! Immortal! immortal!

Remark the Third—The vast majority of dreams are merely the result of disturbed physical condition, and are not a supernatural message. Job had carbuncles and he was scared in the night. He says, "Thou scarest me with dreams and terrifiest me with visions." Solomon had an overwrought brain, overwrought with public business, and he suffered from erratic slumber, and he writes in Ecclesiastes, "A dream cometh through the multitude of business." Dr. Gregory, in experimenting with dreams, found that a bottle of hot water put to his feet while in slumber made him think he was going up the hot sides of Mount Etna. Another morbid physician, experimenting with dreams, his feet uncovered through sleep, thought he was riding in an Alpine diligence. But a great many dreams are merely narcotic disturbance. Anything that you see while under the influence of chloral or brandy or hashish or laudanum is not a revelation from God.

The learned De Quincey did not ascribe to divine communication what he saw in sleep, opium saturated, dreams which he afterward described in the following words: "I was worshiped, I was sacrificed, I fled from the wrath of Brahma, through all the forests of Asia. Vishnu hated me. Seeva laid in wait for me. I came suddenly upon Isis and Osiris. I had done a deed, they said, that made the crocodiles tremble. I was buried for a thousand years in stone coffins, with mummies and sphinxes in narrow chambers at the heart of eternal pyramids. I was kissed with the cancerous kiss of crocodiles and lay confounded with unutterable slimy things among wreathy and Nilotic mud."

Do not mistake narcotic disturbance for divine revelation. But I have to tell you that the majority of the dreams are merely the penalty of outraged digestive organs, and you have no right to mistake the nightmare for heavenly revelation. Late suppers are a warranty deed for bad dreams. Highly spiced salads at 11 o'clock at night, instead of opening the door heavenward, open the door infernal and diabolical. You outrage natural law, and you insult the God who made those laws. It takes from three to five hours to digest food, and you have no right to keep your digestive organs in struggle when the rest of your body is in somnolence. The general rule is eat nothing after 6 o'clock at night, retire at 10, sleep on your right side, keep the window open five inches for ventilation, and other worlds will not disturb you much. By physical maltreatment you take the ladder that Jacob saw in his dream, and you lower it to the nether world allowing the ascent of the demoniacal. Dreams are midnight dyspepsia. An unregulated desire for something to eat ruined the race in paradise, and an unregulated desire for something to eat keeps it ruined. The world during 6000 years has tried in vain to digest that first apple. The world will not be evangelized until we get rid of a dyspeptic Christianity. Healthy people do not want the cadaverous and sleepy thing that some people call religion. They want a religion that lives regularly by day and sleeps soundly by night. If through trouble or coming on of old age or exhaustion of Christian service you cannot sleep well, then you may expect from God "songs in the night," but there are no blessed communications to those who willingly surrender to indigestibles. Napoleon's army at Leipsic, Dresden and Borodino came near being destroyed through the disturbed gastric juices of its commander. That is the way you have lost some of your battles.

All dreams that make you better are from God. How do I know it? Is not God the source of all good? It does not take a very logical mind to argue that out. Tertullian and Martin Luther believed in dreams. The dreams of John Huss are immortal. St. Augustine, the Christian father, gives us the fact that a Carthagenian physician was persuaded of the immortality of the soul by an argument which he heard in a dream. The night before his assassination the wife of Julius Caesar dreamed that her husband fell dead across her lap.

Furthermore, I have to say that there are people who were converted to God through a dream. The Rev. John Newton, the fame of whose piety fills all Christendom, while a profligate sailor on shipboard, in his dream thought that a being approached him and gave him a very beautiful ring and put it upon his finger and said to him: "As long as you wear that ring you will be prospered. If you lose that ring you will be ruined." In the same dream another personage appeared and by a strange infatuation persuaded John Newton to throw overboard that ring, and it sank into the sea. Then the mountains in sight were full of fire, and the air was was lurid with consuming wrath. While John Newton was repenting of his folly in having thrown overboard the treasure another personage came through the dream and told John Newton he would plunge into the sea and bring that ring up if he desired it. He plunged into the sea and brought it up and said to John Newton, "Here is that gem, but I think I will keep it for you lest you lose it again." And John Newton consented, and all the fire went out from the mountains, and all the signs of lurid wrath disappeared from the air, and John Newton said that he saw in his dream that that valuable gem was his soul, and that the being who persuaded him to throw it overboard was Satan, and that the one who plunged in and restored that gem, keeping it for him, was Christ. And that dream makes one of the most wonderful chapters in the life of that most wonderful man.

A German was crossing the Atlantic Ocean, and in his dream he saw a man with a handful of white flowers, and he was told to follow the man who had that handful of white flowers. The German, arriving in New York, wandered into the Fulton street prayer meeting, and Mr. Lamphier, the great apostle of prayer meetings, that day had given to him a bunch of tuberoses. They stood on his desk, and at the close of the religious services he took the tuberoses and started homeward, and the German followed him and through an interpreter told Mr. Lamphier that on the sea he had dreamed of a man with a handful of white flowers, and was told to follow him. Suffice it to say that through that interview and following interviews he became a Christian and is a city missionary, preaching the gospel to his own countrymen. God in a dream!

John Hardonk, while on shipboard, dreamed one night that the day of judgment had come, and that the roll of the ship's crew was called except his own name, and that these people, this crew, were all banished, and in this dream he asked the reader why his own name was omitted, and he was told it was to give him more opportunity for repentance. He woke up a different man. He became illustrious for Christian attainment. If you do not believe these things, then you must discard all testimony and refuse to accept any kind of authoritative witness. God in a dream!

Rev. Herbert Mendes was converted to God through a dream of the last judgment, and many of us have had some dream of that great day of judgment which shall be the winding up of the world's history. If you have not dreamed of it, perhaps tonight you may dream of that day. There are enough materials to make a dream. Enough voices, for there shall be the roaring of the elements and the great earthquake. Enough light for the dream, for the world shall blaze. Enough excitement, for the mountains shall fall. Enough water, for the ocean shall rear. Enough astronomical phenomena, for the stars shall go out. Enough populations, for all the races of all the ages will fall into line of one of two processions, the one ascending and the other descending, the one led on by the rider on the white horse of eternal victory, the other led on by Apollyon on the black charger of eternal defeat. The dream comes on me now, and I see the lightnings from above answering the volcanic disturbances from beneath, and I hear the long reverberating thunders that shall wake up the dead, and all the seas, lifting up their crystal voices, cry, "Come to judgment!" and all the voices of the heaven cry, "Come to judgment!" and crumbling mausoleum and Westminster abbeys and pyramids of the dead with marble voices cry, "Come to judgment!" And the archangel seizes an instrument of music that was made only for one sound, and thrusting that mighty instrument through the clouds and turning it this way, he shall put it to his lips and blow the long, loud blast that shall make the solid earth quiver, crying, "Come to judgment!"

Then from this earthly grossness quit,
Attired in stars, we shall forever sit.

THE SABBATH SCHOOL

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR DECEMBER 15.

Subject: The Passover, Ex. xii., 1-11—Golden Text, I Cor. v., 7—Memory Verses, 12-14—Commentary on the Day's Lesson.

1. "The Lord spake." The week of redemption, the appointment of the feast, the change in the calendar, were all divine. The source of all was God, not Moses.

2. "This month." Abib, or Nisan; corresponding as nearly as possible to the last half of March and the first half of April. The Jewish months began with the new moon. "Beginning of months." The first not only in order, but in estimation. It had formerly been the seventh according to the reckoning of the civil year which began in September and which continued unchanged, but from this time Abib was to stand first in the national religious year.

3. "Speak," etc. Through the elders, V. 21. "A lamb for an house." A kid might be taken, V. 5. The service was to be a domestic one, for the deliverance was to be from an evil threatened to every house in Egypt.

4. "If the household be too little." That is, if there be not enough persons in one family to eat a whole lamb, then two families must join together. The rabbins tell us that there should be at least ten persons to one paschal lamb, and not more than twenty. "According to the number." There may be a want of persons to feed upon the lamb, though there can be no lack of food for them to feed upon. Every man "according to his eating" may feast to the full upon Christ.

5. "Without blemish." That is entire, whole, sound, having neither defect nor deformity. This was a type of Christ. See Heb. 7: 26; 1 Pet. 1: 19. The Saviour—the Lamb of God was (1) perfect, (2) innocent and (3) slain as a sacrifice for others. (4) He was offered at the season and at the very hour of the pascal sacrifice. (5) Not a bone was broken. (6) He is able to take away our sins. John 1: 29.

6. "Keep it up." The Hebrew implies that it was to be kept with great care. "Until the fourteenth." It was to be separated from the rest of the flock four days before the time of sacrifice. "In the evening." Literally, "between the evenings;" that is, from the time the sun begins to decline to that of its full setting, say, between 3 and 6 o'clock. The rabbins mark four things that were required in the first passover that were never required afterward: 1. The eating of the lamb in their houses dispersed through Goshen. 2. The taking the lamb on the tenth day. 3. The striking of its blood on the door posts and lintels of their houses. 4. Their eating it in haste.

7. "Take of the blood." The life is in the blood. This typifies the blood of Christ which was shed for the sins of the world. "Strike it." This was done by dipping a bunch of hyssop into the blood, V. 22. "Two side posts," etc. This was done as a mark of safety, a token of deliverance, that the destroying angel, when passing through the land to slay the first born of the Egyptians, might see and pass over the houses of the Israelites and spare their families.

8. "Eat the flesh." Undoubtedly this feast had a physical purpose. The Israelites were to start in the middle of the night on a long and wearisome journey, and it was important that they should not start fasting. Eating together is a symbol of fellowship and a covenant of unity. "Roast with fire." For the sake of expedition; and this difference was always observed between the cooking of the pascal lamb and the other offerings. 2 Chron. 35: 13. "Unleavened bread." This was also for the sake of dispatch. Deut. 16: 3. There was also a typical meaning attached to the unleavened bread; leaven was emblematical of evil. Luke 12: 1; 1 Cor. 5: 8. "With bitter herbs." This was to remind the Hebrews of their great afflictions in Egypt, and also of the trials to which they were subject on account of sin. Our bitter herbs are the remembrance of sins committed and the confession of our wrongdoings. The cup of repentance is bitter.

9. "Raw." That is, unfit for use, and therefore unfit for representing spiritual enjoyment. "Sodden." Boiled. It must not be deprived of any portion of its savor. "Head with his legs," etc.—See R. V. Not a bone was to be broken. This pointed to Christ. See John 19: 36.

10. "Let nothing of it remain." The lamb was to be eaten, all eaten, eaten by all, and eaten at once. The Lord Jesus is to be received into the soul as its food, and this is to be done with a whole Christ, by each one of His people, and done just now. The Israelites must not only slay, they must eat. It is not enough that Christ has died for us, we must receive Him into our hearts and lives. "Until the morning." To prevent putrefaction, which would soon take place in a hot country. That which is offered to God must not become corrupt.

11. "Girded," etc. Every preparation must be made for an immediate departure. The long, flowing robes were girded around the loins; shoes, or sandals, not worn in the house or at meals, were fastened to the feet, and the traveler's staff was taken in hand. These instructions are understood by the Jews to apply only to the first passover. "The Lord's passover." Called by this name because the destroying angel passed over the dwellings of the Israelites, while destroying the Egyptians.

12. "Gods of Egypt." 1. God smote objects of Egyptian worship, in destroying the first born of the king and the animals which were worshiped. 2. This showed the worthlessness of these gods, for they were powerless to save the people.

13. "The blood a token." Or sign. The blood was a sign of God's mercy, love, protection and deliverance; it was also a sign of the obedience and faith of the Israelites.

14. "This day—a memorial." To keep in remembrance God's mercy in bringing them out of Egypt, and His judgments on their oppressors. "A feast." It was to be annually observed, and celebrated with solemn religious joy as long as they remained a distinct people. "An ordinance." It was an institution of God, and was neither to be altered nor set aside by any human authority.

15. "Cut off." There are thirty-six places in which this cutting off is threatened against the Jews for neglect of some particular duty. It probably means that the one thus "cut off" was separated "from the rights and privileges of an Israelite."

16. "An holy convocation." The people were called together by the sound of trumpets "to attend the rites and ordinances of divine worship." God is a holy being and must be worshiped in holiness. Psa. 29: 2.

17. "The feast of unleavened bread." This seems to be only another name for the feast of the Passover. Ex. 23: 15.

It is a curious fact that two of what may be called the greatest gun inventors of England of the time are American-born men. As is well-known, the United States claims Sir Hiram Maxim as its own; while the other celebrity who was born under the Stars and Stripes is Dr. Richard J. Gatling, who completed his eighty-third year recently. It is hardly necessary to say that the veteran is the inventor of the famous Gatling gun, which has been computed to have killed a quarter of a million men since 1862.

ONE feature of the new constitution which cannot be too well known is that every man who wishes to take part in future elections must pay his poll tax ($1.50) each year and hold the Tax Collector's receipt for the same. All poll taxes must be paid by the 1st of February, or you cannot vote.

CLANTON will have a municipal election in January, and all citizens who desire to vote at that election, must hold the receipt for their poll tax for 1902, or they will be ineligible. They cannot put off paying their poll tax until the 1st of February. The Collector will be here the last ten days of this year, and Clantonians should make it a point to settle up then.

THE public meeting called for December 27, is a move in the right direction. It is not a party movement as will be seen by referring to the signatures of the men calling the meeting. Many more signatures of both prominent Democrats and Populists would have been added, but the idea was to get the meeting called and as much notice given as possible. We hope to see a full attendance and a correct understanding of the new condition of affairs come to.

THE Harris Nickel Plate Show which gave two performances at Clanton yesterday was one of the best we have seen in some time. The St. Leon family were an exceptionally clever troup of acrobats, aerialists and riders, and the Carrolls performed some wonderful feats in the air. The show was clean throughout and was highly appreciated by the audiences.

Mary J. Adams, white, convicted of bigamy last week and sentenced to two years, has been pardoned by the Governor. The endorsement of the Governor is as follows: "The presiding judge states that this womam thought that a decree granted to her husband authorized her to remarry. The judge and the pardoning board recommend executive clemency. She was a very ignorant woman. Let a pardon issue.

ECONOMY is a virtue, but it can sometimes be carried to an inconvenient length. The new depot at Clanton is a credit to the town as well as the L. & N. Railroad Co. While daylight lasts we can all admire it as much as we want to, and as soon as darkness comes the two lamps outside the depot give an agreeable light and make the crossing of the railroad safe and practicable. But alas! as soon as the mail train has passed, the company, with great economy, turns out the light and all is gloom and darkness, and the numerous freight trains make crossing difficult and dangerous. If the company cannot afford to burn one lamp at the crossing, it would seem that the Town Council might enter into some arrangement with them that the light might be kept burning until at least ten or eleven o'clock when all good people should be in bed. The expense would be very small and our citizens would be greatly benefitted, while accidents would be avoided and the company thereby a gainer.

OPENING OF THE PEOPLES SAVINGS BANK.

On Saturday last the elegant new brick building of the Peoples Savings Bank was formally opened for business. The building itself is undoubtedly the most handsome erection to be found anywhere between Birmingham and Montgomery, and the office fittings are elaborate and up to date.

The vault is strongly and substantially built and contains a National Safe and Lock Co's., time safe of the latest construction. The vault and safe are burglar proof as well as fire proof, making an absolutely safe place that depositors can firmly depend upon. The makers of the safe have given the following guarantee:

To the People of Ghilton County:

We hereby certify that the National Cannon-Breech Screw Door safe, regular price $1000, which we have sold to the Peoples Saving Bank, furnishes absolute protection to depositors when the safe is locked and the three magnificient time locks thereon are set and running.

We further certify that if any safe factory or representative of any safe factory, or any newspaper, or man can produce a single instance where this safe has been robbed up to date in the United States we will make them a present of a $2000 safe. We also certify that we can prove in writing that the Mosler Screw Door, and also the Victor Screw Door Bank safe, have both been robbed of a large amount of money.

NATIONAL SAFE & LOCK CO.
per G. J. THRASHER.

The first day's deposits amounted to $10,564.00, most of our leading citizens opening account with the Bank.

President W. S. Holloway was early on hand and a meeting of the Board of Directors was held and Dr. E. A. Matthews appointed Cashier. Then business was commenced and throughout the day was continued in a highly satisfactory manner.

A large number of persons opened accounts on the first day and there is no doubt but that the Bank has a bright and prosperous future before it.

The bank affords a splendid opportunity for our people to learn thrift. Money in the pocket burns a hole, but money in the bank requires a little deliberation; although you can deposit your money in the bank in the morning and take it out again the same day if you wish. Put your cash in the bank and no matter when you want to take it out it is always there awaiting your call. Deposits from fifty cents up will be received. Just think, a deposit of only fifty cents each week will amount to $26 a year. You won't miss the fifty cents every week, but you will appreciate the total amount at the end of a year. Try it.

W. E. Holloway, of Montgomery, is President; Dr. E. A. Matthews, of Clanton, Vice President and Cashier. The Directors are E. M. Pinckard, W. I. Mullins, W. T. Callens, P. D. Wilson, H. M. Martin Sr., and Probate Judge S. M. Adams. These gentlemen will use every endeavor to see that the business of the institution is conducted in the best enterests of the people as well as safely for the stockholders. The bank means much for Chilton county and Clanton.

Mr. T. B. Teel, the contractor, deserves great credit for the building of the bank, and Mr. J. M. Moore, the painter, for the fine finish of the interior.

Saved At Grave's Brink.

"I know I would long ago have been in my grave," writes Mrs. S. H. Newsom, of Decatur, Ala., "if it had not been for Electric Bitters. For three years I suffered untold agony from the worst forms of Indigestion, Waterbash, Stomach and Bowel Dispepsia. But this excellent medicide did me a world of good. Since using it I can eat heartily and have gained 35 lbs." For Indigestion, Loss of Appetite, Stomach, Liver and Kidney troubles Electric Bitters are a positive, guaranteed cure. Only 50c at Clanton Drug co., and F. A. Guiledge Verbena.

A New College For Alabama.

Our state is keeping pace with other states in educational matters as well as in other things. Besides the splendid state institutions, and the schools under control of religous denominations, the Presbyterian Synod of Alabama at its recent meeting in Birmingham, decided to found a college in this state. A committee of five members was appointed; Rev. A. A. Little, chairman, Rev A. R. Curry, Rev. G. W. Patterson, Judge Coleman of Eutaw, and Mr. Caldwell Bradshaw of Birmingham.

The Presbyterians of our state are a fine body of people and as a general thing, prosperous, it is a wonder they have not had a college before this, when we remember the well known attitude of this church on the subject of education. No doubt men of means will consider it a privilege to give largely to the endowment, and those of smaller means can add to it. This is a fine opportunity for some enterprising town to secure a first rate institution of learning. A college always brings a class of people that any town will be glad to have in its borders. No doubt several of our towns will compete actively for this college. A suitable site and enough buildings will be expected as an enducement to locate an institution of such value in one of our towns.

This school, when established will be a feeder to the university, and to the great universities outside of our state. Every educational enterprise deserves the cordial cooperation of all who have the welfare of their country at heart. For every one tends to drive away that cloud of ignorance which is the hatching place for ills of our body politic. Every school reaches some who would other vise grow up in ignorance. There is no unwise and unholy competition between church schools, and our state institutions. They are mutually helpful to one another; and any attempt to array one against the other is foolish, to say the least. So let the state take care of her institutions of learning, and let the various denominations establish their colleges until the ghoul of ignorance is driven away and her twin sister, vice hides her face among an enlightened people.

If married women had their lives to live over again, we venture to say that most of them would change their minds about who they marry.

HAVE YOU HEARD THE RUMOR—that Strock gives a bargain in Children's Shoes? It is true

If your boy gets burned when he shoots his Christmas cracker, use the "old reliable," Dr. Tibhenor's Antiseptic. It is clean and pleasant, cooling and soothing to the burn, relieves suffering and heals almost like magic. Only 50c. a bottle, by druggists.

KICK A DOG

Kick a dog and he bites you. He bites you and you kick him. The more you kick the more he bites and the more he bites the more you kick. Each makes the other worse.

A thin body makes thin blood. Thin blood makes a thin body. Each makes the other worse. If there is going to be a change the help must come from outside.

Scott's Emulsion is the right help. It breaks up such a combination. First it sets the stomach right. Then it enriches the blood. That strengthens the body and it begins to grow new flesh.

A strong body makes rich blood and rich blood makes a strong body. Each makes the other better. This is the way Scott's Emulsion puts the thin body on its feet. Now it can get along by itself. No need of medicine.

This picture represents the Trade Mark of Scott's Emulsion and is on the wrapper of every bottle.

A WORTHY SUCCESSOR
"Something New Under The Sun."

All Doctors have tried to cure CATARRH by the use of powders, acid gases, inhalers and drugs in paste form. Their powders dry up the mucuous membranes causing them to crack open and bleed. The powerful acids used in the inhalers have entirely eaten away the same membranes that their makers have aimed to cure, while pastes and ointments cannot reach the disease. An old and experienced practitioner who has for many years made a close study and specialty of the treatment of CATARRH, has at last perfected a Treatment which when faithfully used, not only relieves at once, but permanently cures CATARRH, by removing the cause, stopping the discharges, and curing all inflammation. It is the only remedy known to science that actually reaches the afflicted parts. This wonderful remedy is known as "SNUFFLES" the GUARANTEED CATARRH CURE and is sold at the extremely low price of One Dollar, each package containing internal and external medicine sufficient for a full month's treatment and everything necessary to its perfect use.

"SNUFFLES" is the only perfect CATARRH CURE ever made and is now recognized as the only safe and positive cure for that annoying and disgusting disease. It cures all inflammation quickly and permanently and is also wonderfully quick to relieve HAY FEVER or COLD in the HEAD.

CATARRH when neglected often leads to CONSUMPTION—"SNUFFLES" will save you if you use it at once. It is no ordinary remedy, but a complete treatment which is positively guaranteed to cure CATARRH in any form or stage if used according to the directions which accompany each package. Don't delay but send for it at once, and write full particulars as to your condition, and you will receive special advice from the discoverer of this wonderful remedy regarding your case without cost to you beyond the regular price of "SNUFFLES" the "GUARANTEED CATARRH CURE."

Sent prepaid to any address in the United States or Canada on receipt of One Dollar. Address Dept C 985 EDWIN E. GILES & COMPANY, 2530 and 2532 Market Street, Philadelphia.

ARE YOU DEAF? ANY HEAD NOISES?

ALL CASES OF

DEAFNESS OR HARD HEARING ARE NOW CURABLE

by our new invention. Only those born deaf are incurable.

HEAD NOISES CEASE IMMEDIATELY.

F. A. WERMAN, OF BALTIMORE, SAYS:

BALTIMORE, Md., March 30, 1901.

Gentlemen:—Being entirely cured of deafness, thanks to your treatment, I will now give you a full history of my case, to be used at your discretion.

About five years ago my right ear began to sing, and this kept on getting worse, until I lost my hearing in this ear entirely.

I underwent a treatment for catarrh, for three months, without any success, consulted a number of physicians, among others, the most eminent ear specialist of this city, who told me that only an operation could help me, and even that only temporarily, that the head noises would then cease, but the hearing in the affected ear would be lost forever.

I then saw your advertisement, accidentally in a New York paper, and ordered your treatment. After I had used it only a few days according to your directions, the noises ceased, and to-day, after five weeks, my hearing in the diseased ear has been entirely restored. I thank you heartily and beg to remain Very truly yours,

F. A. WERMAN, 730 S. Broadway, Baltimore, Md.

THE HOME GOLD CURE.

An Ingenious Treatment by which Drunkards are Being Cured Daily in Spite of Themselves.

No Noxious Doses, No Weakening of the Nerves. A Pleasant and Positive Cure for the Liquor Habit.

It is now generally known and understood that drunkenness is a disease and not weakness. A body filled with poison, and nerves completely shattered by periodical or constant use of intoxicating liquors, requires an antidote capable of neutralizing and eradicating this poison, and destroying the craving for intoxicants. Sufferers may now cure themselves at home without publicity or loss of time from business by this wonderful "HOME GOLD CURE" which has been perfected after many years of close study and treatment of inebriates. The faithful use according to directions of this wonderful discovery is positively guaranteed to cure the most obstinate case, no matter how hard a drinker. Our records show the marvelous transformation of thousands of Drunkards into sober, industrious and upright men.

WIVES CURE YOUR HUSBANDS!! CHILDREN CURE YOUR FATHERS!! this remedy is in no sense a nostrum but is a specific for this disease only, and is so skillfully devised and prepared that it is thoroughly soluble and pleasant to the taste, so that it can be given in a cup of tea or coffee without the knowledge of the person taking it. Thousands of Drunkards have cured themselves with this priceless remedy, and as many more have been cured and made temperate men by having the "CURE" administered by loving friends and relatives without their knowledge in coffee or tea, and believe today that they discontinued drinking of their own free will. DO NOT WAIT. Do not be deluded by apparent and misleading "improvement." Drive out the disease at once and for all time. The "HOME GOLD CURE" is sold at the extremely low price of One Dollar, thus placing within reach of every body a treatment more effectual than others costing $25 to $50. Full directions accompany each package. Special advice by skilled physicians when requested without extra charge. Sent prepaid to any part of the world on receipt of One Dollar. Address Dept. C 935, EDWIN B. GILES & COMPANY, 2330 and 2332 Market Street, Philadelphia.

THE NEW WOMAN OF FIFTY.

Young Looking Grandmothers of To-day and a Fresh Cause of Discontent.

The grandmother may not have disappeared altogether, but her outward and visible signs have changed enough to make her very different from what she used to be. The woman of fifty to-day looks as little like the ideas formerly entertained of that age as she wants to.

If the ideal of thirty years ago is in her mind she may look like an old woman. If she prefers to follow the mode of the day she may look as young as the dressmakers and her own natural condition will enable her to appear. And this youthfulness will not attract the least attention.

If her hair be without a suspicion of gray and her figure slim that will be no more unexpected than the youthfulness of her dress; and the woman of fifty may now dress like the woman of thirty and still observe the best standards of taste. She may even dye her hair without committing any such transgression of the laws of taste as she would have been guilty of several years ago. Even if she dyes it yellow she will be criticised no more sharply than the woman of thirty would if she did the same thing.

Now middle age has the privileges of youth and is at liberty to keep itself as attractive looking as possible. The woman of fifty is not to be put among the aged nowadays because she happens to have accumulated a certain number of years and has become a grandmother. She is not for that reason to be counted among the women who are forbidden to think of their looks or to attend to their appearances further than to see to it that their white caps are coquettishly trimmed with ribbons and their black dresses free from wrinkles. It used to be a foregone conclusion that they would be wrinkled themselves whether their gowns were or not.

The woman of fifty enjoys her present privileges so much that it is a wonder that she could ever have reconciled herself to the old ideas. Whether the liberality that is shown now toward the woman of this age will be extended to those still her senior remains to be seen. It is certain that nobody supposed twenty years ago that the women of fifty would ever look as they do to-day, or would be able to dress with taste and propriety in the styles that they adopt to-day. So this new view may be extented to take another and older class.

The new woman of fifty has not been received by all of her sex as a complete success. Some of the objections to her are plainly founded on prejudice. But what follows is not the talk of a woman who is in the lest prejudiced, and there is no criticism to be made of her intelligence. She thinks that women were happier when they were less youthful-looking at fifty.

"There may be," she said, "greater satisfaction among women of a certain age that they look younger now than they were able to appear several years ago; but they are no happier than they were for that reason. There are more dissatisfied, discontented-looking women of fifty nowadays than there ever were in the past.

"I think it is largely due to the fact that their new dress and their new place in the world do not in the least agree with their ages. It is not of the least use for a woman to look like forty or younger when she is compelled to act still as she would at her real age.

"It is this incongruity between the woman's looks and the way she is compelled to act that makes her unhappy and discontented with her lot. She looks in the glass and sees that she looks younger by ten years than she is. That makes her feel as if she would like to act more in accordance with the age she would like to be. But that is out of the question in the majority of cases, and she is compelled to reconcile herself as best she can to the difference between her looks and her aspirations.

"That is the evil of the new change in the woman of fifty. She may be younger-looking that she was in the old days, but she is not so happy."—New York Sun.

Jewels of the Olden Times.

Heirlooms can be as instructive as they are precious if they are worthy the name in length of years and accumulation of honors, in the opinion of a fair Newport maid, who with pride shows a Cardinal Richelieu gold medal, coming down from the venerable Queen Anne days. When gold medals were modishly worn on chains and ribbons this one was the ornament of a certain Lady Clarissa Montgomerie, an ancestress of renowned beauty. Looking up the jewels of that period all are most familiar, since we are now wearing about the same kind, in the same way. Gold hearts, plain or jeweled, were the craze then, as now. So were gold chains with fanciful links, and they were much the fashion when set with "Moco" stone known to us by the name of moss agate. Strings of pearls were women's pride and delight, from two to five and six grains each in weight, and wondrous solitaire pearls, pierced with holes and weighing twelve grains each, were envied possessions. To have a diamond ring set with stones was to be in the latest fashion, and to own others set with rubies, as well as garnets, the diamonds to number twelve and being smaller, was considered something to be proud of, while an amethyst alone, set with twelve diamonds, was a smart finger jewel. Long diamonds, which we are beginning to revive, and which weighed two and one-half to three grains, were very much in vogue for "drops," as they were called, to stomacher pieces, as well as earrings. A pair of diamond earrings with moderate drops sold then for $2?. Garnet earrings and drops were also much worn, and so were gold ones set with "turky," which was the simplification of turquoise. Mourning rings were the modish thing, and carnelian ones had fine favor with the masses, while carnelian seals, together with padlocks in gold and silver, swung from watch chains and ribbons, and so did much-wrought watch keys. Children born with gold spoons in their mouths were decked out with watches and chains and lockets—in one case to the number of six lockets set with pearls and emeralds.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Women as Inventors.

As inventors women have long been to the fore, and numerous instances could be given of women who have invented articles which have placed them in comfortable circumstances. Women inventors occupy all ranks of society, from the poor, struggling working women to the Empress of the French, who invented the dress improver which years since developed into the then fashionable crinoline. The woman who patented the improved baby carriage made $50,000, while a young girl living at Port Elizabeth, South Africa, devised a simple toilet requisite from which she derived an income of $500 a year. The wife of a clergyman invented an improved corset, which was the means of making her independently rich. It was a woman's inventive power that produced the paper bag making machine. Another clever woman is responsible for the wonderful device for deadening the sound of car wheels on the overhead railway. Women have perhaps more often figured as the instigators of inventions than as inventors. The machine by which the Brothers Morely made their great fortune was invented by Rev. William Lee, who was an eminent fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge, England. The story of his life is pathetic. He fell in love with an innkeeper's daughter and married her, which action soon deprived him of his fellowship. He was soon reduced to extreme poverty. His wife knitted stockings for a living, and Lee, sitting by her side as she worked, watched the intricate movements of her hands, and was thus led to speculate on the possibility of constructing a machine which would do the work more expeditiously. Lee, however, unfortunately came to grief, owing to the machine being regarded as a device for throwing people out of work, and he died poor and friendless, a broken-hearted man.—Chicago Record-Herald.

The handsomest hat pins are of enamel.

Plaid strappings on zibeline are considered chic.

Buttons and buckles of gun metal and steel are used on the newest traveling coats.

Panne velvet is frequently to be seen on children's coats. It is soft and youthful in effect.

Large flowered velvets in bright colors are used in some stocks, which are very attractive.

An English fancy is the pigskin quill, either plain, embossed or picked out in brown like yokes work.

The low coiled coiffure is much more generally adopted in Paris and London than on this side of the water.

More stylish cloth skirts are made with a separate drop skirt of silk than with a lining sewed in with the outside fabric.

Slippers are pretty with buckles of double circles of gems or dull gold, through which the ribbon is run twice and tied in a bow above.

On some coats of fur jeweled belts are to be seen, but without exception they are ugly and tawdry. The more simple the lines of a fur garment the better as a rule.

More attractive than the leaves is a spray of orchids for the same purpose. There is a cluster of the mauve orchids, to place, say, on the shoulder, and a spray of gray-green leaves and more orchids to carry down the front of the bodice.

One of the most charming of stocks has the red chiffon covering it without a fold, and around the lower edge is the tie which forms a bow with broad ends at the front. The ends to this tie are finished with dots in the shape of diamonds in black.

Jeweled trimmings afford opportunity for new effects. A dinner gown which has the top of the corsage finished with jeweled trimming is worn with a jeweled dog collar, while a couple of jeweled chains are draped from the collar in front to the corsage.

Muffs are taking to themselves additional ornaments, and one in black chiffon has two bunches of violets, with the foliage, upon it. One cluster of the flowers is at the top on the right side of the muff, and at the lower edge on the left side, at the beginning of the deep end frills.

FARM AND GARDEN.

Results of Careful Selection of Seed.

The importance of good seed cannot be too strongly urged. A grower of wheat in several years' experiments found that it paid well to hand-pick his seed wheat. The first year he planted seven and a half pounds of hand-picked wheat on one acre in rows eighteen inches apart, and at harvest he threshed out sixty-seven bushels. The next year the yield was seventy-two bushels, using a little more seed. On a trial row he planted seventy-six extra fine kernels of seed (weighing forty-five grains), and the product was ten and a quarter pounds, or at the rate of 100 bushels of wheat per acre. The experiments were made many years ago by Professor Blount, of the Colorado Experiment Station, the seed being in rows eighteen inches apart, and twelve inches apart in the rows, a wheel hoe being used for cultivating between the rows. In Belgium all seeds are carefully hand-picked and the wheat crop cultivated, with the result that from sixty to seventy-five bushels of wheat per acre may be found on nearly all farms.

When the Buckle is Gone.

The accompanying illustrations show how to join the ends of the driving reins together when the buckle has been lost. With a pocket knife cut the end of each rein, as shown at a, then by slipping the extreme end of each through the tack-shaped opening of the other, a reasonably firm union is effected. The necessity of always keeping the reins fastened together cannot be too strongly emphasized. If a horse becomes frightened, and one rein is dropped, there is no possible way of recovering it, if it is not fastened to the other. Many a runaway has resulted from a failure to observe this precaution.—Orange Judd Farmer.

calves or other young stock, or for a place to store tools and farm machines if desired. The shed on the right is convenient to both lines of stalls, the manure being hauled out to the shed each day. Such an addition costs but little, having a simple shed roof, and furnishes added room that is often exceedingly valuable—the extra stalls, and the covered place in which to store the manure.—American Agriculturist.

Use and Value of Cut Green Bone.

What the silo has done for the dairyman the green-bone cutter is doing for the poultryman. Each in its field has solved the problem of supplying a food that will be eagerly relished, and will force production at a season when nature is against us, and at a minimum of cost.

The important constituent of animal food for poultry is protein, which produces flesh and feathers and the albumen of the egg. When given a free range the fowls will supply themselves with animal food by catching bugs and worms when they are obtainable. The trouble is, nature does not always supply this food in sufficient quantities even in summer, and during the winter months it is not to be had at all. Some seasons there will be plenty of grasshoppers and crickets, and after a shower the ground will be covered with angle-worms, but during a dry season worms are scarce, and if the grasshoppers fail to appear, the poultryman must supply something to take their place. Nothing answers this purpose as well as green bone.

Fresh bones contain a large percentage of protein. The same can be said of the several brands of meat meal on the market, but the fresh product is more palatable, more wholesome, easier to feed and cheaper. Hens have to acquire a taste for meat meal. It sometimes takes several days to get them accustomed to eating the mixed feed containing it. In all my experience as a poultry-raiser I never saw the hen or chick that looked twice before eating fresh-cut bone. Meat meal is liable to become tainted before use, especially in hot weather. It is sometimes made of scraps and refuse that have reached such a stage of ripeness that no poultryman who caters to first-class trade would think of feeding it. If fed in too large quantities, the strong odor which always accompanies it is likely to impart a disagreeable odor to the eggs or flesh. There are several good, pure brands of meat meal on the market, and they are certainly better than no animal food at all, but are to fresh green bone what dried beef is to beefsteak. Feed the meat when you cannot get bones.

Fresh bone is easier to feed. It does not have to be mixed with ground feed and stirred up with water, but can be fed just as it comes from the mill, and may be scattered in the litter, thus affording exercise for the hens in scratching for it. Every year more poultrymen are giving up the use of ground feed and are giving a whole grain diet, reducing the work of feeding considerably. The green bone can be cut in less time than it takes to mix soft feed.

The cost of bones for a small flock is generally nothing; the butcher will supply them. When a large quantity is used they can be obtained from the large butcher shops and slaughter houses at a very moderate price. No matter what the price is, nothing will start hens laying and keep them at it, or make young chicks grow large frames and feather out well, hasten the moult or fit a bird for the show pen, like fresh-cut green bone, when fed in conjunction with a proper grain, grit and green-food ration.—J. Franklin Hiller, in The County Centleman.

Progress in Farming.

Farmers are becoming more progressive and are also beginning to work on more scientific lines. At many of the experiment stations the sons of farmers are taking special courses in agriculture, with the result that they become largely instrumental in improving farm methods in their communities when they return to their homes. The period has passed for expressions of contempt for the theoretical farmer, as theory and practice have demonstrated by actual tests that no advance can be made by practical effort alone. The theoretical farmer may have been lacking in skill when handling the plow or in the use of other implements, and his theories may also have failed, but he aimed for something better and became an educator of others. The most progressive agriculturists are those who are not satisfied with present methods. They are willing to experiment, to learn and to teach, and they bring into the community better breeds, improved fruits and superior varieties of grasses, grains and vegetables. Some of them have gone into bankruptcy because of unwise expenditure in their efforts to do more than others, but they left their neighbors better off and also better supplied with live stock and more fertile farms.

No farmer can progress unless he is willing to study and learn. In all occupations theory is a mighty factor, for education is considered essential to success. The farmer of to-day who maintains that only practical farming is worthy of his consideration, and who believes that his sons can learn all that is necessary about farming on the farm itself, daily witnesses the sons of those outside of farming deriving knowledge at institutes in which instruction in mechanics is imparted. The best engineers, machinists and wood workers endeavor to enter their sons in schools or colleges at which they can be taught all that is possible from a theoretical standpoint. The farmer has kept himself back by his opposition to theoretical farming, the "book farmer" being, to him, one utterly destitute of knowing anything except to expend his money foolishly in the effort to accomplish an impossibility. The farmer, however, is a close observer of operations, for, while he will not become a pioneer and gives no encouragement to those working outside of practical lines, he quickly secures the benefits derived through the efforts of the experimenter. Of course all farmers are not alike, for many of them are progressive, but many prefer to wait for developments, and when they become convinced that a change in their methods of farming is necessary will accept the inevitable and endeavor to improve.

The class known as "breeders" has made many sacrifices in the effort to improve the breeds of live stock, the greatest obstacle to progress being the indifference of farmers. But the breeders went on with their work, every year witnessing an advance in the improvement of horses, cattle, sheep and swine. Records were made and live stock went up in prices. Where before an animal was sold at only a nominal sum prices rose ten or a hundred fold. While the farmers were oblivious to the work of the breeders the latter class was making rapid headway. To-day hundreds of farmers are breeders, and their farms are operated on the most scientific methods known. The result of the combination of practice and theory has increased the value of live stock in the United States to thousands where formerly the figures were given in hundreds, while the increase in the yields of crops has been very marked. What is more important, however, is that the fertility of the farms is now much greater than before. "Abandoned" farms are fewer, "worn out" soils are brought again under cultivation, a larger and more selected variety of fruits has been introduced and the general condition of the farmer has been greatly improved.

Much of the advance made by the farming class is due to the heretofore despised theoretical farmer, who has always led the way, even if years were required after his decease to demonstrate that he was right, though during his time unsuccessful and unfortunate.—Philadelphia Record.

UNFAMILIAR MINERALS

STRANGE USES FOUND FOR CRYOLITE, BEAUXITE AND SELENIUM

Cryolite Used as an Important Auxiliary in the Manufacture of Aluminum—Beauxite Mined in Alabama, Georgia and Arkansas—"Infusorial Earth" a Puzzle.

The announcement made a few days ago by the press of the loss of a ship which had gone to Greenland for a cargo of cryolite brought into fresh notice a mineral with a rather unfamiliar name, and one which is now rather less in demand than it was a few years ago. Cryolite, or kryolite, as it is sometimes spelled, is a salt containing both sodium and aluminum. Both of the latter and some of their compounds have been obtained from that source. Colorado and the Ural Mountains produce it in limited quantities, but the largest and most available deposits yet found are in Greenland, near the west coast, and this region has been the chief, if not the sole, reliance of commerce.

Aluminum is made from alumina, the oxide of aluminum, and the process of getting rid of the oxygen is called reducing. In this country the business is controlled by the Pittsburg Reduction Company, which for a long time purchased its alumina from the Pennsylvania Salt Company, and the latter manufactured the article from cryolite, which it imported from Ivigtut, Greenland. At present, however, practically all of the alumina made in this country—at least, that which is converted into aluminum—is derived from an entirely different ore, beauxite, of which more anon.

Still in the final separation of the aluminum and oxygen by the American system cryolite is used as an important auxiliary. The alumina to be treated is dissolved in a bath of the Greenland mineral melted, and an electric current of enormous volume passed through the fluid. In this operation there is little or no waste of cryolite. It is the alumina which needs constant renewal.

Caustic soda, or the hydrated oxide of sodium, much used in the industries, and especially in the production of lye for soap, was formerly made by boiling slaked lime with cryolite. But the Solvay and other modern processes of manufacturing soda from common salt—chloride of sodium—are now rapidly displacing that method. Again, the pure metal sodium is obtained more cheaply from cryolite than from other sources.

Cryolite is a lustrous material, often of a pure or grayish white, but sometimes possessing a yellow tint. Combined with silica by melting, it is wrought into a glass resembling porcelain, and variously known as "hot cast porcelain" and "cryolite glass."

Beauxite, sometimes spelled bauxite, takes its name from the place where it was first discovered in considerable quantities, Beaux, France. It is now found abundantly in the southern part of this country. A few years ago Alabama and Georgia were the chief producers. But Edward W. Parker, managing editor of the Engineering and Mining Journal, remarked that the supply in that quarter was falling off, while Arkansas is yielding bountifully and seems to have almost unlimited deposits.

Another mineral which has come into notice within the last few years in consequence of its industrial applications is monazite, from which are obtained the rare metals thorium, lanthanum and didymium, used in the manufacture of mantles for gas lighting. Monazite is found in the form of small crystals, mixed with sand, in the beds of streams where a certain class of granite rocks have disintegrated, and both in Europe and America it seems to be confined to those regions which have escaped glacial action.

Something of a sensation was created in England a year or so ago by the widespread sickness which apparently resulted from drinking cheap beer. It was believed that the trouble came from the use by the brewers of glucose from which the sulphuric acid had not been altogether eliminated. The acid, in turn, was suspected of being tainted with arsenic, a common impurity in that article when manufactured out of Spanish pyrites. Since the first sensation over the trouble subsided the theory has been advanced that it was selenium and not arsenic which poisoned the beer. That substance is also present in Spanish pyrites, and has been recently found in some of the products of British breweries. Thus another comparatively unknown metal has been brought to public attention. Selenium is not only very rare, but thus far has found little use in the arts. One of its qualities, the variability of its electric conductivity under the influence of light, has been turned to account by many inventors who were trying to transmit pictures by telegraph. Selenium costs about $13 a pound just now, and is, therefore, more valuable than silver.

In the whole catalogue of "chemicals, minerals and rare elements," the prices of which are quoted every week by trade journals, perhaps no name is more puzzling to the uninitiated than "infusorial earth." Still, if he knows much about dynamite, he is aware that this is the stuff employed as an absorbent to hold the nitro-glycerine of that famous explosive. It was Nobel, the great Swedish engineer, who founded a number of attractive prizes to encourage scientific progress, who first discovered the trick by which nitro-glycerine could be safely handled. Infusorial earth is composed of the silicious shells of minute vegetable organisms, diatoms which reveal wonderfully complicated and beautiful structures under the microscope.—New York Tribune.

GOSSIP CAUSES TRAGEDY

Herbert Marx Kills Intruders at His Home in Virginia.

EXONERATED BY CORONER'S JURY

New York Man Accused of Insulting Cousin of a Friend—Party Went to His House to Charge Him—Thought They Were Burglars and Fired—Two Killed, One Mortally Wounded.

Richmond, Va.—A shooting near Oak Grove, Westmoreland County, resulted in the death of William P. Taylor, Jr., and H. N. Heflin, and the mortal wounding of J. T. Stiff. Herbert Marx did the shooting. The difficulty, it is said, grew out of the charge that Marx insulted Rosa Taylor, the pretty seventeen-year-old cousin of Taylor.

Marx has denied having insulted Miss Taylor, and an investigation of the charges showed that the reported insult gained credence through country store gossip. It reached the ears of W. P. Taylor, Jr., a relative of the young girl and a former friend of Marx. He gathered several of his friends together and went to Cedar Hill, Marx's country home, for the purpose of chastising him. When they attempted to break into his house, Marx opened fire upon them, thinking they were burglars. It was not until after he had killed one man and wounded two others that he discovered their identity.

When he learned who they were he used every effort to obtain medical aid for them, and rode with the party to Wirt's Wharf, the Potomac River landing, where the wounded men were placed on a steamboat to be sent to Washington. After the departure of the boat he surrendered to the county authorities.

W. T. Guthrie, a Justice of the Peace and acting Coroner, summoned a jury and investigated the tragedy. Marx was exonerated by the Coroner's jury and also by the young woman whom he was accused of insulting. The evidence showed that the men who attacked him gave no intimation of their purpose or identity, and he had naturally assumed that they were burglars. R. H. Douglass, who was one of the attacking party, said that simultaneously with the firing of the first shot from Marx's rifle there was shooting from eight or ten places in the yard. After the Coroner's verdict Marx left for New York City, where his family live.

Heflin died at the Emergency Hospital in Washington.

NEW HAY-PAUNCEFOTE TREATY.

Gives the United States the Right to Build and Protect the Canal.

Washington, D. C.—The new Hay-Pauncefote treaty was sent to the Senate. The convention gives the United States the right to build and protect the canal, which shall be open without discrimination to the commerce of the world. It is provided that in time of war the canal shall never be blockaded, while the warships of the belligerents shall be allowed equal rights of transit through the waterway.

It is not expressly provided in the treaty that the United States shall fortify the canal. This means that the navy will defend the canal. There is no express prohibition of fortifications, and perhaps the United States might build forts without violating the treaty, if forts became necessary to preserve neutrality, but forts are not contemplated in the scheme, and were not anticipated by the contracting parties.

Sentiment in the Senate is very strong in favor of quick ratification.

ISTHMIAN CANAL REPORT.

Nicaragua Route Favored, and Cost of Construction Estimated at $189,864,062.

Washington, D. C.—The report of the Isthmian Canal Commission was sent to Congress. The commission favors the Nicaragua route, and makes an estimate of $189,864,062 as the total cost of construction of the canal through Nicaragua. The estimated cost of the Panama route is $144,233,358, but, the report says, it would cost $109,141,000 to obtain the Panama concession. The commission values the work done at $40,000,000.

The Nicaragua route has no natural harbors at either end, but satisfactory harbors may be constructed. With an adequate force and plant, the Commission estimates that the Nicaragua Canal can be completed in six years, exclusive of two years for preparation. The total length of the Nicaragua route is 185.66 miles.

It is estimated that the cost of operating and maintaining the Nicaragua Canal annually will be $1,350,000 greater than that of the Panama Canal. The Nicaragua route, the report says, is more advantageous for commerce.

HOUSEWORK

Too much housework wrecks women's nerves. And the constant care of children, day and night, is often too trying for even a strong woman. A haggard face tells the story of the overworked housewife and mother. Deranged menses, leucorrhœa and falling of the womb result from overwork. Every housewife needs a remedy to regulate her menses and to keep her sensitive female organs in perfect condition.

WINE OF CARDUI

is doing this for thousands of American women to-day. It cured Mrs. Jones and that is why she writes this frank letter:

Glendeane, Ky., Feb. 13, 1901.
I am so glad that your Wine of Cardui is helping me. I am feeling better than I have felt for years. I am doing my own work without any help, and I washed last week and was not one bit tired. That shows that the Wine is doing me good. I am getting fleshier than I ever was before, and sleep good and eat heavy. Before I began taking Wine of Cardui, I used to have to lay down five or six times every day, but now I cannot think of lying down through the day.

Roosevelt's Southern Policy.

Regardless of mere party consideration, President Roosevelt has determined to apply to the South his principle that the first consideration in appointing men to office must be their personal fitness, and second must be their reasonable acceptability to the people of the neighborhood where their functions are to be performed. The first opportunity that presented itself for the exemplification of this principle was in Alabama. A vacancy had occurred through the death of a United States district judge. Although the judiciary should be kept as much as possible from mere party associations, it has been the general rule for Presidents to fill vacancies on the federal bench with men belonging to their own political party. There were several Republican candidates for the vacant Alabama judgeship, the most prominent of whom was the district attorney. Mr. Roosevelt, however, appointed a Democratic ex-Governor, the Hon. Thomas G. Jones. Mr. Jones is not a man of the extreme partisan type, and he has shown himself broad-minded and just in his attitude toward the education of the colored race and in his stern opposition to lynching. It is understood that Booker T. Washington, who is the most prominent colored Republican of the South, heartily concurred in these selection of ex-Governor Jones. Although the appointment was displeasing to certain organized groups of Republican politicians, there at ample reason for saying that it immensely strengthened the real and permanent interests of the Republican party in the South. It does not mean, of course, that President Roosevelt intends to ignore existing adherents of the Republican party in the Carolinas, Georgia, and the Gulf States; but he will consult local sentiment and will not appoint Republicans who do not command confidence and respect in their neigeborhoods irrespective of party consideration. In answer to those Republicans who say that this method will destroy the Republican party as now organized in the South, the reply might be made that perhaps destruction of the existing Republican organization, at least in some Southern States, is the only possible means by which a real and influential Republican organization can be started. Doubtless, Mr. Roosevelt sees with perfect clearness the effect that his Southern policy might conceivably have upon his future political fortunes. If he were merely planning to capture the presidential nomination in 1904, nothing would be easier for him than to make Southern appointments in such a way as to secure for himself the entire mass of Southern Republican delegates. And it is, of course, not impossible that the course he has decided to pursue may alienate the Southern delegations, which accordingly, may be purchase once and again in behalf of presidential candidates with long purses—as, everybody knows, has happened in times past. But considerations of this kind will not keep Mr. Roosevelt from doing what he believes to be his duty to the south, and, in the long run, to the Republican party. Since there was unanimous agreement upon Mr. McKinley's renomination there was, of course, no struggle over the control of the Southern delegations in the last national convention, and there were no pledge [illegible] Mr. McKinley's last [illegible] and if he had lived his Southern appointments would have been shown to be not [illegible] which Mr. Roosevelt is [illegible]. Thus the new President is [illegible] parting essentially from the [illegible] of Mr. McKinley had [illegible] notably in South Carolina, Louisiana, and to some extent other States.—From "The Progress of the World," in the American Monthly Review of Reviews for November.

Some of your readers are growing sentimental on reaching the last leaf of the calendar; our year is the new boy said "is rounding up." To those who have not been afflicted with bereavements, we think it has been a most prosperous year.

Many patriotic citizens kept Thanksgiving. Some, we regret to state enjoyed the good dinner more than obedience to the law of Feddy. Many fine turkeys came to an untimely end. Some got up a good dinner with chicken fry and pie made from the giblets.

Mr. R. D. Martin entertained our mil. officials with the proverbial turkey.

Mr. F. M. Matthews, wife and little son, Charles, from Matthews have daughter relations here with a visit.

Messrs. Matthews and R. [illegible] Glover visited Mr. C. H. Daniel near Verbena. The former was delighted with the farming interests, the prosperity of the country, he raised much cotton while mid many profusions were shown held your cotton, no surprise of the firmness.

Indeed your correspondent has lately heard so many good things of our Populite county government that like Agrippa "we almost persuaded," the idea of the government owning our railroads and telegraphs and giving us free rides and free telegrams is convincing, and would be delightful when long distance ladies can indulge in their favorite style of talk. Oh happy day will that be."

Miss Maud Gilmer is visiting kin folks here. The many friends she made here, by her affable manners, are delighted to see her again.

Mrs. Rasberry and Miss Minnie Clark have visited relatives here.

Rev. W. A. Parker from near Montgomery gave us a most excellent sermon the 1st. He was appreciative of the courtesy extended him; was guest of Dr. Claughton.

Dr. F. DuBose has paid a visit to home lately.

We hope a good attendance on our Sabbath school convention which meets here the 3d and 4th.

There is in Liverpool, England, what is known as the police-aided association for clothing the destitute children of that city, and it has worked well for five or six years past. The object of the association is the clothing of all insufficiently clothed children who come under the notice of the police.

Observes the San Francisco Call: "An Eastern investigator announces that if men would breathe deeper and more slowly they would have longer hair, but it may be that as deep breathing prolongs life all that the investigator meant is that the deeper you breathe the longer you will wear your hair."

A German professor, probably a linear descendant of the erudite grammarian who upon his deathbed expressed his profound regret that he had not devoted his entire life to the study of the native case alone, is said to have determined the exact duration of an average wink. He declares that it takes four-tenths of a second. Of course the learned scientist made use of special apparatus constructed by himself and devoted much time to arduous experiments. That is the way of the conscientious and patient German professor. But after all, does the world care much to know whether a wink occupies four-tenths of a second, or only three and three-quarters? queries the New York Tribune.

A destructive parasite has attacked the sugar beet plants in Hungary, and is creating consequent alarm. It seems almost inevitable that the development of any special agricultural industry must be followed by the allied development of a destructive insect pest. At first the luxuriant hop vines in Oregon and Washington were exempt, and great and very profitable crops were raised; but the vermin have found out the hop fields and have nearly ruined a prosperous industry. The phylloxera has devastated European vineyards. The potato has its insect enemy. It was hardly to be expected that the sugar beet should remain immune, and it will be well to keep a wary eye on the progress of the invader in Hungary. There is no attack which mankind finds more difficult to repel than that of hungry insect enemies.

The unveiling of a monument at Valley Forge is the text of the following paragraph from the Baltimore Herald: "Many brave deeds have been commemorated in bronze, granite and marble by a grateful posterity since the days when the American troops suffered the rigors of winter and the pangs of hunger on this campground, but the heroism there displayed has been overlooked in the dotting of field, meadow, park and square with emblems of daring deeds. Valley Forge has not been forgotten, although it has, until recently, been neglected. Every schoolboy and schoolgirl is early taught that the patient suffering of the soldiers there marked the lowest ebb of the revolutionary movement which made a signal change in the world's history, and that the almost superhuman inspiration of Washington held together the remnants of a band of heroes and infused in them a spirit of endurance that was wonderful and unconquerable."

In several Iowa cities weeds are officially pronounced noxious and a nuisance, and ordinances provide for their cutting by the city, the expense to be taxed against the owners of the abutting property, if the owner neglects to abate the nuisance. These ordinances have been pronounced valid by a Judge of the District Court, who holds that the municipality is not required to limit its attention to noxious weeds, but that it has the power to declare a nuisance and to abate it. Assessed citizens of Des Moines, who instituted the legal proceedings, must now pay, or prove that the alleged weeds on or near their premises were neither noxious nor a nuisance. This can be done in many cases, it is reported, the greedy contractors who did the cutting not being particular what they cut, but being anxious to make the cleared area as large as possible, as they were paid by measurement. In some cases, the indignant citizens claim, the weed-cutters mowed down flowers and shrubs, and in others cleared whole fields of good grass suitable for pasturage. Even lawns, beautified by gardeners, were included in the tract measured by the contractors, and for which they were paid.

SCHLEY COURT OF INQUIRY

SUBMITS ITS FINDINGS TO THE SECRETARY OF THE NAVY.

ADMIRAL DEWEY STANDS BY SCHLEY

Says He Won the Glorious Victory and is Entitled to the Credit—Benham and Ramsey Condemn the Hero of Santiago. What Individuals Say.

The most prolonged, interesting and independent naval tribunal ever held in this country came to a close, after having in open and secret session lasted one week, short of three months, when Secretary Long Friday received the findings of the court which inquired into the conduct of Rear Admiral Schley during the Santiago campaign.

The result was a complete surprise, and it is probable that no prophecy has approached the truth. There are two reports. Both are signed by Dewey, the president of the court, and by Lemly, the judge advocate. Admiral Dewey offered a minority report, to express his qualification of or dissenting views as expressed by the court, comprising besides himself Admirals Benham and Ramsey.

THE COURT'S OPINION.

Commodore Schley, in command of the flying squadron, should have proceeded with utmost dispatch off Cienfuegos, and should have maintained a close blockade at that part.

He should have endeavored on May 22rd, at Cienfuegos, to obtain information regarding the Spanish squadron by communicating with the insurgents at the place designated in the memorandum delivered to him at 8:15 a. m. of that date.

He should have proceeded from Cienfuegos to Santiago de Cuba with all despatch, and should have disposed his vessels with a view to intercepting the enemy in any attempt to pass the flying squadron.

He should not have delayed the squadron for the Eagle.

He should not have made the retrograde turn westward with his squadron.

He should have promptly obeyed the Navy Department's order of May 25th.

He should have endeavored to capture or destroy the Spanish vessels at anchor near the entrance of Santiago harbor on May 29th and 30th.

He did not do his utmost with the force under his command to capture ro destoy the Colon and other vessels of the enemy which he attacked on May 31st.

By commencing the engagement on July 3rd, with the port battery and turning the Brooklyn around with port helm Commodore Schley caused her to lose distance and position with the Spanish vessels—especially when the Brooklyn's turn to starboard was made to avoid getting her into dangerous proximity to the Spanish vessels. The turn was made toward the Texas, and caused that vessel to stop and back her engines to avoid possible collision.

Admiral Schley did injustice to Lieutenant-Commander A. C. Hodgson in publishing only a portion of the correspondence which passed between them.

Commodore Schley's conduct in connection with the events of the Santiago campaign prior to June 1, 1898, was characterized by vacillation, dilatoriness and lack of enterprise.

His official reports regarding the coal supply, and the coaling facilities of the flying squadron were inaccurate and misleading.

His conduct during the battle of July 3rd, was self possessed, and he encouraged in his own person, his subordinate officers and men to fight courageously.

(Signed) George Dewey,
Admiral, U. S. N. Pres.
Samuel C. Lemly,
Judge Advocate General U. S. N.
Judge Advocate.

ADMIRAL DEWEY'S OPINION.

In the opinion of the undersigned, the passage from Key West to Cienfuegos was made by the flying squadron, with all possible dispatch. Commodore Schley having in view the importance of arriving off Cienfuegos with as much coal as possible in the ships' bunkers.

The blockade of Cienfuegos was effective.

Commodore Schley, in permitting the steamer Adula to enter the port of Cienfuegos, expected to obtain information concerning the Spanish squadron from her when she came out.

The passage from Cienfuegos to a point about twenty-two miles south of Santiago was made with as much dispatch as was possible while keeping the squadron a unit.

The blockade of Santiago was effective.

Commodore Schley was the senior officer of our squadron off Santiago when the Spanish squadron attempted to escape on the morning of July 3, 1898. He was in absolute command and is entitled to the credit due to such commanding officer for the glorious victory which resulted in the total destruction of the Spanish ships.

(Signed) George Dewey,
Admiral U. S. N., Pres.
Samuel C. Lemly,
Judge Advocate General, U. S. N.
Judge Advocate.

RECOMMENDATIONS.

In view of the length of time which has elapsed since the occurrence of the events of the Santiago campaign, the court recommends no further proceedings be had in the premises.

(Signed) George Dewey,
Admiral U. S. N., Pres.
Samuel C. Lemly,
Judge Advocate-General, U. S. N.,
Judge Advocate.

Admiral Schley's mail has been steadily growing lately and he has received a number of offers to go on the lecture platform. One proposition was a fixed price of $500 a night for lectures, to last forty nights. Admiral Schley politely declined this and all other offers.

Rear Admiral Belknap, U. S. N., retired, said of the Schley court verdict: "The pith of the decision is in Admiral Dewey's findings. As I recall all the evidence laid before the court that finding is, in my judgment, just and proper."

Opinion in the Senate is divided as to the probability of a congressional investigation of the Schley controversy, but is on the whole against such a course. Democratic Senators generally seemed disposed to wait upon the expression of opinion by Admiral Schley. Senator Martin said he thought Congress should adopt the joint resolution, stating its confidence in the admiral. Representative Sherman of New York said: "I think the country will accept Admiral Dewey's view as conclusive and that Congress will take the same view of it. Dewey's conclusions will live in history long after the other members of the court are forgotten."

Isidore Rayner showed keen disappointment when the findings of the court of inquiry were communicated to him. He announced that he would go to Washington as soon as his engagements will permit, and will counsel Admiral Schley to fight the case to a finish by every appeal that is possible. "I think the country will almost unanimously accept Admiral Dewey's judgment. The testimony was so overwhelming upon almost every one of the specifications in favor of Admiral Schley that I must confess I am utterly at a loss to understand upon what facts or upon the evidence of what witnesses the other two members of the court reached their conclusion. I am absolutely satisfied that the opinion of the two judges is at total variance with the opinion of the country, and that this will not by any means terminate the controversy. I shall advise Admiral Schley to fight it out to a finish, to oppose it by every appeal that is possible, congressional or otherwise, and I believe that the sentiment of the whole country will uphold him in his resolve not to let the judgment stand."

Captain Parker, of Admiral Schley's counsel, said: "Until I have read the reports in full I cannot say more than this: Admiral Dewey knows what was right. He, better than any one else in the world, was qualified to consider the case. He is the one man living, besides Admiral Schley, who conducted a campaign and fought a battle with modern ships under modern conditions. He probably found there was a difference between theory and practice, and judged Schley in the light of his own experience. The two other members of the court were high-minded men of the highest character, and men who would not misjudge knowingly or willingly. They never had the experience the admiral had, and probably did not see things in the same light as he did. We shall leave the matter to the judgment of the people of the country, confident that in the just popular mind the findings of Admiral Dewey will be sustained."

Captain Parker seemed almost as much pleased that Admiral Dewey had sustained Rear Admiral Schley as if the court had been unanimous in the verdict that he (Dewey) rendered.

Rear Admiral George Brown, retired, when asked for his opinion of the verdict in the Schley case said: "I read the original charges against Admiral Schley, of course, and made up my mind that no court would ever convict him of cowardice. The whole country knows he is not a coward. There is not a drop of cowardly blood in his veins. If there were he would never have become a commodore and admiral in the navy of the United States. I did think, moreover, that the court would possibly censure him for his retrograde movement and his tardiness in getting to Santiago. Cervera had time before the arrival of Schley to coal and get away. He did not, and Schley got there in time and did the work. Cervera did not get away and his fleet was destroyed at Santiago."

Delegate Baker, of the lower house of the Virginia general assembly, introduced a joint resolution calling for the appointment by the presiding officers of the two bodies of the assembly of a joint committee to ascertain the sentiments of the people of Virginia on the subject of the Schley verdict, which are believed to be indignation at the findings of the court.

Admiral Schley has placed whatever future his case may have in the hands of Mr. Rayner.

An offer of $10,000 from an anonymous source for use in the admiral's behalf has been declined.

PENNYSLVANIA FLOOD.

A storm, which has not been equalled in the section for twenty-five years, visited Eastern and Central Pennsylvania Sunday night, causing almost unprecedented damage, and resulting in the loss of at least four human lives. The havoc in the coal regions is enormous, and the loss to railroad and mining companies will amount to millions of dollars. Rivers have risen as high as fifteen feet above their levels, and tributaries have overflowed, inundating the country in a dozen counties. Washouts have occurred on the railroads; bridges were carried away and traffic is at a standstill. The force of water weakened the supports of a bridge spanning a creek near Williamsport and a freight train was wrecked and three men killed. At Oneida a miner was swept from a bridge and drowned. In the Schuylkill Valley forty-eight mines were flooded and in the Lehigh and Lackawanna regions the destruction is equally great. Hundreds of mules were drowned in the collieries and it will be weeks before many can resume operation. In some sections the water reached the second stories of dwellings, and the town of Westmore, near Wilkesbarre, is submerged. Many of the residents have left their homes in boats. Pittsburg's three rivers have passed the danger line and are still rising with reports from the headwaters of the Monongahela and Allegheny rivers stating that the cold wave will prevent the streams from reaching thirty feet, but that considerable damage will result from the unexpected rise and inability of shippers and river men to tie craft securely before the crest of the rise arrived.

A FATAL SHOOTING AT MONTEVALLO

Central of Georgia Loses Station—Presbyterian College—Huntsville Has a Flood—Refused to Marry and was Killed—Clothing Manufactory.

AT DECATUR.

What is supposed to be one of the richest mineral finds ever made in North Alabama is that reported by the Alabama Oil and Gas Company. The find was made in a well, which they are drilling for oil near there. At the depth of 300 feet a quantity of the finest oil baring sand known to exist was struck and the indications for striking a gusher are more promising than ever before. After a depth of about twenty feet had been reached after striking oil bearing sand a mineral water was struck which flooded the well to the depth of several feet. The mineral water tasted very much like the famous Blue Lick of Kentucky. Both water and sand will be sent to a chemist for analysis. On account of the overflow of mineral water, the company will be compelled to take up the casing for the purpose of reaming down several feet.

MONTEVALLO MURDER.

Walter S. Cary, attorney, was shot and killed Friday evening by Frank Kroell, liveryman. An altercation arose over a lawsuit against one Garner by the Kroell's, Cary defending Garner. Upon their return from Calera, where the case was tried, Kroell and Cary had a dispute, in which shooting occurred. Later Mr. Cary was shot twice with a double barrel shot gun, the gun tearing a great hole through the left arm and a few shot striking him in the head. Mr. Cary fell. Frank Kroell then ran up and shot him through the head. Mr. Kroell made his escape. Mr. Cary died an hour later. He was one of the most prominent lawyers in this section. Mr. Kroell is a son of George Kroell, the largest merchant in this part of the country. Mr. Cary leaves six orphan children, his wife having died in July last.

BANK RUNNER MISSING.

Thursday afternoon Robert Chamblin, a runner employed by the People's Bank, of Mobile, left to take a package containing $6,000 to be shipped to Mississippi and has since been missing. His departure was discovered when the bank opened the next morning. It was discovered that he left town for New Orleans. Chamblin is 21 years of age, and has been in the bank's employ several years. On Saturday he was captured at Cairo, Ill., and all but $100 of the money was recovered.

DEPOT BURNED.

The Central of Gergia railway freight depot at Hurtsboro, burned Saturday. It is thought that the fire was started by sparks from a passing freight engine. Sixty bales of cotton and several freight cars were burned. About $1,500 worth of cotton seed, the property of Agent C. E. Borom, was also destroyed.

A TUSCALOOSA fire company has an elephant on its hands in the shape of a piano which it won in a contest of popularity. It has been unable to sell the instrument. Now it is proposed that the city buy it for the schools.

MURDER IN LAWRENCE.

A telephone message from Lawrence county gives a detailed account of a tragedy which took place ten miles southeast of Moulton Saturday morning. Charlie Sutton has been paying marked attention to a young woman. Her brother, William Thurman, upon Sutton's refusing to marry her, drew a pistol and shot him through the breast. Sutton died instantly. Upon hearing of her brother's action, the young woman attempted to take her life by swallowing morphine, but a physician saved her. Thurman has not been arrested.

COTTON MILL FOR HUNTSVILLE

Huntsville capitalists have organized the Huntsville Cotton Oil & Fertilizer Co. to operate an oil mill and fertilizer factory in West Huntsville. The new industry will begin operations by the first of February. The company will manufacture a brand of fertilizer prescribed especially for the soil of North Alabama.

ALABAMA OIL FIELD.

The oil fever is on in earnest in Talladega county, and boring will begin in the near future in the north and south ends of the county. The machinery is on the ground at Citronelle for the purpose of boring for oil on lands outside the corporate limits. The prospectors are ready, willing and anxious to begin operations, but a slight hitch is in the way of procedure. The men at the head of the movement are waiting for the right kind of proposition from the parties owning the lands and as soon as the proper concessions are granted they will begin the sinking of the well. It is said that the indications for oil at Citronelle are equally as strong, if not stronger, than at Beaumont, Texas, and it is the opinion that the find there will be a most profitable one.

$250,000 MALE COLLEGE.

Presbyterians of Birmingham will make strenuous efforts to secure the location of a $250,000 male college, and if successful, the city will be adorned by one of the strongest educational institutions in the South. At a recent meeting of the synod of Alabama a committee for the purpose of promoting this institution was appointed to discuss the matter of raising funds and to receive applications from different cities for the location of the school. There were several propositions received. No action was taken in regard to these offers, as a proposition was received from the synod of Georgia and Florida to unite in the building of the college. This offer is under consideration.

HUNTSVILLE FLOODED.

Reports from over Madison county tell of great damage wrought by Friday night's flood. Bridges and pikes were washed away, dozens of houses in the lower part of the city were flooded and great damage done. Lumber dealers lost a great deal of lumber, which floated away from inundated yards. At Brownsboro, Esslinger's cotton gin was flooded by Flint river; 50 bales of cotton and 100 bushels of seed were lost.

BILL ARP'S LETTE[R]

Bartow Man Tells of Some of Earliest Recollections.

REMEMBERS NOTED SHOWER OF ST[illegible]

Describes His Trip From Savannah to Boston When There Was Not a Railroad in the Country.

Shakespeare tells of a man's seven ages, but his seven does not fill the day—nor indeed, did they fill his day with any distinct line of demarcation between them. They glide into each other and it is hard to tell when the one quits and the other begins. We have infants and school boys and lovers, but very few old soldiers—not one in a hundred ever becomes a justice of the peace. He wants to do justice to our men and women of three score years and ten, most of them grow fat instead of lean and our big manly voices have turned to treble, nor do they piping whistle in their sound. I can still bass to the long meter doxology and my wife can sing "Mary had a little lamb" to the baby. As to the seven ages, which he pictures as second childhood and mere oblivion without teeth or taste or eyes or ears or anything, we never see them—our old people are before they get to that. But in the life of every man and woman there are epochs, events, mile stones, as it were, that stand out prominent in memory and mark their progress from youth to old age. My earliest recollection is the killing of our dog Hector, who we supposed to be made, and it grieved us for we loved him and he loved us. Next I recall the falling of the stars in 1833. My father held me up and with my feet upon the top railing of the banisters, I saw them come down in myriads as quietly and softly as snowflakes and they went out as they neared the earth. They were separate and distinct as the stars, but as near together as the sparks from the chimney of an oldtime blacksmith shop. George Lester was my playmate and lived close by and the next morning he and I hunted all over his mother's garden to find some signs of the stars that fell, but saw none. While they were falling our negro cook, Aunt Allsey, went down on her knees praying, and as I clung to my mother's night gown, she called on Jesus to come and take us home to heaven. That night was an epoch and it is worth being 75 years old to have witnessed it. My next remembrance of note is a journey to Savannah with my father and mother and brother, where we took a sail vessel for Boston. I remember the magnificent double row of china trees in the long street and I wonder now if there is a person living in Savannah who was living there then and remembers that row of beautiful trees that are long since dead and gone. I remember that voyage of thirty-three days around Cape Hatteras, where our ship was almost wrecked, and mother hung fast unto her children and silently prayed for deliverance. I remember when we reached Boston and how, after our visit was over, father bought a carriage and a pair of horses, and we journeyed by land from Boston to Georgia and never crossed a railroad for there were none to cross. I remember our stop at the natural bridge in Virginia, and how we walked down in the gorge and looked up and afterwards stood on the bridge and looked down from the dizzy height.

When I was about ten years old I had another epoch, for I had a fight on Sunday at a camp meeting and got licked and my fine Sunday clothes were all spoiled with mud and dirt. A country boy said I was a town boy and was dressed too fine and he was going to take the starch outen my ruffled shirt. And he did. I fought as hard as I could, but he licked me and I cried. I had gone to the spring to get some water and the fight came off there. My father whipped me next morning and the school teacher started to whip me again, but I showed him my legs and he let me off with a talking.

My next episode has left an indelible impression. We had to walk two miles to school and about half way there was a big gully that we used to slide down in. One morning Bill Maithie and Overton Young and Jim Wilson and myself stopped to slide down and have pulled out a deck of cards and said he would show us how to play. I had never seen a deck before in my life but I had heard tell of em. They were mighty pretty, and he taught us how to shuffle and cut and deal and turn Jack and play seven-up. One morning Tom Wilson and Jim Alexander came along as they were going to school and heard our racket in the gully and they caught us playing cards. They slipped up on us, for we were completely absorbed in the game, and Tom said, "Well, you are the youngest set of gamblers I ever saw in my life. The school will get you and put you all in jail before night." I never was scared so bad in my life. I couldn't study my lessons nor eat my dinner at school and watched for the sheriff all day long. But that cured me of card playing, and I never handled a deck again until I got to college. College was a good place to play cards then; it is a good place to kick a ball now. Tom Wilson and Jim Alexander were good hearted boys and never told on us.

I had gone to the spring to get some water and the fight came off there. My father walloped me next morning and the school teacher started to whip me again, but I showed him my legs and he let me off with a talk. My next epoch has left an indelible impression. We had to walk two miles to school and about half way there was a big gully that we used to slide down in. One morning Bill Maltbie and Overton Young and Jim Wilson and myself stopped to slide down and Bill pulled out a deck of cards and said he would show us how to play. I had never seen a deck before in my life, but I had heard tell of em. They were mighty pretty, and he taught us how to shuffle and cut and deal and turn back and play seven-up. One morning Tom Wilson and Jim Alexander came along as they were going to school and heard our rackets in the gully and they caught us playing cards. They slipped up on us, for we were completely absorbed in the game, and Tom said: "Well, you are the youngest set of gamblers I ever saw in my life. The devil will get you and put you all in hell before night." I never was scared so bad in my life. I couldn't study my lessons nor eat my dinner at school and watched for the sheriff all day long. But that cured me of card playing, and I never handled a deck again until I got to college. College was a good place to play cards then; it is a good place to kick a ball now. Tim Wilson and Jim Alexander were good-hearted boys and never told on us. Tom died years ago and Jim died last month in Atlanta. He got to be a great doctor and everybody loved him. When I received the telegram that told me he was dead I felt like another prop was gone and that now only one was left—his brother Tom in Rome. Maltbie is dead and Young and Jim Wilson. All my schoolmates are dead except one and all my school teachers and college professors are dead.

For several years there was no epoch—no episode. Every day was alike until I began to notice the girls with a peculiar longing emotion and brushed my hair most carefully and carried a cleaner handkerchief and wore tighter boots well polished. In fact, I got to be a dandy in my dress. Shakespeare makes fun of the lover and dismisses him with a line. Says he sighed and wrote poetry about his sweetheart's eyebrows. We beat that in our day. I didn't sigh a bit, for my sweetheart was as bad off about me as I was about her, and we were too happy to sigh. We soon became engaged, and she fixed the day away on in June, but I judged it backwards to May, and then to April and at last to March, to all of which she blushingly assented. I wrote poetry, too—not to her eyebrows—but to her from head to foot. Here is the last verse, which is only a sample of what I could do in those halcyon days:

"When incense on the sacred altars burned,
Its odors seemed in fragrant clouds to rise;
So may my wishes all to heaven turned,
Procure rich blessings for thee from the skies."

This is pretty good, I think. In 1864 some yankee soldier came along and stole the album and carried it off as a trophy and gave it to his sweetheart. She kept it twenty years, and married another fellow and sent the album back to him, and he mailed it to my wife with a nice apology. He is a gentleman, though it took him a long time to repent and reform. Of course our marriage was an epoch—a big mile-stone. My wife was only 16 and as docile as a pet lamb. I took her young, believing I could train her if she needed training. For a year or two I could make her do just as I pleased, but later on I could make her do just as she pleased, and now she makes me do just as she pleases, too. But it is all right, and I have got used to it.

Yesterday I received a letter from a friend asking me to help him about choosing a wife. He is a widower, with one child, and wanted a woman over 30 and under 40—a settled woman—and he said he would make her a good, loving husband, etc. Well, I talked it over in the family and named several good old settled girls, and my wife stopped sewing and said: "I don't think you are a very good judge of marriageable girls. You had better let this matter alone." I didn't like that remark, and replied: "Well, when I was a young man maybe I was a poor judge, but I think I can do better now." I am sorry I said it, for a woman can't take such jokes and keep calm and serene. I'll be more careful in the future.

But I must reserve some epochs for another letter. The birth of our first child was an epoch, but afterwards that business ceased to be a monopoly and became monotonous.—Bill Arp, in Atlanta Constitution.

FALLACIES ABOUT FLOUR.

Patent Roller Article More Digestible Than Graham.

Commonly accepted and widely taught ideas in regard to the evil effects of eating white flour bread, instead of graham and whole wheat breads, are upset by recent experiments of the Department of Agriculture. Digestion experiments were carefully carried out with bread made from each of the several kinds of flour, and the proportions of protein assimilated and rejected by the system carefully determined. The whole wheat flours may afford a greater proportion of the mineral nutriments, however, as this phase of the subject was not studied, but as far as the available protein fats, carbohydrates and energy are concerned the patent roller flours are preferable.

According to the chemical analysis of graham, entire wheat and standard patent flours, milled from the same lot of hard Scotch Fife spring wheat the graham flour contained the highest and the patent flour the lowest percentage of total protein. The results of the digestion experiments with these flours showed that they were valuable in the reverse order, that is, the standard patent roller flour afforded the greatest amount of assimilable protein, while the graham and whole wheat afforded lesser amounts. This paradox, that the flour containing the smallest proportion of protein, should afford the greatest proportion available for digestion, is explained by the coarseness of the particles of the whole wheat varieties. The bran and germ of these flours resist the action of the digestive juices to a great degree, and consequently pass through the system unaltered. On the other hand, the finely ground condition of the patent flours improves its digestibility.

It was also shown that the addition of wheat starch to flour did not improve its bread-making qualities or the size of the loaf. The most desirable flour for bread-making appears to be one produced by blending hard and soft wheat flours, in which the undesirable properties of the gluten of each are counterbalanced.

An Acetylene Life Saver.

A successful trial has taken place at Vienna, Austria, at the Diana Baths of a new invention for saving life at sea. The inventor is Lieutenant George Irsay de Irsay of the Hussars.

A man completely dressed, the life-saving appliance hanging loosely from his shoulder, threw himself into the water. After a few seconds he returned to the surface, and then for some hours was kept above the water by the inflated bladder or bag constituting the essential part of the appliance.

The invention consists of a metal box and a bag, which is closely wrapped around the box. Within the apparatus a perforated case is placed containing a certain chemical preparation.

The lock of the case consists of a rubber plate, which is kept upward before use by means of a substance soluble in water.

The instant water penetrates into the apparatus acetylene gas is developed and the lock becomes closed automatically.

The inflated bag serves as a sort of floating cushion, by means of which even voluntary attempts at diving are impossible.

A Curious Marriage Notice.

The following curious marriage notice appeared the other day in the London Times: "On Tuesday, the 15th inst., at Bottesfield, Lincolnshire, John Kirk, an occasional preacher in the Methodist Connection, to Susanna Seaton, of Burringham, mantau maker. The patient bride had kept company near two years with a blacksmith of the same place, who was actually published with him in the church the very Sunday preceding her marriage, but for the reasons best known to herself eloped next day with the preacher; so true is it that we know not what a day may bring forth."

THE SABBATH SCHOOL.

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR DECEMBER 22.

Subject: Christmas, Isaiah. ix., 1-7—Golden Text, Luke ii., 11—Memory Verses, 6, 7—Commentary on the Day's Lesson.

1. "Shall not be such." The darkness shall not be as great as it has been. There was a ray of encouragement for those who were ready to receive the prophet's words. "Zeb'lun." The country of Galilee around the sea of Galilee was the land that principally suffered in the first Assyrian invasion.

2. "The people that walked in darkness." The people of Judah. They were at this time under a two-fold darkness: (1) The darkness of outward trouble. See 2 Kings 15: 37; 16: 4-8, 17; 2 Chron. 28: 5-8. (2) They were in moral darkness. They were attacked by the King of Israel and by the King of Damascus and afterward by the King of Assyria. Great multitudes were carried captives or were slain. In this deep affliction of the Jewish nation her old foes rose up against her. The Edomites on the southeast and the Philistines on the southwest poured in their troops upon the devoted land and added to its calamities. The Philistines took permanent possession of the territory which they had overrun, occupying it and adding it to their dominion. Judah was indeed "brought low and made naked." 2 Chron. 28: 19. Her country was desolate, her cities were burned with fire; her land—strangers devoured it in her presence. Isa. 1: 7. The territory that remained to her was truly but a very small remnant, and even that was threatened. To escape from these troubles King Ahaz appealed to Tiglath-Pileser II. of Assyria for help. He came, and the result was that Ahaz had to rob the temple and his palace of their treasures in order to pay the required tribute; and, still more, he sacrificed the independence and honor of the realm itself.

3. "Thou hast multiplied the nation." "The prophet shows them the Messiah and His times. He would move them to hope, awaken faith, arouse to righteousness, by the vision of good times coming. The only way to such a blessed consummation was by the path of holiness, obedience and faith." "They joy before Thee." The prophet notes it to be a religious joy because it is said to be before God—that is, in His presence and with a grateful acknowledgement of His benefits.

4. "Thou hast broken the yoke." The Jews were successively delivered from the burdensome and galling yoke of the Assyrians, Chaldeans, Persians and Macedonians, but these deliverances were only a shadow of redemption from the yoke of Satan, and that redemption seems here especially predicted as if already accomplished. "As in the day of Midian." As Gideon with a handful of men conquered the hosts of Midian, so Messiah, the "child" (v. 6), shall prove to be the "Prince of peace," and the small company under him shall overcome the mighty hosts of Antichrist. See the same contrast in Mic. 5: 2-5.

5. "For every battle." It was the custom of antiquity to pile the arms of prostrate enemies, the spoils of less value, and their spotted garments, into a heap and then burn them. All that belongs to war shall be swept away; the war itself shall die. The Messiah abolishes all war, but not until His foes are either swept away by His judgments or melted into penitence and won over to submission by His love.

6. "Unto us." The prophet spake of the predicted blessings as if already communicated. Angels say, "Unto you," but this child was born for the benefit of us men, of us sinners, of all believers, to the end of the world. In the far distance the prophet foresaw the Redeemer of the world. A little later came the vision of the suffering Saviour (Isa. 53); then the town where He should be born (Micah 5: 2); a more complete revelation came through Daniel. These prophecies were so spread abroad that at the time of His coming there prevailed throughout the entire East an intense conviction that ere long a powerful monarch would rise in Judea and gain dominion over the world. Virgil, who lived a little before this, owns that a child from heaven was looked for, should restore the golden age and take away sin. "A son is given." God's gratuitous gift, upon which man had no claim. John 3: 16. A gift of love, of joy, of universal fitness to our needs, of eternal enrichment, of forever increasing value, and this gift insures all other gifts. Rom. 8: 32. As Son of man Jesus was "a child born;" as Son of God He was a "Son given." "Government." The ensign of government, the scepter, the sword or key, was borne upon or hung from the shoulder. All government shall be vested in Him. "His name." A name stands for all that is in the man—his character, his principles and his property. "Wonderful." Because His nature was both human and divine. Whoever refuses to believe in the supernatural must pause at the manger. He can go no farther. How Godhood and manhood could be knit together in the person of Christ is beyond us. But things incomprehensible are not incredible. All divine works are wonderful. "Counsellor." One who has wisdom to guide himself and others. Jesus was the embodiment of the wisdom of God. A Saviour, both God and man—a personal revelation of God's love, a perfect character and example, the sum of all motives for being good, the atonement that takes away sin while it forgives, the gift of the Holy Spirit, the institution of the church, its continual guidance, an everlasting but unseen Saviour—all these are proofs of wisdom divine and limitless. He is our Counsellor, never guiding us astray, but always by the best ways to the best ends. "Mighty God." God the mighty One. As He has wisdom, so He has strength; He is able to save to the uttermost; and such is the work of the Mediator that no less a power than that of the mighty God could accomplish it. He has control of all forces for the salvation of men; He can conquer all enemies, make His kingdom triumphant over all obstacles, can always stand before and above His people, leading them on to higher and higher developments. "Everlasting Father." Expressing the divine love and pity for men, a love that can never fail, for it is everlasting. The Father pitieth His children that are weak in knowledge, and instructs them; pities them when they are forward and bears with them; pities them when they are sick and comforts them; when they are fallen, and helps them up again; when they have offended and upon their submission forgives them; when they are wronged, and rights them. Thus "the Lord pitieth them that fear Him." "Prince of Peace." As a King He preserves, commands, creates peace. His peace both keeps the hearts of His people and rules in them. He is the author of all that peace which is the present and future bliss of His subjects.

A bargain-counter rush at Charleston, S. C., resulted in severe injuries to a number of women participating in the race for marked-down commodities. This indicates that feminine pastimes have the same element of danger that pertains to masculine sports.

Everything is coming our way. Even the mail from Australia to London will probably in future travel via New York.

REV. DR. TALMAGE.

DISCOURSE BY THE EMINENT DIVINE LAST SUNDAY.

Subject: The World Grows Better—The Time in Which We Live is Wonderful For Disaster and Wonderful For Blessings—Infidelity Dwindling.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—In this discourse Dr. Talmage recites some great events and shows that the world is advancing in the right direction; text, Joel ii, 30, "I will show wonders in the heavens and in the earth."

Dr. Cumming—great and good man—would have told us the exact time of the fulfillment of this prophecy. As I stepped into his study in London on my arrival from Paris just after the French had surrendered at Sedan the good doctor said to me: "It is just what I had told you about France. People laughed at me because I talked about the seven horns and the vials, but I foresaw all this from the book of Daniel and the book of Revelation." Not taking any such responsibility in the interpretation of the passage, I simply assert that there are in it suggestions of many things in our time.

Our eyes dilate and our heart quickens in its pulsations as we read of events in the third century, the sixth century, the eighth century, the fourteenth century, but there were more far-reaching events crowded into the nineteenth century than into any other, and the last twenty years eclipse any preceding twenty. We read in the daily newspapers of events announced in one paragraph and without any special emphasis—events which a Herodotus, a Josephus, a Xenophon, a Gibbon, would have taken whole chapters or whole volumes to elaborate. Looking out upon our time, we must cry out in the words of the text, "Wonders in the heavens and in the earth."

I propose to show you that the time in which we live is wonderful for disaster and wonderful for blessing, for there must be lights and shades in this picture as in all others. Need I argue that our time is wonderful for disaster? Our world has had a rough time since by the hand of God it was bowled out into space. It is an epileptic earth—convulsion after convulsion; frosts pounding it with sledge hammer of icebergs and fires melting it with furnaces seven times heated. It is a wonder to me it has lasted so long. Meteors shooting by on this side and grazing it and meteors shooting by on the other side and grazing it, none of them slowing up for safety. Whole fleets and navies and argosies and flotillas of worlds sweeping all about us. Our earth like a fishing smack off the banks of Newfoundland, while the Majestic and the St. Paul and the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse rush by. Besides that, our world has by sin been damaged in its internal machinery, and ever and anon the furnaces have burst, and the walking beams of the mountains have broken, and the islands have shipped a sea, and the great hulk of the world has been jarred with accidents that ever and anon threatened immediate demolition.

But it seems to us as if the last hundred years were especially characterized by disaster—volcanic, oceanic, epidemic. I say volcanic because an earthquake is only a volcano hushed up. When Stromboli and Cotopaxi and Vesuvius stop breathing, let the foundations of the earth beware! Seven thousand earthquakes in two centuries recorded in the catalogue of the British association! Trajan, the emperor, goes to ancient Antioch, and amid the splendors of his reception is met by an earthquake that nearly destroys the emperor's life.

Lisbon, fair and beautiful, at 1 o'clock on the 1st of November, 1755, in six minutes 60,000 have perished, and Voltaire writes of them, "For that region it was the last judgment; nothing wanting but a trumpet!" Europe and America feeling the throb—1500 chimneys in Boston partly or fully destroyed!

But the disasters of other times have had their counterpart in later times. In 1812 Caracas was caught in the grip of an earthquake, in 1882 in Chile 100,000 square miles of land by volcanic force upheaved to four and seven feet of permanent elevation, in 1854 Japan felt the geological agony; Naples shaken in 1857, Mexico in 1858; Mendoza, the capital of the Argentine Republic, in 1861; Manila terrorized in 1863; the Hawaiian Islands by such force uplifted and let down in 1871; Nevada shaken in 1871, Antioch in 1872, California in 1872, San Salvador in 1873, while 1883 what subterranean excitement! Ischia, an island of the Mediterranean, a beautiful Italian watering place, vineyard clad, surrounded by all natural charm and historical reminiscence; yonder Capri, the summer resort of the Roman emperors; yonder Naples, the paradise of art—this beautiful island suddenly toppled into the trough of the earth, 8000 merrymakers perishing, and some of them so far down beneath the reach of human obsequies that it may be said of many a one of them, as it was said of Moses, "The Lord buried him." Italy, all Europe weeping, all Christendom weeping where there were hearts to sympathize and Christians to pray. But while the nations were measuring that magnitude of disaster, measuring it not with golden rod like that with which the angel measured heaven, but with the black rule of death, Java, of the Indian archipelago, the most fertile island of all the earth, is caught in the grip of the earthquake, and mountain after mountain goes down, and city after city until that island, which produces the best beverage of all the world, produced the ghastliest catastrophe. One hundred thousand people dying, dead! Coming nearer home, on August 31, 1886, the great earthquake which prostrated one-half of Charleston, S. C.

But look at the disasters cyclonic. At the mouth of the Ganges are three islands, the Hattiah, the Sundeep and the Dekin Shabazpore. In the midnight of October, 1877, on all those three islands the cry was, "The waters!" A cyclone arose and rolled the sea over those three islands, and of a population of 340,000, 215,000 were drowned. Only those saved who had climbed to the top of the highest trees! Did you ever see a cyclone? No? Then I pray God you may never see one. I saw a cyclone on the ocean, and it swept us 800 miles back from our course, and for thirty-six hours during the cyclone and after it we expected every moment to go to the bottom. They told us before we retired at 9 o'clock that the barometer had fallen, but at 11 o'clock at night we were awakened with the shock of the waves. All the lights out! Crash went all the lifeboats. Waters rushing through the skylights down into the cabin and down on the furnaces until they hissed and smoked in the deluge. Seven hundred people praying, shrieking. Our great ship poised a moment on the top of a mountain of phosphorescent fire and then plunged down, down, down until it seemed as if she never would again be righted. Ah, you never want to see a cyclone at sea!

But I was in Minnesota, where there was one of those cyclones on land that swept the city of Rochester from its foundations and took dwelling houses, barns, men, women, children, horses, cattle and tossed them into indiscriminate ruin and lifted a rail train and dashed it down, a mightier hand than that of engineer on the airbrake. Cyclone in Kansas, cyclone in Missouri, cyclone in Wisconsin, cyclone in Illinois, cyclone in Iowa! Satan, prince of the power of the air, never made such cyclonic disturbances as he has in our day. And am I not right in saying that one of the characteristics of the time in which we live is disaster cyclonic?

But look at the disasters oceanic. Shall I call the roll of the dead shipping? Ye monsters of the deep, answer when I call your names. The Ville de Havre, the Schiller, the City of Boston, the Melville, the President, the Cimbria, the Oregon, the Mohegan. But why should I go on calling the roll when none of them answers, and the roll is as long as the white scroll of the Atlantic surf at Cape Hatteras breakers? If the oceanic cables could report all the scattered life and all the bleached bones that they rub against in the ocean, what a message of pathos and tragedy for both hemispheres! In one storm eighty fishermen perished off the coast of Newfoundland and whole fleets of them off the coast of England. God help the poor fellows at sea and give high seats in heaven to the Grace Darlings and Ida Lewises and the lifeboat men hovering around Goodwin sands and the Sherries! The sea, owning three-fourths of the earth, proposes to capture the other fourth, and is bombarding the land all around the earth. The moving of the hotels at Brighton Beach backward 100 yards from where they once stood, a type of what is going on all around the world and on every coast. The Dead Sea rolls to-day where ancient cities stood.

But now I turn the leaf in my subject, and I plant the white lilies and the palm tree amid the nightshades and the myrtle. This age no more characterized by wonders of disaster than by wonders of blessing—blessing of longevity, the average of human life rapidly increasing. Forty years now worth 400 years once.

Now I can travel from Manitoba to New York in less than three days. In other times it would have taken three months. In other words, three days now are worth three months of other days. The average of human life practically greater now than when Noah lived, with his 950 years, and Methuselah lived his 969 years.

Blessings of intelligence. The Salmon P. Chases and the Abraham Lincolns and the Henry Wilsons of the coming time will not be required to learn to read by pine knot lights or seated on shoemaker's bench, nor will the Fergusons have to study astronomy while watching the cattle. Knowledge rolls its tides along every poor man's door, and his children may go down and bathe in them.

If the philosophers of a hundred years ago were called up to recite in a class with our boys and girls, those old philosophers would be sent down to the foot of the class because they failed to answer the questions!

Free libraries in all the important towns and cities of the land. Historical alcoves and poetical shelves and magazine tables for all who desire to walk through them or sit down at them.

So I rejoice day by day. Work for all to do, and we may turn the crank of the Christian machinery this way or that, for we are free agents. But there is the track laid so long ago no one remembers it—laid by the hand of the Almighty God in sockets that no terrestrial or satanic pressure can ever affect.

And along the track the car of the world's redemption will roll and roll to the Grand Central depot of the millennium. I have no anxiety about the track. I am only afraid that for our indolence and unfaithfulness God will discharge us and get some other stoker and some other engineer. The train is going through with us or without us.

There is a house in London where Peter the Great of Russia lived awhile when he was moving through the land incognito and in workman's dress, that he might learn ship carpentry, by which he could supply the needs of his people. A stranger was visiting at that house, "What's in that box?" The owner said: "I don't know. That box was there when I got the house, and it was there when my father got it. We havn't had any curiosity to look at it. I guess there's nothing in it." "Well," said the stranger, "I'll give you £2 for it." "Well, done." The £2 was paid, and the contents of that box were sold to the Czar of Russia for $50,000. In it the lathing machine of Peter the Great, his private letters and documents of value beyond all monetary consideration. And here are the events that seem very insignificant and unimportant, but they increase treasures of Divine Providence and eternities of meaning which after awhile God will demonstrate before the ages as being of stupendous value.

When Titans play quoits they pitch mountains, but who owns these gigantic natural forces we are constantly reading about? Whose hand is on the throttle valve of the volcanoes? Whose foot, suddenly planted on the footstool, makes the continents quiver? God! I must be at peace with Him.

Through the Lord Jesus Christ this God is mine and He is yours. I put the earthquake that shook Palestine at the crucifixion against all the down rockings of the centuries. This God on our side, we may challenge all the centuries of time and all the cycles of eternity.

Those of you who are in midlife may well thank God that you have seen so many wondrous things, but there are people alive to-day who may live to see the shimmering veil between the material and the spiritual world lifted.

Magnetism, a word with which we cover up our ignorance, will yet be an explored realm. Electricity, the fiery courser of the sky, that Benjamin Franklin lassoed and Morse and Bell and Edison have brought under complete control, has greater wonders to reveal.

Whether here or departed this life, we will see these things. It does not make much difference where we stand, but the higher the standpoint the larger the prospect. We will see them from heaven if we do not see them from earth.

Years ago I was at Fire Island, Long Island, and I went up in the cupola from which they telegraph to New York the approach of vessels hours before they come into port. There is an opening in the wall, and the operator puts his telescope through that opening and looks out and sees vessels far out at sea. While I was talking with him he went up and looked out. He said, "We are expecting the Arizona to-night." I said: "Is it possible you know all those vessels? Do you know them as you know a man's face?" He said: "Yes, I never make a mistake. Before I see the hulls I often know them by the masts. I know them all—I have watched them so long."

Oh, what a grand thing it is to have ships telegraphed and hailed long before they come to port, that friends may come down to the wharf and welcome their long absent ones! So to-day we take our stand in the watch tower, and through the glass of inspiration we look off and see a whole fleet of ships coming in. That is the ship of peace, flag with one star of Bethlehem floating above the topgallants. That is the ship of the church, mark of salt water high upon the smokestack, showing she has had rough weather, but the Captain of Salvation commands her, and all is well with her. The ship of heaven, mightiest craft ever launched, millions of passengers waiting for millions more, prophets and apostles and martyrs in the cabin, conquerors at the foot of the mast, while from the rigging hands are waving this way as if they knew us, and we wave back again, for they are ours. They went out from our own households. Ours! Hail, hail! Put off the black and put on the white. Stop tolling the funeral bell and ring the wedding anthem. Shut up the hearse and take the chariot.

Now the ship comes around the great headland. Soon she will strike the wharf and we will go aboard her. Tears for ships going out. Laughter for ships coming in. Now she touches the wharf. Throw out the planks. Rush not up that gangway with embracing long lost friends, for you will have eternity of reunion. Stand back and give way until other millions come aboard her. Farewell to sin! Farewell to struggle! Farewell to sickness! Farewell to death! "Blessed are all who enter in through the gates into the city."

TO ONE MAN ONLY.

EVERYBODY ELSE PLEASE SKIP THIS PIECE.

Dear Sir:—When, two or three weeks ago, we told you we were about to buy a new press for THE BANNER, and respectfully requested you to pay the small amount you are due us, as we greatly needed the money, we are afraid you must have overlooked it, or we would surely have heard from you. Or perhaps you thought it was the other fellow we were addressing. But it was you we were talking to, and as this is for your eye only, and not intended for anyone else, we have put a blue cross-mark opposite this paragraph so that you will understand that you are the one man out of all our large crowd we are waiting to hear from. We won't put the blue cross-mark on the outside of the paper where your postmaster and neighbors can see it, but inside where only yourself can see it.

We have the new press looked out and are only waiting for you to pay up so that we can get the press here.

Please let us hear from you at once and much oblige,

Yours very respectfully,
THE BANNER.

A MERRY CHRISTMAS to all.

"PEACE on earth, good will to men." Bury the political hatchet, and all other differences, and so fulfill the divine command.

WITH reference to Mr. Bice's letter, which will be found in our correspondence columns, and the municipal elections to be held next month at Clanton and Thorsby, the following section of the new constitution clears the matter up, and practically the elections will be held the same as in former years.

Section 184 of the new Constitution says: No person, not registered and qualified as an elector under the provisions of this article, shall vote at the general election in nineteen hundred and two, or at any subsequent State, county, or municipal election, general, local or special: but the provisions of this article shall not apply to any election held prior to the general election in the year nineteen hundred and two.

We are in receipt of a letter from John Smith, of Lewisville, Denton county, Texas, who wishes to hear from Alex Glasscock and others.

BLIZZARD weather this week. The coldest December weather on record in the South.

A party of about twenty per sons, moving from Coosa to Tuskaloosa county, were in town Wednesday night. The party comprised Mr. Lem Dobbs, children and grandchildren.

A most marvellous acheivement was the recent communication by wireless telegraph between the two sister ships Lucania and Campania, in mid-ocean, eastward and westward bound. The distance between them was 150 miles, and the communication was kept up for three hours, the passengers exchanging the news of two continents.

HAPPILY MARRIED.

"Happy is the bride that the sun shines on," and the sun was brightly shining on Wednesday afternoon at three o'clock, when a large number of friends assembled at the home of Mr. and Mrs. P. M. Moore to witness the nuptials of Mr. Walter L. Kemp and Miss Alabama Moore. Judge Adams performed the solemn ceremony that made them one, and the happy couple left on the southbound mail for their future home at Waugh where we wish them a long and prosperous career.

Mr. Kemp makes friends wherever he goes by his steady and upright conduct, and Miss Bamma has endeared herself to all who know her. They are a well matched couple, bound to succeed in life. God bless them.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Howard college, Dec. 16, 1901

EDITOR BANNER: Knowing the great advantages offered by Howard college, I desire to mention a few of them to the people of chilton county through the BANNER. Howard college undertakes to provide instruction as broad and thorough as can be had in any secular institution, and in addition to surround the students with influence most conducive to the development of character. Its tests of scholarship are rigid and the standard of graduation is unusually high, while the physical, social and religious welfare of its students is regarded as no less important. It is not necessary to say anything about the location. The fact that it is in the healthy county of Jefferson and so near the thriving city of Birmingham as to feel the throb of industry is sufficient proof of its excellent location.

The faculty is a very able body of men. Each a specialist in his department, they rule the students by love, and are always ready to give help and advice to any student.

Each student is required to take enough Physical exercise to keep him in perfect health. The cadet corps is required to drill three times a week, and gymnasium work is done twice a week. The leading games among the boys are basket ball, baseball and tennis.

The students maintain a strong Y. M. C. A., which adds much to the moral and religious influence among the boys. They keep a reading room well filled with the very best magazines and papers that can be secured. This room is open to all the student body. The Ministerial class does much work among the students in trying to lead them to nobler views of life and to bring the unconverted to their Savior. Every boy is required to attend the church of his choice. The pastors of the Baptist, Methodist and Presbyterian churches feel a great interest in the students and give them a welcome among their congregation. The pastors often visit the college and speak words of wisdom and advice to the students.

The only thing necessary for the people of East Lake to know is that you are a "Howard boy," then their doors are opened, and you are welcome as their guest.

Howard has for its aim to make men and not money. Any young man anticipating entering college would make a wise choice in coming here. We will welcome you, not with "shazing," but with a hearty hand shake as a brother.

I don't think we could spend Christmas in a better way than to come together and discuss those questions that pertain to the upbuilding of the Master's cause.

T. J. DEASON, Pastor.

The United States Senate, by unanimous vote, has confirmed the President's nomination of Thos. G. Jones to be the Judge of the Middle and Northern Districts of Alabama. While this is nothing more than was expected, still it is gratifying to his friends to know that the universal approval of his selection had its effect on those who were the final arbiters in the case. His fitness for the high position is well recognized by lawyers, not only in Alabama, but throughout the country, for he has a well established reputation for thorough knowledge of the law. As he is a fair-minded man, the scales of justice will be evenly held, and no wrong be done either to individual or government, so far as it is in his power to prevent. It is a matter of congratulation to have such a man on the Federal bench in Alabama.—Advertiser.

All Doctors have tried to cure CATARRH by the use of powders, lend gases inhalers and drugs in paste form. Their powders dry up the mucuous membranes causing them to crack open and bleed. The powerful acids used in the inhalers have entirely eaten away the same membranes that their makers have aimed to cure, while pastes and ointments cannot reach the disease. An old and experienced practitioner who has for many years made a close study and specialty of the treatment of CATARRH, has at last perfected a Treatment which when faithfully used, not only relieves at once, but permanently cures CATARRH, by removing the cause, stopping the discharges, and curing all inflammation. It is the only remedy known to science that actually reaches the afflicted parts. This wonderful remedy is known as "SNIFFLES" the GUARANTEED CATARRH CURE and is sold at the extremely low price of One Dollar, each package containing internal and external medicine sufficient for a full month's treatment and everything necessary to its perfect use.

"SNIFFLES" is the only perfect CATARRH CURE ever made and is now recognized as the only safe and positive cure for that annoying and disgusting disease. It cures all inflammation quickly and permanently and is also wonderfully quick to relieve HAY FEVER or COLD in the HEAD.

CATARRH when neglected often leads to CONSUMPTION—"SNIFFLES" will save you if you use it at once. It is no ordinary remedy, but a complete treatment which is positively guaranteed to cure CATARRH in any form or stage if used according to the directions which accompany each package. Don't delay but send for it at once, and write full particulars as to your condition, and you will receive special advice from the discoverer of this wonderful remedy regarding your case without cost to you beyond the regular price of "SNIFFLES" the "GUARANTEED CATARRH CURE."

Mexican Mustang Liniment will readily overcome Loss of Hair, Diseased Hoofs and Scratches in horses, mules and cattle. Put once to try it.

A toad under a harrow suffers no more than the faithful horse that is tortured with Spavins, Swinney, Harness Sores, Sprains, etc. Most horse owners know this and apply the kind of sympathy that heals, known far and wide as Mexican Mustang Liniment.

Never fails—not even in the most aggravated cases. Cures caked udder in cows quicker than any known remedy. Hardly a disease peculiar to muscle, skin or joints that cannot be cured by it.

Mexican Mustang Liniment is the best remedy on the market for Wind Galls, Sprains and Skin Lumps. It keeps horses and mules in condition.

ARE YOU DEAF? ANY HEAD NOISES?

ALL CASES OF
DEAFNESS OR HARD HEARING ARE NOW CURABLE
by our new invention. Only those born deaf are incurable.
HEAD NOISES CEASE IMMEDIATELY.
F. A. WERMAN, OF BALTIMORE, SAYS:

BALTIMORE, Md., March 30, 1901.

Gentlemen:—Being entirely cured of deafness, thanks to your treatment, I will now give you a full history of my case, to be used at your discretion.

About five years ago my right ear began to sing, and this kept on getting worse, until I lost my hearing in this ear entirely.

I underwent a treatment for catarrh, for three months, without any success, consulted a number of physicians, among others, the most eminent ear specialist of this city, who told me that only an operation could help me, and even that only temporarily, that the head noises would then cease, but the hearing in the affected ear would be lost forever.

I then saw your advertisement accidentally in a New York paper, and ordered your treatment. After I had used it only a few days according to your directions, the noises ceased, and to-day, after five weeks, my hearing in the diseased ear has been entirely restored. I thank you heartily and beg to remain Very truly yours,

F. A. WERMAN, 730 S. Broadway, Baltimore, Md.

Our treatment does not interfere with your usual occupation.

THE HOME GOLD CURE.

An Ingenious Treatment by which Drunkards are Being Cured Daily in spite of themselves.

No Nerves Destroyed, No Weakening of the Nerves. A Pleasant and Positive Cure for the Liquor Habit.

It is now generally known and understood that drunkenness is a disease and not weakness. A body filled with poison, and nerves completely shattered by periodical or constant use of intoxicating liquors, requires an antidote capable of neutralizing and eradicating this poison, and destroying the craving for intoxicants. Sufferers may now cure themselves at home without publicity or loss of time from business by this wonderful "HOME GOLD CURE" which has been perfected after many years of close study and treatment of inebriates. The faithful use according to directions of this wonderful discovery is positively guaranteed to cure the most obstinate case, no matter how hard a drinker. Our records show the marvelous transformation of thousands of Drunkards into sober, industrious and upright men.

WIVES CURE YOUR HUSBANDS!! CHILDREN CURE YOUR FATHERS!! this remedy is in no sense a nostrum but is a specific for this disease only, and is so skillfully devised and prepared that it is thoroughly soluble and pleasant to the taste, so that it can be given in a cup of tea or coffee without the knowledge of the person taking it. Thousands of Drunkards have cured themselves with this priceless remedy, and as many more have been cured and made temperate men by having the "CURE" administered by loving friends and relatives without their knowledge in coffee or tea, and believe today that they discontinued drinking of their own free will. DO NOT WAIT. Do not be deluded by apparent and misleading "improvement." Drive out the disease at once and for all time. The "HOME GOLD CURE" is sold at the extremely low price of One Dollar, thus placing within reach of every body a treatment more effectual than others costing $25 to $50. Full directions accompany each package. Special advice by skilled physicians when requested without extra charge. Sent prepaid to any part of the world on receipt of One Dollar. Address Dept. C 935, ED. WIN B. GILES & COMPANY, 2330 and 2332 Market Street, Philadelphia.

VENEZUELA DON'T LIKE IT.

"The United States government will not oppose any steps which Germany may take to enforce her rights in Venezuela, with the exception of preventing the annexation of Venezuelan territory." This announcement is not well received by Venezuela. She infers that Uncle Sam considers her part of his preserves. In the meantime Germany will probably take steps to collect that little account of $2,000,000 which German citizens claim.

STORM SWEPT ENGLAND.

A severe storm Friday caused a telegraphic break-down throughout the United Kingdom unequalled since 1881. Many provincial towns were so snowbound that courts were closed, owing to the litigants residing in the country being unable to reach the towns. A large Austrian steamer, the Noreate, which had left the yards of her builders at Londonderry, was driven on the rocks off Warren Point.

NORDICA'S SUIT.

E. W. Dowd, real estate dealer, Ottowa, Kas., asserts that if Madame Nordica, the singer, wins her suit against the government for a sum said to be between three and four millions, he will come in for a share of the money. Madame Nordica's claim is for money paid the United States by the French government for the destruction of a ship that belonged to Ichabod Norton, an ancestor. The money, it is said, was never paid over to the Norton heirs.

KILLED HIS FATHER-IN-LAW.

John Pilley, 50 years old, was killed by Willis Ray, his son-in-law near Decatur, Ill., Thursday night. Pilley got a shot-gun and started to kill Ray, but the latter was too quick for him, got a revolver and killed Pilley. The coroner's jury returned a verdict of justifiable homicide.

TELEPHONE'S GROWTH.

The Electrical Review gives data on the telephone business in the United States, showing that, including all companies, there are 4,311 exchanges in operation, with 2,278,717 telephones in use. The total capital invested is nearly $500,000,000. One company employes 33,000 persons and handles a total of two billions calls per year. The manufacturing side is estimated to produce a total of 3,000 telephones per day. This annual output of instruments, with their accessory, being valued at between $50,000,000 and $60,000,000.

DR. A. R. ABBOTT, mayor of Muskogee, and Dr. Earle, of Eufaula, have been ejected from the Indian Territory because they persistently refused to comply with the law and appear before the medical board for examination to determine their fitness to practice.

KITES KATCH THE KLICK.

Signor Marconi from St. Johns, N. F., informs our correspondent that he has received wireless messages from a station in Cornwall, England, solving the problem of signalling across the Atlantic ocean without wires. Signor Marconi elevated a kite with an aerial wire by means of which signals are sent or received. He remained at the recorder attached to the receiving apparatus and to his satisfaction signals were received at intervals according to the programme arranged previously with the operator at Pold House. This signal was repeated so frequently and so in accordance with the detailed plan arranged to provide safeguards against possibility of mistake that Marconi was satisfied that it was genuine transmission. Signor Marconi emphasizes the fact that the system is yet only in an embryonic stage and that the possibility of its ultimate development is demonstrated by the success of the present experiments with incomplete and imperfect apparatus, as the signals can only be received by the most sensatively adjusted apparatus. Signor Marconi will for the present disregard the matter of communicating with trans-Atlantic steamers. He announces that he will remain in England until after the coronation of King Edward and that he hopes to send the news of that event across the Atlantic by the wireless method, so as to prove the capability of the system for such purposes. He probably will in the meantime equip all the vessels of the leading lines of steamers with his apparatus.

$500,000 FIRE.

Saturday night fire broke out in the Salem, W. Va., Express office, a weekly newspaper of the town, which caused a loss of $500,000 and destroyed the whole business section. Sixty-five business houses and fourteen residences were burned. Many people lived over the business houses and it is reliably estimated that at least 250 people are homeless.

APARTMENT BUILDING BURNED

The Olinger Flats in Chicago, were burned at an early hour Sunday morning. The sixty tenants, most of whom were asleep, were aroused by the dense smoke and many narrow escapes from death were spectacular and exciting. All chance of escape by the main stairway was cut off by the flames and many persons were kept by force from caping from the upper windows. Women in their night clothes and with bare feet climbed out on the fire escapes and decended to the street and were given refuge in neighboring residences and stores. Many daring escapes and rescues were made by the firemen. Loss $50,000. An overheated furnace caused the fire.

GEO. SEALY, one of Galveston's bond commissioners, died suddenly on board a railroad train while en route to the conference at New York.

BECK PAYS FOR HIS PASSAGE.

Johann Beck, the man who shipped himself in a box on the Hamburg-American steamer Palatia which arrived on December 2nd, has applied to United States Commissioner Shields for his first citizenship papers. Beck said he was 30 years of age and was born in Austria. Beck is now employed in a hotel as a painter. He is meeting a bill for $70 presented by the steam-ship company.

DISREGARDED ORDERS.

Failure on the part of a conductor to obey orders is supposed to have been the cause of a head-end collision on the Illinois Central between Irene and Perryville, Ill., early Sunday morning, which resulted in six dead, two missing and eleven hurt. The trains met in a short bend in the track, both running at full speed. The smoking, express and baggage cars were piled on the locomotives, penning in the occupants of the smoker, which took fire. Only three of the half dozen in that car escaped. The others, if not instantly killed were roasted to death and their bodies along with those of the engine crews were consumed. The general superintendent of transportation places the blame on the conductor and engineer of the fast freight train. They are said to have disobeyed orders.

GREAT NORTHERN WRECK.

A wreck occurred on the Great Northern Railroad near Essex, Mont., in the Rocky Mountains, early Sunday. Some cars were overturned and all were more or less wrecked. The accident was due to rails spreading. Otto Erickson was killed and twenty-one others were injured.

Kearsarge Goes to Cuba—Vaughan Sees the President—Carnegie's Steel Company Bonds not Acceptable—Hobson to Marry—Hay Selected.

The navy department has been informed of the departure from Hampton Roads of the battleship Kearsarge, bound for Havana, where she will meet the Alabama and Massachusetts.

District Attorney Vaughan has had an interview with the president on his fight for reappointment. No final decision was reached, but Mr. Vaughan appears confident that he will continue to be district attorney for the Northern judicial district.

Additional papers have been filed with the senate judiciary committee by persons who are protesting against the confirmation of Attorney-General Knox. The papers for the most part are complaints because there has been no prosecution of the "trusts" by the department of justice.

Just before adjournment Monday night the senate confirmed the nomination of Hon. Philander C. Knox to be attorney general of the United States. Senator Jones of Arkansas had moved to recommend the nomination to the committee on judiciary, in the meantime publishing the testimony bearing upon the case. Speeches in favor of this proposition were made by Senators Jones and Turner, and in opposition by Senators Hoar and Pettus.

It is to be definitely decided that President Roosevelt will not accept the offer of Mr. Carnegie of $10,000,000 of Bonds of the United States Steel Corporation for the purpose of founding an institution for higher education in Washington. Prominent senators are unanimous against the acceptance of the offer in its present shape. The provision attached to the offer that the government shall hold the bonds for a number of years is considered especially objectionable. The president is hopeful that an adjustment can be made by which Mr. Carnegie will convert the bonds which he tendered into cash or United States bonds and that the gift can be accepted in that shape.

General Franklin Bell has been exceedingly active in Bantangas province, P. I., where he intends by every means available to stamp out the insurrection. There are daily small fights between the insurgents and the men of General Bell's command, in which the former are almost invariably routed. Lieutenant Hennessy of the Eighth infantry together with one American scout and six Fillipinos, captured an insurgent major with 42 men, twenty-two rifles and 880 rounds of ammunition, without the loss of a man. A number of captured documents and papers, now in the hands of General Bell implicate in the insurrection the presidente and other prominent natives of Lian, Bantangas province. General Bell has notified the natives in Bantangas that on December 28th he proposes to concentrate them in the neighborhood of the towns.

Representative Bankhead has filed with the president the application and endorsements of T. B. Morton, candidate for the Alabama collectorship.

The customs receipts in Cuba for the ten months ending October 31, 1901, were $13,039,336, as compared with $13,228,861 for the same period of 1900, and $12,120,991 for 1899.

GRAND JURY INDICTS.

Helen Wilmans-Post Must Answer in Court to Charge of Practicing Fraud.

The grand jury in the United States court at Jacksonville, Fla., has returned a true bill against Helen Post, alias Helen Wilmans, of Sea Breeze. The indictment charges that the defendant violated section 5480 of the revised statutes by devising schemes and artifices to defraud persons under false and fradulent pretenses on her part, by representing that she possessed the power of mental science or mind cure to cure all forms of disease and weakness, for which she received money that was converted to her own use. The case promises to become celebrated, as the mental scientists at their recent national convention at Seabreeze voted to participate in the defense of the accused woman and her associates.

Mrs. Post was arrested in August last and has been under $5,000 bail. Her husband, Colonel C. C. Post, and her son in law, S. F. Burgman, were indicted in Macon, Ga., last month.

Mrs. Post's operations have been extensive and she is alleged to have made large sums of money by the practice of "mental science."

Her instructions to patients are very interesting. They read in part as follows:

"I wish you to go alone fifteen minutes each day and hold yourself receptive to my thought, as if you were quietly expecting something pleasant to come to you.

"Do not make any great effort to fix your thoughts on me, but trust me to draw your thoughts to me; I can do it for you better than you can do it for yourself. If your mind wanders do not try to force it back; leave it free. If you become drowsy, give way to the feeling; do not antagonize it. I will take care of your condition, whatever it is.

"The first requirement during the time you sit for treatment is that you relax yourself; take the nerve tension off your muscles and your mind, and let yourself down into an attitude of perfect ease and carelessness, as if you did not care how things went; did not even care whether you are sick or not. This attitude releases your thoughts from your disease, and gives my thoughts a chance to come in and cure you."

WALTHOUR WINS PRIZE.

Crossed Tape First in Great Six-Day Bicycle Race In Gotham.

A new York dispatch says: Bobby Walthour, of Atlanta, Ga., of the bicycle team of McEachern and Walthour, won the six-day race at the Madison Square Garden Saturday night. He crossed the tape two yards ahead of his nearest competitor.

The prizes the men contended for were seven in number, as follows: First prize, $1,500; second, $1,000; third, $750; fourth, $500; fifth, $350; sixth, $250, and seventh prize, $150. In addition the management agreed to pay the training expenses of the men remaining in the race during the six days.

DECLARED A FRAUD.

Grand Jury Returns Indictment Against "Cherry Tree" Company.

The United States district court at Charlotte, N. C., finally adjourned Saturday night after a five days' session. Among other indictments returned by the grand jury was one against the Amos Owen Cherry Tree Company, doing business at Henrietta, Rutherford county.

Under the indictment the defendants, when brought into court, will be tried for fraud and for improper use of the United States mail.

The grand jury discovered the fact that the cherry tree company has been operating very extensively and that many persons have been caught by the tempting offers held out by this scheme.

Schley Ready to Take Action.

A Baltimore dispatch says: Rear Admiral W. S. Schley has notified Attorney General Raynor that he is ready to take any action with reference to his case that Mr. Raynor may advise.

EXECUTION IS POSTPONED.

Convicted Papist Gets New Lease Of Life Through Governor.

Counsel for Bill Collier, the negro sentenced to die on the gallows in Dalton, Ga., last Friday for an assault on Mrs. McPherson, succeeded in getting a stay of execution by an amendment to the motion for new trial and Judge Fite granted a rule nisi and set the hearing for next week.

RAYNOR IS DUMBFOUNDED.

Schley's Attorney Amazed at Findings of Inquiry Court.

Attorney Isidor Raynor showed keen disappointment when the findings of the court of inquiry were communicated to him in Baltimore Friday night. He announced that he would go to Washington and counsel Admiral Schley to fight the case to a finish by every appeal that is possible. In an interview he said:

"I think the country will almost unanimously accept Admiral Dewey's judgment.

OUR INFLUENCE IN CHINA

The Part Taken by the United States in Establishing Peace.

Exerted a Salutary "Influence in the Cause of Moderation, Humanity and Justice."

Washington, D. C.—Secretary Hay has transmitted to Congress a report from W. W. Rockhill, Special Commissioner of the United States to China, in which the part played by the United States in the negotiations resulting in the establishment of peace between the Chinese Government and the Powers is set forth. The notable circular note addressed by Secretary Hay, on July 3, to all the powers concerned in the adjustment of the Chinese troubles was never departed from by the diplomatic officers through whom it was transmitted, Mr. Rockhill says, and he adds:

"Bearing these instructions in mind the task of the agents of our Government in Pekin was a comparatively easy one. Throughout the negotiations our object was to use the influence of our Government in the interest of justice and moderation and in a spirit of equal friendship to the Powers negotiating jointly with us and the China.

After an exposition of what was accomplished by the international envoys at Pekin, Mr. Rockhill gives a brief summary of the attitude of the United States. "While we maintained complete independence," he says, "we were able to act harmoniously in the concert of the Powers, the existence of which was so essential to a prompt and satisfactory settlement of the situation. We retained the friendship of all the negotiating Powers, exerted a salutary influence in the cause of moderation, humanity and justice, securing adequate reparation for wrongs done our citizens, guarantees for their future protection, and labored successfully in the interests of the whole world in the cause of equal and impartial trade with all parts of the Chinese Empire."

WANTS $180,000,000 FOR CANAL

Senator Morgan Introduces His Bill For the Project.

Washington, D. C.—Senator Morgan has introduced a bill providing $180,000,000 for the construction of the Nicaragua Canal, of which $5,000,000 is made immediately available, and of which aggregate sum such amounts as are necessary are to be appropriated by Congress from time to time.

The control of the canal and of the canal belt is vested in a board of eight citizens of the United States, in addition to the Secretary of War, who is to be President, each member of the board to be paid $8000 a year and to be chosen regardless of political affiliation.

There is a provision authorizing the establishment of a regiment from the regular army on the canal belt to guard it properly, and Courts also are authorized conformable to the powers granted by the Governments of Nicaragua and Costa Rica.

WEALTHY WOMAN SENTENCED.

Convicted of Burning Her House to Defraud Insurance Companies.

Binghamton, N. Y.—Mrs. Mary Johnson, who, with I. H. Radford, of Buffalo, was indicted for burning the Davidge summer residence at Newark Valley, on the night of July 4, 1900, and who was convicted of the crime, was sentenced by Judge Mead in Owego, to serve fifteen years in Auburn.

Mrs. Johnson is a woman of considerable wealth and refinement, who has resided in Chicago and Buffalo. It is charged that she entered into a conspiracy with several business men to systematically defraud the fire insurance companies, and placed an insurance of $8500 on the Davidge residence, which she bought through Radford, and then burned it.

Her lawyers have secured a stay of sentence pending an effort to secure a certificate of reasonable doubt, and a a new trial.

CANNIBALISM IN PHILIPPINES.

Native Sentenced to Death Who Killed Companion and Ate Body.

Washington, D. C.—Cannibalism has appeared in the varied list of crimes charged against Filipinos by American military courts. According to the record of a court-martial convened in the Department of the Visayas, P. I., which has been received at the War Department, Raymundo Fonte, a native, found his working companion, Liberato Benliro, sleep in his (Fonte's) boat.

Fonte became enraged, killed the slumbering man with a blow of an oar, cut off his nose and ears, and, according to his own confession, cooked and ate part of the body. He was sentenced to be hanged in Capiz, Panay.

Airships and under-water craft have done remarkable things in France in the first year of this century, but the vessels which have been careering about the clouds like comets and the boats which have been poking their noses beneath the waves have not yet achieved such triumphs that the surface of the earth and the level of the sea will speedily be abandoned for purposes of travel.

THE COOK INLET REGION.

Its Natural History Treated in a Recent Bulletin.

The "Natural History of the Cook Inlet Region," Alaska, forms the subject of one of the most recent bulletins of the Department of Agriculture.

Among other things it is stated that the region about Cook Inlet was at the beginning of the field season of 1900 the only general district of consequence on the Pacific coast of Alaska that had not been recently visited by naturalists.

Cook Inlet, it is stated, is the first important indentation of the Alaskan coast east of the Alaskan peninsula. It is a long narrow inlet bifurcated at its upper end into two large arms—Knik arm and Turnagain arm. The first of these, Knik arm, is about fifteen miles long and at its upper end receives the waters of a large stream, the Matanuska. The other, Turnagain arm, is thirty miles or more in length, and extends inland until within about five miles of the waters of Prince William Sound. West of Knik arm is the delta of the Sushitna River, the largest stream emptying into the inlet. South of Turnagain arm, and connected with the mainland only by the five miles of glacier between the head of the arm and Prince William Sound, is the Kenai peninsula. Numerous relatively small streams enter both sides of Turnagain arm and both sides of the main inlet as well, so that in addition to the great volume received from the Sushitna there is a large secondary supply of fresh water. Except in Turnagain arm, the country bordering Cook Inlet is low and comparatively level, though high mountains from ten to sixty miles inland can be seen on all sides. The small trading station and native village of Tyonek is situated on a low sandpit on a plain about twenty miles west of the mouth of the Sushitna. Hope City is situated at the mouth of Resurrection Creek, on each side of which rugged mountains rise to an altitude of 5000 feet or more

Moose, bear and mountain sheep are the principal big game, and although they have already been hunted to a considerable extent, it is probable that they are more abundant than in any equally accessible place in North America. Fur-bearing animals are well represented, but, as elsewhere in the north, have been much reduced in numbers. The smaller, less conspicuous mammals are such as are generally found throughout Northern Alaska.

Birds are not found in great numbers. Land birds, with the exception of grouse, which are fairly common, are not numerous in species or individuals. Water birds, particularly littoral or semi-pelagic forms, are noticeably uncommon, probably on account of the brackish water of the inlet and the comparative absence of marine invertebrates. Ducks and geese, however, and birds which feed in fresh water are locally quite abundant.

Spruce and hemlock timber ceases between 2000 and 3000 feet elevation, and the higher slopes are clothed only with matted masses of low shrubs or wide expanses of tall grass. In the gulches thickets of alders hold control and a few stunted individuals often straggle well up toward the snow line. The characteristic mammals on the mountains are the Dall mountain sheep (Ovis dalli), the hoary marmot (Arctomys caligatus), and the Alaska mountain vole (Microtus mizurus).

Durability of Timber.

Now that there is so much talk about the durability of Australian timbers, it might not be out of place to consider some other hard woods that are nearer to hand than the Karri and Jarrah forests of Westralia. There is in the British Museum a life-size wooden image of Rameses II.—the famous Sesostris—which seems to be in a perfect state of preservation. As this particular Rameses flourished over thirty-two centuries ago, we may fairly take it that this piece of timber from the Nile valley is at least 3000 years old, and it is practically certain that it has passed through many trying vicissitudes, such as being buried among ruins, submerged in Nile floods and the rest. Westralian wood enthusiasts who have recently been boasting that Jarrah can stand the wear and tear of fifty years or more had better ponder this. And our authorities in Egypt might do well to see if there are any forests available for cutting down by Dongola boat or through the Soudan.—London Circle.

He Routed the Bear.

An amusing story is told of Lablache, the celebrated bass singer, says Tit-Bits. One day as he was strolling leisurely through a French fair a cry was suddenly raised that a bear had escaped from the menagerie. The crowd fled in every direction—all save the singer, whose massive proportions precluded the idea of rapid motion. Amid the general commotion he amongst them all stood unmoved, calmly awaiting the advent of the ferocious beast, which sure enough came slouching rapidly toward him. When within a few feet it halted as though to gather itself together for a final rush, when Lablache stepped forward, and from the lowest depths of his immense chest sent forth such a thunderous roar that the terrified animal turned and fled.

Unsanitary Parisians.

No fewer than 4000 landlords have refused to provide a proper drainage system to their houses, in accordance with the new sanitary regulations. The Municipal Council has now to decide whether it shall undertake 4000 prosecutions, or do the work itself and sue the landlords to recover the cost afterward.

HOUSEWORK

Too much housework wrecks women's nerves. And the constant care of children, day and night, is often too trying for even a strong woman. A haggard face tells the story of the overworked housewife and mother. Deranged menses, leucorrhœa and falling of the womb result from overwork. Every housewife needs a remedy to regulate her menses and to keep her sensitive female organs in perfect condition.

WINE OF CARDUI

is doing this for thousands of American women to-day. It cured Mrs. Jones and that is why she writes this frank letter:

Glasgow, Ky., Feb. 21, 1901.

I am so glad that your Wine of Cardui is helping me. I am feeling better than I have felt for years. I am doing my own work without any help, and I washed last week and was not sore at all. This shows that the Wine is doing me good. I am getting fleshed then I ever was before, and sleep good and eat hearty. Before I began taking Wine of Cardui, I used to have to lie down five or six times every day, but now I do not think of lying down through the day. MRS. BENJAMIN JONES.

PUBLIC PROTECTED

Hon. Judge Wing of the Federal Court of Cleveland has just issued a permanent injunction with costs and damages enjoining a lawyer named Geary from the manufacture and sale of an imitation of Cascarets. Geary imitated the boxes, shape of the tablet and used a similar sounding name. This decision is to be commended. It is a long step in the right direction. Any dealer who will offer a substitute or say that something "is just as good" when cascarets are called for, does it for the purpose making a few cents extra profit, which must always be at the expense of the customer's health.

Cascarets have been advertised freely in our columns and as the result of making them known, Cascarets today having the largest sale of any bowel medicine in the world. They are always packed in metal boxes with the long tablet on the cover and each tablet stamped CCC. They are never sold in bulk or from jars. We deem it our duty to warn our readers against an imitation or substitute of this meritorious medicine, and if at any time they have ever been offered a substitute or an offer made to sell something "just as good" when Cascarets have been asked for, we will be pleased indeed to have a letter to that effect or write direct to the Sterling Remedy Company, New York or Chicago.

WYOMING SOAP MINE.

Wyoming has a soap mine. A deposit of a whitish material, in composite form, containing just enough sulphate, potash, and pumice to give gritty essential, has been discovered five miles west of Newcastle, in the northeastern part of Wyoming. The deposit lies in a fissure and dips into the ground like a vein of mineral. The vein, so called, is 15 to 18 feet wide and runs the length of a quarter section, which for twenty years up to date was used as a stock pasture. Next week probably a building of commodious dimensions, fitted with machinery that will cut the slabs of mineral soap into sizes for commercial use, will cover a portion of the ground. The cleanest town in the United States, it is possible, will be located in this section. It will be free from soot and smoke. For the factory boilers will be heated by petroleum found near by, and the soap to keep the place clean is found in large quantities in the ground and consequently so dirt cheap that men can be kept on the payroll to do nothing else but look out for dirt spots and quickly remove them. Mr. Betts has plans for developing the unique field, and it may be expected that in a short time the markets of the world will be supplied with another wonderful product of the states of boundless resources in the Rocky mountain region.—Philadelphia Item.

One of the first things to attract the attention of Baby Clarence was grandma's hatrack, made of a pair of deer's horns. One afternoon, when he was three years old, papa took him to a park. Eddie (to his friend)—Fancy giving your mother a pair of slippers for her birthday! Freddie—Yes, but I marked them, "Only to be worn on the feet."

Periodically the question of abolishing grade crossings in Chicago is agitated, but without effect. As a result of the present conditions of the crossings, out of a population of a little more than a million and a half there were in the year 1900 330 deaths by railroad accidents. Of these, 257 were caused by steam cars and 73 by street cars. In the same year there were in New York city 134 deaths by railroad accidents in a population of nearly three and a half millions, and in Philadelphia (with a population or more than a million and a quarter) there were only 55 deaths by railroad accidents. St. Louis, with a population of 576,228, had the lowest mortality by railroads, the number of deaths being nine. The comparative statement which has been prepared by the Federal Labor Bureau should cause the people of Chicago to demand the sinking or the elevation of the tracks

Long Hair

"About a year ago my hair was coming out very fast, so I bought a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor. It stopped the falling and made my hair grow very rapidly, until now it is 45 inches in length."—Mrs. A. Boydston, Atchison, Kans.

There's another hunger than that of the stomach. Hair hunger, for instance. Hungry hair needs food, needs hair vigor—Ayer's. This is why we say that Ayer's Hair Vigor always restores color, and makes the hair grow long and heavy. $1.00 a bottle. All druggists.

If your druggist cannot supply you, send us one dollar and we will express you a bottle. Be sure and give the name of your nearest express office. Address, J. C. AYER CO., Lowell, Mass.

Tell-Tale Fly.

At a recent meeting of the entomological society in London the president, G. H. Verrall, told an amusing story to prove that a knowledge of insects may even be useful in settling questions in literary history. Commentators on the works of Robert Louis Stevenson were trying in vain to discover whether the notes made by him in a certain book were written before or after he took up his residence in Samoa. It happened that a fly had been squeezed between the pages, and when Mr. Verrall saw it he instantly recognised it as belonging to a species peculiar to the Polynesian islands. That settled the question.

Not six per cent. of all the women in America spend as much money as $50 a year on their clothes.

Naturally people want to be Well for Christmas, for nothing so promotes happiness and good cheer. Therefore, take Garfield Tea now; it cures all derangements of stomach, liver, kidneys or bowels; it cleanses the system and purifies the blood, thus removing the cause of rheumatism, gout and many chronic diseases. It is good for young and old and has been held in the highest repute for many years. Physicians recommend it.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address

How Truly the Great Fame of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Justifies Her Original Signature.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

It will entirely cure the worst forms of Female Complaints, all Ovarian troubles, Inflammation and Ulceration, Falling and Displacement of the Womb, and consequent Spinal Weakness, and is peculiarly adapted to the Change of Life.

It has cured more cases of Backache and Leucorrhœa than any other remedy the world has ever known. It is almost infallible in such cases. It dissolves and expels tumors from the Uterus in an early stage of development, and checks any tendency to cancerous humors.

Irregular, Suppressed or Painful Menstruation, Weakness of the Stomach, Indigestion, Bloating, Flooding, Nervous Prostration, Headache, General Debility quickly yields to it.

Womb troubles, causing pain, weight, and backache, instantly relieved and permanently cured by its use. Under all circumstances it acts in harmony with the laws that govern the female system, and is as harmless as water.

It quickly removes that Bearing-down Feeling, extreme lassitude, "don't care" and "want-to-be-left-alone" feeling, excitability, irritability, nervousness, Dizziness, Faintness, sleeplessness, flatulency, melancholy or the "blues" and backache. These are sure indications of Female Weakness, or some derangement of the Uterus, which this medicine always cures.

Kidney Complaints and Backache of either sex the Vegetable Compound always cures.

No other female medicine in the world has received such widespread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine has such a record of cures of female troubles.

Those women who refuse to accept anything else are rewarded a hundred thousand times, for they get what they want—a cure. Sold by Druggists everywhere. Refuse all substitutes.

But while we trust in God's mercy we should try and do our part. Avoid sin in the first place, and if we do sin, then let our repentance be sincere and lasting. I do not ask too much from the Almighty's merciful forgiveness.

But, dear me, whither am I drifting? I was saying something about Christmas, when these thoughts came into my mind. Well, never mind, they are appropriate to this season. There is something about Xmas, it always seems to me, that appeals to our better nature. I have spent Xmas on the mountain top and on the level plain, on the broad ocean in the tropics and on the verge of the Antarctic sea, in the busy city and quiet country, and in every case Christmas time had a distinctive mark upon it different from any other period of the year. Ah, me!

Brightened by its ruddy glow.

Longer here they could not stay
They are all dispersed and wandered

PUBLIC MEETING

To the voters of Chilton county who are in favor of all white men voting.

You are hereby requested to meet in Clanton, Friday, Dec. 27, 1901, at 11 a.m.

There are some important features of the new constitution that all men who wish to vote in future should understand, and after February 1, 1902, it will be too late. So come one, come all, and let us take such steps as will secure the peace.

[illegible]

On the 9th of January the legislature will be charge assembly of the citizens of Clanton county, Ala. The object of this assembly is to urge those over 21 years of age and under 45 years of age to pay their poll tax during the month of January next, in order to enable them to be qualified under the new constitution to register. Unless this poll tax is paid in January by those over 21 and under 45 years of age they cannot register, consequently they cannot vote.

The Times regards this as a wise movement and thinks every county in the State should take similar action.

While the citizens of Chilton county are assembled it would be well for them to take action defining their political status for the future as the Populist party has ceased to exist and that only two great national parties are in existence and we are persuaded to believe that the former Populists in Chilton county are like they are in a number of other counties, and will renounce their allegiance to any party that has the odor of Democracy attached to it.—Birmingham Times.

HOME FROM THE PHILIPPINES

Private Crayton Ellison, a Chilton county boy, who enlisted in the 22d Infantry of the regular army rather more than three years ago, and who has spent two years and eight months of that time in the Philippines, returned home a few days or two ago looking well and hearty. He left Manila on October 15, arrived at San Francisco [illegible] he was delighted to be [illegible] Chilton a few days [illegible]

[illegible] of the Philippines and [illegible] country, he thinks the Filipinos [illegible] kind of people, but he will take several years to thoroughly pacify the country.

He had a good opportunity to see a great deal of the country, it is nearly all the time he was stationed at San Fadore, one hundred miles north of Manila. He was in seven engagements and escaped unhurt.

Mr. Ellison likes the service and intends re-enlisting [illegible] Army. And we [illegible] wish him success in the army and return to the Philippines.

The biggest little "thing" and one of the most useful any man could get at Christmas present is a bottle of E. W. Grove's Antiseptic. A cure for all forms of cuts, bruises, sores, throat, inflamed eyes, stings of insects, poison oak, etc. Used externally, it gives quick relief in cases of colic and derangement of stomach or bowels. For sale by druggists and positively guaranteed.

In Alabama—where a little more than 14 per cent. of the adult male whites of American parentage are reported as illiterate, where 59.5 per cent. of the male negroes of voting age are illiterate,—it is declared that the new constitution was adopted by popular vote of November 11; and under the operation of the clauses relating to the franchise this entire mass of negro illiteracy will be at once excluded from the voting privilege. Most of the white illiterates will probably be able, under exception clauses, to place their names on the registration books. But after a limited period the system will work with practical equality, and every man of whatever race who knows enough to be morally entitled to exercise political privileges will be allowed to register and vote. These Southern franchise systems, viewed as to their main features, rather than narrowly in their minor details, bid fair to be of advantage to both races. They supply the most powerful incentive to education and personal improvements. They create at once a bond and sympathy between the enfranchised and the disfranchised but they do not erect an arbitrary or difficult barrier. An object lesson in the disadvantages of illiteracy will be constantly before the eyes of the rising generation of both races. The children of native born Americans will be impelled to follow the example of the American born children of foreign parents and acquire the rudiments of an ordinary education.—From the Progress of the World in the American Monthly Review of Reviews, for December.

When you meet a man with a scheme, proceed to get in a hurry.

Texas is going into the sugar-producing industry on an extensive scale.
In addition to her present sugar-cane growing interests, which are operated under the state penitentiary system, arrangements are being made to place about 5000 additional acres in cultivation. About two years ago a farm embracing 5000 acres was purchased by the state on which penitentiary convicts were to be worked. This farm is situated in Brazoria county in the richest sugar cane belt of Texas.
Owing to the lack of a sugar mill, but little of the new farm was placed under cultivation. But within a year it is hoped to have a sugar mill in operation, and to pay its $175,000 cost out of the proceeds of the farm's crops in the following two years.

Instances of unbounded faith in the efficacy of queer treatment of diseases do not seem to fall off in number or in oddity. One western man says he was a martyr to the most agonizing form of chronic dyspepsia until he began the practice of taking a small quantity of fine, dry sand into his stomach every day. He insists that he is now completely cured of his malady. But many persons will be inclined to regard the swallowing of sand daily as almost as severe an affliction as dyspepsia. In Colorado a former citizen of New York City asserts that by going almost constantly bareheaded he has relieved himself of chronic catarrh of the worst type, while a clergyman in West Virginia declares that by eating no solid food for 40 days he has conquered entirely the besetting rheumatism which had tormented him for a dozen years.
These are interesting cases. How would it do for some adventurous experimenter to try all three systems of treatment on himself at once—to go bareheaded all the time, to swallow sand every 24 hours, and to fast from other food for 40 days? What would the autopsy reveal? A constitutional disability to tell the truth? queries the New York Tribune.

GENERAL MILES REPRIMANDED AND McCLAY ASKED TO RESIGN

SECY. LONG APPROVES COURT'S FINDINGS.

Admiral Sampson Files his Objections—What Gen. Miles Said and What He Meant—Sec'y. Root's Reprimand—President Roosevelt's Position.

Judge Advocate Lemly and Solicitor Hanna Friday submitted to Secretary Long their report upon the bill of objections filed by Admiral Schley to the findings of the court of inquiry. In substance the report is an argument supplementary to the argum ent made before the court of inquiry.

The principal points are an insistence upon their contention that the first report is the unanimous report of the court of inquiry; that the court was justified in rejecting Admiral Schley's testimony by the number of witnesses who took issue with him, and that there is not sufficient reason for a reopening of the case, as requested by Admiral Schley.

The report says:

"It was somewhat difficult to deal with Admiral Schley's bill of objections on account of its general and non-specific character and sweeping assertion of opinion by the applicant and his counsel that, in their judgment, the adverse finding of the court is not justified by the evidence. The paper might be dismissed as simply a not unexpected expression of dissatisfaction with an adverse judgment but for the fact that it contains a number of misstatements, and particularly has woven through its entire structure an 'inaccurate and misleading' use of the words 'majority of the court.'

"The findings of fact and the opinion of the court of inquiry in the case of Admiral Schley upon the more im-rtant and material points before it n not reached by a majority of the me rs only, but by the entire cour

The determination on the part of the administration absolutely to terminate further discussion of the Sampson-Schley controversy takes shape in the publication of correspondence between Secretary Root and Lieut-Gen. Miles, relative to the latter's interview, published in a Cincinnati paper commenting upon the Schley case. It is seldom that so severe a reprimand is administered to an officer of high rank. What the result will be cannot be foretold, although it is assumed that General Miles will submit without further comment.

That General Miles appreciates the situation, is shown by the concern he manifests and his frequent visits to the ffice of Secretary Root. It was necessary for him to write two letters to eet the demands of the department, d even then there was no expression sat on the secretary's part the explanation. However, creta t regards the incident as sed.

The gist the correspondence is:

"War Department.

"Sir: I nstructed by the presi-nt to c ur attention to the re-rt of a terview appearing in the sociated Press newspapers of December 17, and to inquire whether the servations upon the action of a co-dinate branch of the service in the atter now pending in the navy de-rtment were made as reported and to afford you such opportunity planation in writing as you may ir

G al Miles supplemented this lette ith a second:

"S —Referring to my note of yesterda and in order that there may be no n nderstanding, I desire to say that everal years a distinguished and ant officer has been assailed by p es who have endeavored to write m and other high officials down til finally he appealed against such saults. A court of inquiry unani usly exonerted him from such epithe as coward, poltroon, etc., and th r opinions were given to the public or information of all citizens. When said that I had no sympathy with t ose who had endeavored to destroy e reputation of a high officer, I had mind those assaults against which he admiral had appealed for protec on and justification, and certainly not to a co-ordinate branch of the g vernment.

"Lieutenant General."

T interview referred to was as foll rs. General Miles said:

" am willing to take the judgment of niral Dewey in the matter. He ha en a commander of a fleet and as au nas known the anxities and re-sp sibilities which rest on a man un-de these circumstances.

" think Dewey summed up the ma er in a clear and concise manner an I believe his conclusions will be en orsed by the patriotic people of th United States. I have no sympa-th with the efforts which have been made to destroy the honor of an officer under s ich circumstances."

The reprimand is contained in a letter of Secretary Root to General Miles.

"Sir—By direction of the president, I communicate to you his conclusions upon your course in the interview to which your attention was called by my letter on the 19th inst.

"Your explanation of the public statement, made by you, is not satisfactory. You are in error if you suppose that you have the same right as other citizens to express publicly an opinion regarding official questions pending in the course of military discipline. Your duty is to express your opinion on official matters when called upon by your official superiors, and not otherwise. The first article of the regulations governing the army of the United States, provides:

"'Deliberations or discussions among military men conveying praise or censure, or any mark of approbation, toward others in the military service, are prohibited.'

"In this controversy the army has not been involved. A court of inquiry has been held on the matters in controversy and a report had been made in which one member of the court had dissented in some particulars from the majority, and the report was pending before the reviewing authority. At this point, you, the lieutenant-general of the army, saw fit to make public your opinion, accompanied by a criticism of most severe character, which could not fail to be applied by the generality of readers to the naval officers against whose view your opinion was expressed. It is of no consequence on whose side your opinion was or what it was. You had no business in the controversy, and no right to express an opinion. Your conduct was in violation of the regulations above cited and the rules of official propriety, and you are justly liable to censure, which I now express.

Very respectfully,

"ELIHU ROOT, Sec'y of War.

"P. S.—Your second letter of explanation does not change the case; there is no necessity for repeated explanations, but illustrates the importance of the rule which you have violated.

"ELIHU ROOT, Sec'y of War."

President Roosevelt gave General Miles a verbial reprimand at the White House. When the general called to see the president about certain statements he had made favorable to Schley he was ushered into the public waiting room and much to Miles' surprise the president joined him there and within the earshot of fifteen or twenty people censured him for the interview. General Miles tried to get the president to lower his voice, but Mr. Roosevelt warmed up and talked louder and faster. Mr. Roosevelt is opposed to further agitation in the Sampson-Schley wrangle, and "Historian" Maclay's resignation was called for by executive order. The fact that it was announced by the head of the War Department instead of the Navy Department, indicates the resignation does not meet the approval of Secretary Long.

The fact that simultaneously with the publication of the Miles correspondence Secretary Root gave out a copy of Secretary Long's letter directing that Maclay's resignation be requested, is taken as an indication of the president's purpose to clear the official records of all pending issues in that matter.

The following order was made public by Secretary of War Root:

"Rear Admiral A. S. Barker, Commandant Navy Yard, New York: Sir—I am directed by the president to ask Edgar S. Maclay, special laborer, general storekeeper office navy yard, New York, to send in his resignation. Very respectfully,

"John D. Long, Sec."

Maclay is author of a history of the navy, and his criticism of Admiral Schley's conduct at the naval battle off Santiago, brought about the court of inquiry.

DESPERATE FIGHT.

During a bloody battle at Russellville, Thursday, between City Marshal Ben Barrett and Deputy Sheriff Hargett on one side, and Tom and Henry Williams on the other, one man was killed and two probably fatally injured. Henry Williams was indicted several years ago for stealing cattle, but escaped to the Indian Territory. Getting into trouble there, he returned. He was seen to enter McClurg's drug store, while his brother stood guard. Hargett approached Henry to arrest him and was assaulted, Williams was in the act of shooting when Barrett fired, killing the desperado instantly. Barrett then shot Tom in the arm and chest. The wounded man changed his revolver to his left hand, and, firing as he ran, escaped. At William's first shot McClurg fell. His wound is thought to be fatal. He is is a brother-in-law of the Williams'.

THE MAN, UNCLE DAN.

There once was a man—
His name was Uncle Dan—
Who thought he'd run away, so he ran and he ran.
Until the place came by
Where the road it meets the sky.
Then Uncle Dan he lost his way—tell why he never can.

So he turned and ran back
Crying all the while "Quack!
Quack!"
Until the duck and ducklings of the farms along the way
Came running, quacking too,
And they made so much ado
That Uncle Dan he lost his head—just where he couldn't say.

Then he just ran round and round
(And he never made a sound!)
Until those ducks and ducklings were so scared they just said "Now!"
Then they ran away so fast—
Quacking loud from first to last—
That Uncle Dan he lost himself—and never could tell how.

AN HONEST MONKEY MESSENGER.

Of the countless numbers of cases of monkeys' cleverness, there is still none to beat the record held by a spider monkey that belonged, many years ago, to the Governor of Carthagena, in South America. One of its duties was to fetch and carry the wine for its master. A pot being placed in one hand and money in the other, away went the monkey to the tavern down the town. Here it presented the pot, but would not part with the coin till the pot was handed back filled with wine. On the return journey it carried the pot with a care that many a human porter might envy, but could not equal. If the boys, as boys sometimes will, took to throwing stones at it, the pot was put down on the ground, and the monkey, also boyish and especially boy-messenger-like, began to throw stones at them. Although, sad to say, fond of wine, not a drop would he touch until leave was granted. It is refreshing to read of such fidelity and honesty, although only a monkey.

THE PIGEONS' PRECAUTION.

A gentleman had two pairs of pigeons living in dovecotes placed side by side. In each pigeon family there was a father and a mother bird and two little ones. On a certain day the parents in one dovecote went away to get food, and while they were gone one of their little bids fell out of the dovecote and down to the ground. The poor baby bird was not much hurt, strange to say, but it could not get back, for it was too young to fly.

Now the parents of the other dovecote were at home when this happened, and it seemed as if they said to themselves. "One of our babies might fall out in just that way. We must do something to make the dovecote safer." And then this wise careful father and mother went to work. They flew about until they found some small sticks. These they carried to their own dovecote and there in the doorway they built a cunning little fence of sticks. Not so high but that the little pigeons could look over it, but high enough to keep them from ever falling out of the dovecote, as their little neighbor had done. The owner of the pigeons, who had seen the birdling fall and had put it back into its dovecote, watched the birds the whole time while they gathered the sticks and built the fence across the doorway.

QUEER WAYS OF MINK AND MARTEN.

"The Hudson Bay marten, the little furbearer whose skin is ever popular and at times exceedingly valuable, is still plentiful in that region of fur bearers," said W. B. Salmon, one time a trapper for the Hudson Bay Company, "but I believe it would have been virtually extinct there long ago if it were not for a habit it has of making periodical disappearances, of which I never heard any satisfactory explanation

"These disappearances occur every ten years. Where the animals go no one knows. No dead ones are ever found, and no one has yet discovered any evidence of their migration to any other region. A few martens, of course, remain on their old feeding grounds, but during the season of the disappearance of their fellows none of them will touch the bait in a trap, and, consequently, none are caught. The next year the martens are back again in their old haunts, as numerous as ever, and for ten years more subsult to being caught.

"The Hudson Bay martens seem to be the only ones of the species that have this strange habit. The Lake Superior martens don't waste any of their time in disappearing voluntarily, but are found at the old stand year in and year out, housing themselves in hollow trees in the deepest woods and making life a perpetual burden to birds, squirrels, rabbits and other small game on which they prey.

"The Lake Superior marten has one predilection of the palate in which he resembles the bear. That is a passion for honey. He will line a wild bee to its home with the precision of the most expert bee hunter, and the hidden sweets of that bee colony will have to be in a most inaccessible place if the marten doesn't soon revel in them. Like the male mink, the male marten has an overpowering love, not only for his own offspring, but for the offspring for his fellow martens—such peculiar love, indeed, that if it wasn't for the instinct and shrewdness of the mother martens the race of martens would have been unknown long ago. The male marten is so fond of his young that he will eat them up wherever he happens to find them. The mother, therefore, bears her young in some secret hiding place, and keeps them hidden until they are half grown and able to defy the cannibalistic love of their sire. The female mink exercises the same instinct with her progeny, for the father of them, as fond as he is of trout and other fish, will leave his fishing any time to dine on his interesting little family."—Boston Transcript.

THEIR WINTER HOME.

Mrs. Whitehead Sparrow and Mrs. Topknot were holding an earnest discussion.

"It is certainly getting to be colder. And I am afraid of the snow and the severe weather, which I hear always comes in the season called winter."

"How did you hear anything about it?" asked Mrs. Topknot curiously.

"Oh, I heard all about it from the parrot who hung in the cherry tree summer," Mrs. Whitehead replied.

"He said it was cold enough to freeze your feathers. But then, of course, that may depend upon the [illegible] His were very gaudy.

Mr. and Mrs. Whitehead picked many spots which they thought might do for a winter home, where they could shelter from the cold, which they feared. The leaves were turning red, and dropping in dens from the trees. They were sheltered places, here and there, under limb, or behind a loose piece of bark. But these would not be much protection when a high wind blew, or in driving snow storm, and although the little sparrows did not know much about cold weather, yet their instinct made them look about for a comfortable home.

One day Mrs. Whitehead thought she had found the very thing. A deserted car stood on the railroad track, and she crept in through a little broken window in the roof. What fine places for a home. Up in the corner or behind the seats, she twittered with delight to Mr. Whitehead. "The most splendid place he could possibly invent," she cried. "So dry and warm."

"Don't you think this [illegible] one of the big machines they pull [illegible] and [illegible] ery day?" asked Mr. Whitehead in a doubtful way.

"Not at all! Not at [illegible]" cried Mrs. Whitehead exultantly. "It has been here for days and days. Very likely they left it on purpose for our accommodation."

"All right, my dear. [illegible] it suits [illegible] I know I shall like it. I'll move to-morrow."

But when to-morrow came a crisis, disappointment came to Mrs. Whitehead. Two pairs of noisy and quarrelsome sparrows, who had been the neighbors for a long time, had turned into these fine quarters first, and when Mrs. Whitehead flew into the car ready to settle herself comfortably she found the two quarrelsome families, making themselves very much at home in the two best places, the car. There were other places, course, but she had been glad enough to get away from these chattering people, and she certainly did not want to live with them all winter.

"Never mind," Mr. Whitehead said, soothingly. "I have found a beautiful place under the roof of the woodshed. It is behind a post and you will find it sheltered and comfortable."

Mrs. Whitehead was doubtful. She was sure nothing could be as charming as the car-home, which they had lost. But, after a while they went to live under the roof of the woodshed, and she grew to like it very much indeed. It was cozy and sunny, and the big post near their front door seemed to shut off nearly all the wind and storm.

And one day a queer thing happened. Mr. Whitehead, flying home, saw a number of men pulling the car into the shop to be mended up and caused again. Two chattering pairs of sparrows were flying round and round in dismay, watching their nice little home traveling away from them.

"How glad I am we did not go there," twittered Mrs. Whitehead, when he told her about it. "Just think, some one else might have moved into our woodshed, and then what would we have done?"

"Everything is for the best," said Mr. Whitehead, preparing to go to sleep with his head under his wing.—Youth's Companion.

Sensitive Canada.

An Englisman who wanted to earn the cordial dislike of Canada [illegible] only to refer to the Dominion as "Ou[illegible] Lady of the Snows," or something like that. People across the border are very touchy on the subject. The London Times recently offended by [illegible] king of the climatic conditions of Canada as such that emigrants from England "preferred to go to the temperate zones," meaning the United States. And even Mr. Gladstone had the impression that Canada was a land of perpetual snow. Just how the Canadians are down on Arthur Wing Pinero, who, in his new play, "Iris," refers to Canada as "that genteel Siberia," a phrase not calculated to earn more popularity than Kipling's peotic title. Captain Bernier and some other Canadians believe that the North Pole is properly a part of the Dominion, so that any degre of cold can be attributed to Canada. But at the same time it seems not to be appreciated, if indeed it is known, [illegible] glishmen, that the point [illegible] Canada lies below the [illegible] or below the southernmost [illegible] land. Montreal, Quebec [illegible] are five or six degrees [illegible] and are considerably [illegible] well.—Springfield Repub[illegible]

POPULAR SCIENCE

Plants with white blossoms have a larger proportion of fragrant species than any others; next comes red, then yellow and blue, after which, and in the same order, may be reckoned violet, green, orange, brown and black.

Diphtheria germs survive at least fifteen years. This has been proved by two cases of diphtheria in children who could have contracted the disease in no way except through playing with toys that had been stored fifteen years in an old trunk.

M. Berthelot, the French chemist, has been trying to find what is the smallest weight of an odorous substance that can excite the nerves of smell in a human being. By repeated dilutions he found that even such an unimaginable quantity as three-eighths of a millionth of a grain of iodoform would produce the characteristic smell, and musk was many times stronger still.

The larvae of flies, bees, beetles and other insects have been placed in the wooden half of a box having one section of lead and the other of wood, and on exposure to Rontgen rays they have been greatly excited, invariably retreating to the leaden part of the box. With blind larvae the results were the same, showing that the exciting rays were perceived through the nerves of the skin.

The human body, it has been found, is shorter at night than in the morning, due to the weight of the body compressing the intervertebral cartilages. During sleep, or while in a recumbent position, the pressure being removed, their natural elasticity enables them to resume their normal size, consequently the height of an individual will vary from three-eighths to half an inch between morning and night.

The skunk first appears in history in the year 1636, when he was described in Theodat's History of Canada. He had been a long time on the earth before that time, however, for there are species of fossil skunks. The skunks of the genus Chinca range over the greater portion of North America and as far south as Mexico. Other skunks are found in Central and South America. They live in [illegible] either of other animals, or [illegible] themselves. Their habits are nocturnal, and they hibernate. The severest part of winter [illegible] food consists of small animals, insects and birds' eggs. They are eaten by hundreds of thousands, and have been trapped for their fur for many years. The young are born in litters of four to ten. The adults occasionally rob the poultry yard, but such depredations as they [illegible] are more than offset by their destruction of noxious animals and insects, especially the white grub, of lawns and meadows. They are easily trapped in box traps, and [illegible] killed by putting them, trap and [illegible] in a trough of water.

M. Tarde, noted for his suggestive and [illegible] the "Psychology of Crowds." He has now issued a new volume (not yet translated from the French, it is believed) under the title, "L'Opinion et la Foule." All these matters are fit [illegible] for a strictly scientific treatment, which, in fact, they receive. In [illegible] the seventeenth century there was only [illegible] a library public, in the eighteenth [illegible] philosophic public rose. Journalism [illegible] came in with the revolution. Public [illegible] opinion in olden times was formed [illegible] by conversation; with the advent [illegible] of the press a new factor was introduced. The journal acts on the individual, and the public reacts on the journal. In the last analysis the public has the press it deserves.

The Social Rank of Cabinet Officers.

The social rank of each Cabinet officer is reckoned according to his standing in the order of succession to the Presidency, which is arranged according to the age of each executive department. The State Department being been the first executive branch of the Government created, the Secretary of State is the official and social head of the Cabinet and the first of the members to succeed to the Presidency, in the event of the death of both President and Vice-President. If the President, Vice-President and Secretary of State were all to die before their successors had been appointed the Secretary of the Treasury would become President, because his is the second oldest of the executive departments. This right to succession extends in turn to the Secretary of War, Attorney-General, Postmaster-General, Secretary of the Navy, and lastly to the Secretary of the Interior. This gradation thus indicates the social rank of each Cabinet officer in his own circle.—Ladies' Home Journal.

An Unsuccessful Author's Diary.

Following is an extract from the journal of an author who has not been fortunate enough to write a successful novel:

"Rose at five and thought out the plot for a short story.

"At eight, I rang the breakfast bell, moved the chairs around the table and rattled the knives to fool the neighbors.

"Wrote two poems on the world as a great place to fast in; also, a short article to prove that appetite is a mere delusion.

"I then went to the postoffice to hear the clerk say there had been a wreck on the road, and my check for a late manuscript wouldn't arrive till after Christmas.

"The clerk observed that it was 'a beautiful day,' and I went out and dined sumptuously on the climate."—Atlanta Constitution.

Pay Your Poll Tax

Do not for one moment listen to those who say the payment of the current poll tax is not required at the hands of voters. It is a tax that is now due and that will continue to be due until it is paid, and the new constitution says all poll taxes due from a citizen must be paid by February 1 in order to enable that citizen to vote this year. The savant who says otherwise is misleading the citizen into a loss of his dearest political privilege. He is innocently perhaps disfranchising him.

The citizen who will not contribute one dollar and a half towards the support of the public schools in order to retain the right to vote is a pretty poor citizen. He is a very poor citizen. He need not plead after February 1 that he "forgot" to save his electoral rights, for all know what the condition for voting now is. The new situation has been explained to all, and the man who does not pay his poll tax before February 1 simply does not care what may happen to State, county or city. Good or bad government is alike a matter of indifference to him.

The payment of a poll tax after February 1 will be useful in year to come, but in 1902 such a payment will not restore lost civic rights. Throughout that entire year the citizen who does not pay poll taxes before February 1 loses the right to vote at the polls or in the primaries. He is as much deprived of political rights as the man in stripes at the coal mines. His deprivation can be removed by subsequent payments, but no power on earth can restore to him the voting privilege in the year 1902. This should be well understood, and well remembered. The poll tax now due from every male citizen under 45 years of age is an absolute condition precedent, and none of the tricks of the past can set it aside. —Age-Herald.

Making Our Farms Pay.

The best way to make southern agriculture more prosperous is not to merely discuss the idea of diversification, but to put that system into practice and in a systematic manner. Every man in order to attain to that standard of prosperity which we, as workers with, or subject to the laws of nature, must satisfy, must be a citizen of his country, his fellowmen, with the duties considered and with the demands of his country. These things well nothing to hinder if adhered to, there is natural consequence prosperity as a consequence.

When we speak of diversification of crops, we mean that of diversification of all that is needed. But first united, organized effort. The South is in united effort. The people, because A due consideration of what is going to be in demand and a united effort to be ready to supply that demand should be made.

Every southern farmer should consider well the field he is in and see that it is utilization of his available implements for the best results should be done. Suitable village to get A home market in the village to be obtained, factuning establishment may of manufacture farm products into manufactured for consumption, thus combining the interests of producer and manufacturer, and dispensing with the impositions of capitalists with the immense benefit to a community that can all be supplied by home. This effort on the part of southern farmers.

As to mistakes and weak points to avoid, the farmers are many. Some farmers have been in the habit of opening up too much farm land. I know of many large, old, run down farms that are worthless, which had the land on them was put to cultivation if they had then stopped clearing up land and devoted to fertilizing the farm instead of clearing more, there would not be hundreds of acres of rich land with valuable timber, instead of old worn-out fields. Next spring do not undertake too large a crop so that the crop pushes all the farmer instead of the farmer pushing the crop. John Rush, Randolph Co., Ala. Farm and home.

The people who grumble the most at this world kick the hardest when they get a chance to move on the next.

The proprietors of Mexican Mustang Liniment have issued an almanac for 1902, especially adapted for the South, called "The Cotton States almanac." The calculations are all made for this State only, and consequently are much more reliable than any general almanac can be. It is deservedly more sought after than the old style almanacs, like Poor Richard's and others, whose calculations are supposed to cover several States and sometimes the whole country.

The Garden Remarks have been prepared by the most experienced agricultural experts in the State and are up to date. The weather predictions are based not upon mere guesswork but upon the Signal Reports from the station at Montgomery. The Almanac also contains a court calendar for every circuit in the State, the names of Judges and the time for holding court. Altogether, it contains so much of interest to residents of this State that we advise everyone to look it over carefully.

The [illegible] to publish an Afro-American almanac for the negroes. Both Almanacs can be had free at the drug stores and of general dealers. Be sure and secure one before the supply is exhausted.

A WORTHY SUCCESSOR

"Something New Under The Sun."

All Doctors have tried to cure CATARRH by the use of powders, and gases, inhalers and douches in paste form. Their powders dry up the mucous membranes causing them to crack open and bleed. The powerful acids used in the inhalers have entirely eaten away the same in many cases that their makers have aimed to cure, while pastes and ointments cannot reach the disease. An old and experienced practitioner who has for many years made a close study and specialty of the treatment of CATARRH, has at last perfected a Treatment which when faithfully used, not only relieves at once, but permanently cures CATARRH, by removing the cause, stopping the discharges, and curing all inflammation. It is the only remedy known to science that actually reaches the afflicted parts. This wonderful remedy is known as "SNUFFLES" the GUARANTEED CATARRH CURE and is sold at the extremely low price of One Dollar, each package containing internal and external medicine sufficient for a full month's treatment and everything necessary to its perfect use.

"SNUFFLES" is the only perfect CATARRH CURE ever made and is now recognized as the only safe and positive cure for that annoying and disgusting disease. It cures all inflammation quickly and permanently and is also wonderfully quick to relieve HAY FEVER or COLD in the HEAD.

CATARRH when neglected often leads to CONSUMPTION—"SNUFFLES" will save you if you use it at once. It is no ordinary remedy, but a complete treatment which is positively guaranteed to cure CATARRH in any form or stage if used according to the directions which accompany each package. Don't delay but send for it at once, and write full particulars as to your condition, and you will receive special advice from the discoverer of this wonderful remedy regarding your case without cost to you beyond the regular price of "SNUFFLES" the "GUARANTEED CATARRH CURE."

by our new invention. Only those born deaf are incurable.

HEAD NOISES CEASE IMMEDIATELY.

F. A. WERNAN, OF BALTIMORE, SAYS:

BALTIMORE, Md., March 30, 1901.

Gentlemen:—Being entirely cured of deafness, thanks to your treatment, I will now give you a full history of my case, to be used at your direction.

About five years ago my right ear began to ring, and this kept on getting worse, until I lost my hearing in this ear entirely.

I underwent a treatment for catarrh, for three months, without any success, consulted a number of physicians, among others, the most eminent ear specialist of this city, who told me that only an operation could help me, and even that only temporarily, that the headnoises would then cease, but the hearing in the affected ear would be lost forever.

I then saw your advertisement, accidentally in a New York paper, and ordered your treatment. After I had used it only a few days according to your directions, the noises ceased, and to-day, after five weeks, my hearing in the diseased ear has been entirely restored. I thank you heartily and beg to remain. Very truly yours,

F. A. WERNAN, 730 S. Broadway, Baltimore, Md.

THE HOME GOLD CURE.

An Ingenious Treatment by which Drunkards are Being Cured Daily in Spite of Themselves.

No Nauseous Doses, No Weakening of the Nerves. A Pleasant and Positive Cure for the Liquor Habit.

It is now generally known and understood that drunkenness is a disease and not weakness. A body filled with poison, and nerves completely shattered by periodical or constant use of intoxicating liquors, requires an antidote capable of neutralizing and eradicating this poison, and destroying the craving for intoxicants. Sufferers may now cure themselves at home without publicity or loss of time from business by this wonderful "HOME GOLD CURE" which has been perfected after many years of close study and treatment of inebriates. The faithful use according to directions of this wonderful discovery is positively guaranteed to cure the most obstinate case, no matter how hard a drinker. Our records show the marvelous transformation of thousands of Drunkards into sober, industrious and upright men.

WIVES CURE YOUR HUSBANDS!! CHILDREN CURE YOUR FATHERS!! this remedy is in no sense a nostrum but is a specific for this disease only, and is so skillfully devised and prepared that it is thoroughly soluble and pleasant to the taste, so that it can be given in a cup of tea or coffee without the knowledge of the person taking it. Thousands of Drunkards have cured themselves with this priceless remedy, and as many more have been cured and made temperate men by having the "CURE" administered by loving friends and relatives without their knowledge in coffee or tea, and believe today that they discontinued drinking of their own free will. DO NOT WAIT. Do not be deluded by apparent and misleading "improvement." Drive out the disease at once and for all time. The "HOME GOLD CURE" is sold at the extremely low price of One Dollar, thus placing within reach of every body a treatment as effectual than others costing $25 and $50. Full directions accompany each package. Special advice by skilled physicians when requested without extra charge. Sent prepaid to any part of the world on receipt of One Dollar. Address Dept. C 955, EDWIN B. GILES & COMPANY, 2530 and 2532 Market Street, Philadelphia.

...ce was the greatest man, because ...had the greatest calling and filled ...as no other man has done, and she ...notes that verse from Daniel which ...says, "They who have called many to ...righteousness shall shine as the stars ...forever and forever." My wife grew up under his matchless preaching, and is a pretty good Methodist yet. This reminds me of a delightful sketch I find in the proceedings of the last Georgia Bar Association held at Warm Springs in July. The subject is "The Georgia Lawyer" viewed by a woman. The woman is Mrs. J. Render Terrell, of Greenville. The papers generally read at these annual meetings are dry and prosy to everybody save the lawyers, but this paper is charming, entertaining and instructive from beginning to end. The first sentence attracted me, and I kept on to the last and my feeling at it close was—well, that woman is a trump, she is a historian, a philosopher and a first-rate lawyer, even though she be a woman. I read it aloud to my female family. She closes with a poetic apostrophe to the Georgia lawyer which many an unfortunate defendant will appreciate:

"The parson points the way to heaven,
And then with tender care
The doctor consummates the work
And sends the patient there.

"But the Georgia lawyer would delay
Departure with such cries:
Hold! Can this man read his title clear
To mansions in the skies?"

"In doubt he files a brief and seeks
To hold the ignoramus
And stops his flight to heavenly bliss
By injunction or mandamus."

And so, while looking around for the greatest man, we might well pause and hear what Mrs. Terrell says about John Forsyth. She says: "Forsyth was a champion for the establishment of our supreme court, and earnestly advised it in his message in 1828." He said: "It is an awful reflection that life, liberty and reputation are dependent upon the decision of a single judge uncontrolled and uncontrollable in his circuit." Then she continues, "Forsyth's matchless oratory and the purity of his private and political life won for him a name that will be honored and revered always. While in the United States senate he had no superior as an orator, and was called the equal of Lord Erskine.' If I had a paper of my own I would publish every line of Mrs. Terrell's delightful paper. And the first Sunday I would publish the part written by J. H. Merrill, of Thomasville, on "The Bible in the Lawyer's Library." Why, this paper ought to be read by students, not only by the lawyers, but by every preacher in the land. It is fit for a text-book in the colleges, and is so interspersed with gems of good wit and humor that one does not get the sense. And there is an admirable paper on the same line by Warner Hill, entitled "Historic Landmarks of the Law," and he, too, diligently perused not only the Bible but the Apocrypha. His story as to how Daniel made his reputation as a lawyer will be new to most readers. I wish I had space to make mention of all the good things in this little volume. For, as there were giants in the days that are gone, even so we have great men and great women among us now. Here we have learned sketches by such men as J. C. C. Black, Reuben Arnold, Roland Ellis, C. A. Turner, W. L. Scruggs, L. Q. C. Lamar, Sylvanus Morris, Wimbish, Parsons, Charlton Bryan, and last, but not least, a good lot of side-bar talk by the venerable Justice Bleckley, who closed the exercises by proposing to elect the association with $100,000, and was ready to give his note for that amount. If I live and can travel, I will attend the next meeting, and hope Mrs. Terrell will be there and read another paper—sometimes the description is the better part of the feast.—Frank Arp, in Atlanta Constitution.

Irrigation in Arizona has been the subject of an investigation conducted by the Government, the results of which are now available. Within ten years 54[illegible] miles of canals and ditches were constructed at a cost of $1,508,469. The total increase in irrigated land in ten years has been 119,575 acres. At a low estimate its present average value is $30 per acre, or $3,587,250. Irrigation has added this large amount to the farm wealth of the Territory. The total number of acres of irrigated crops is 37,233, while the total number of acres of land irrigated is 185,396. The difference of 48,163 acres represents approximately the area of past irrigated.

The consternation of the English over the American invasion increases day by day. Some effort has been made to stem the tide by the imitation of American products, but so far it has failed of success. For example an Englishman attempted to imitate an American daylight bank robber. He entered the most promising bank house, revolver in hand, and called on the clerks to hold up the money. He shot the cashier dead, but was tackled by a clerk he turned his revolver on himself and checked for gallows. The idea was bold, but because he lacked American skill the imitator failed, as most imitators engage. The Germans have been no more successful with their imitations of American sewing machines, but for the ... and some other articles.

REV. DR. TALMAGE.

HIS SERMON BY THE EMINENT DIVINE LAST SUNDAY.

Subject: The Merciful Interpretation of Human Behavior—Follow the Divine Leading—We Will Not Pass This Way Again, So Do Your Good Now.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—This discourse is a most unusual presentation of things that take place in many lives, and Dr. Talmage pleads for merciful interpretation of human behavior. The text is Joshua iii, 4, "Ye have not passed this way heretofore."

In December, 1889, I waded the River Jordan, and, although the current was strong, I was able to bear up against it, but in the time of spring freshet, when the snows on Mount Lebanon melt, nothing but a miracle would enable any one to cross this river. It was at the dangerous springtime that Joshua and the officers of his army uttered the words of my text to the people who were in a few hours to cross the Jordan. About that crossing we say but little, because on a previous occasion we discoursed concerning that piling up of the waters into crystal barricade. We only speak of the march to the brink of the river. No stranger thing has ever occurred in all history.

The ark of the covenant was a brilliant chest of acacia wood, overlaid with gold, [illegible] which were two winged [illegible] to each other. It was five feet [illegible] feet wide. Poles were [illegible] the rings at the side, and [illegible] the ark was lifted. This [illegible] was to be carried three-[illegible] mile ahead of the hosts of [illegible] way to the crossing. That [illegible] the box and the advance [illegible] must be kept because of [illegible] was a sanctity in that [illegible] they must observe by [illegible] arters of a mile away. [illegible] that glittering box and [illegible] see they would lose their [illegible] arrive at the right place for [illegible]. They had never been there before, and they must be guided. For that reason Joshua utters the words of my text, "Ye have not passed this way heretofore." And the subordinate officers at the head of the regiments repeated it, "Ye have not passed this way heretofore."

What was truthfully said of the ancient Israelites may be truthfully said of us. We are making our first and last journey through this world. It is possible, as some of my good friends believe, that this world will be corrected and improved and purified and floralized and emparadised as to climate and soil and character until it shall become a heaven for the ransomed, but I do not think it. I have an idea that heaven is already built somewhere. Our departed friends could not wait until this world is finished up for saintly and angelic residence. Having once gone out of the world, I do not think we will come back, but as ministering spirits to help those who remain in the earthly struggle or perhaps to look on the wondrous spectacle of the shining planet.

But, leaving that theory aside, we are sure that we are for the first time doing the earthly pilgrimage. "Ye have not passed this way before." Every minute is a new minute, every hour a new hour, every century a new century. Other folks have gone over the same road we are traveling, but it is our first trip. New appearances, new temptations, new sorrows, new joys. That is the reason so many lose their way. They meet some one on the road of life and ask for direction, and a wrong direction is given. We have all been perplexed by misdirection after asking the way to some place we wished to visit. Some one said to us, "Take the first road to the right and, having gone a mile on that road, take the first road on the left, and you will soon reach your destination." We took the advice, but our informer forgot a turn in the road or forgot one of roads leading to the left, and we took the wrong road and were lost in the woods. The night came on, and we were put to great irritation and trouble.

This is, I blame no one for making mistakes. I pity them instead of blaming them. There are so many wrong roads and only one right one. You cannot be perfectly different from youth. You cannot tire of the age draw upon midlife experiences, for the two stages of existence are so different. What is wisdom for one man to do would be folly for another to undertake. A man of nerve and nluck is not qualified to advise a man timid and shrinking. An achievement that would be easy for you might be impossible for me. Human advice is ordinarily of little value. People revise their own successes or failures and then tell us what is best for us to do, not realizing that our circumstances are different, our temperament is different, our physical and mental and moral capacities different. Most of the great mistakes that have been made have been made under human advisement.

So, too, it may be said to every nation, "Ye have not passed this way before." Our own republic is going through novel experiences. Could wisest statesman twenty years ago have prophesied present conditions? Every President, every Congress, has new crises to meet and new questions to settle. So prophecies made about conditions in this country fifty years from now may turn out as far untrue as the prophecies made fifty years ago by the greatest of American statesmen when he declared on yonder Capitol hill that it was unwise to think of civilization on prosperity the other side of the Rocky Mountains, and according to his belief the Pacific coast would be the perpetual abode of barbarians and mountain lions, and we must not think of annexing those forbidding regions.

Many prophecies in regard to our nation fail, and many prophecies concerning its future will fail, because it is traveling a new road. Every step it takes on that road is a novelty. The opinion of a Monroe or a Jefferson in the far past is not of as much value as the opinion of our wisest men now. How could men know in 1823 what it would be best for this nation to do in 1901? It is belittling as well as unwise for our statesmen, who are quite equal to the statesmen of the past and who have, in addition to the natural talents of their predecessors, attainments in knowledge that were impossible in any decade, but their own, to depend on advice of men who have been dead three-quarters of a century. In all other things the world has advanced. Can it be that in statesmanship it has gone back, and that this opening of the twentieth century must consult the opening of the nineteenth century? "Ye have not passed this way before."

Yea, our entire world is on a new pathway. It may be swinging in the same old orbit as when by the hand of the Almighty immensity was sprinkled with worlds, but it has been rocked with earthquakes and scorched with volcanic fires and whelmed with tidal waves and wrought upon by climatic changes—cities sunk, and islands lifted, and mountains avalanched into valleys.

So it is another world than that which first started in the solar system. Yet all the time changing and will keep changing until the hour of its demolition. This beautiful world, this lustrous and this glorious world, it may be said, "have not passed this way before."

But what is the practical use of this subject? Instead of putting so much stress on human advice and instead of asking what is past what we ought to do, follow the line leading as the men of Joshua followed the golden lidded chest of acacia, which was the symbol of the divine presence.

Three-quarters of a mile distance between the ark or sacred box and the front column of Joshua's troops mightily impresses me. It was a forceful way of teaching reverence for the Almighty. They needed to learn that lesson of reverence, as we all need to learn it. Irreverence has cursed all nations, and none more than our own. Irreverence in the use of God's name. Hear you it not on the streets and in social groups, and is not a profane word sometimes thought necessary to point jocosity? Irreverence for the Scriptures, the phraseology of the Bible often introduced into the most frivolous conversation and made mirth provoking. Irreverence for the oath in courtroom or custom house or legislative hall by the conventional and mechanical mode of its administration. Irreverence for the holy Sabbath by the way it is broken in pleasure excursion and carousal. Irreverence on the part of children for their parents, insolence being substituted for obedience. Irreverence for rulers, which induces vile cartoons and assassination. Irreverence in church during prayer, measuring off song and sermon by cold, artistic or literary criticism, and in prayer time neither bowing the head nor bending the knee nor standing as one does in the presence of earthly ruler, thus showing more respect for a man than to the King of kings. We ask not for genuflexions or circumflexions or prostrations, but when prayer is offered let us either bow the head or bend the knee or let us in some way prove that we are not indifferent.

No one has come to midlife who has not been stung of ingratitude. On the battlefield of Alma in 1854 a wounded Russian was crying in anguish of thirst for water. Captain Eddington, of the English Army, ran to him and gave him drink. As the captain was running by to join his regiment the wounded soldier shot him. Almost all languages have proverbs setting forth this perversity. English proverb, "Bring up a raven and it will pick out your eyes." Arabic proverb, "Eat the present and break the dish." Italian proverb, "The ass, after having drunk, gives a kick to the bucket." An old proverb says, "If God were to be so complacent as to carry us on His back to Rome, we would not thank Him for His pains if He did not also set us down in an easy chair." You will never be happy in this world if you do not do all the good you can and look for no responsive gratitude. All the damage I did a man who is my enemy was to take him from a position where he received $700 a year salary into a position where he has ever since received $2500 a year. He never forgave me, but has pursued me with pen vitriolic ever since. The worst enemy you ever had is the man you introduced and favored and helped. But be not disturbed or even irritated. You are no better than your Lord.

If the world had had any thankful appreciation of His coming it would have filled that Bethlehem caravansary with flowers, which bloom there clear on into the December month, and Herod, instead of attempting His death, would have sent a chariot to fetch the infant to the palace, and the over and terminer of Pilate's courtroom would have pronounced Him not guilty, and instead of a cross and a crown of thorns it would have been a coronation, with all the mighty ones of the earth kneeling at the foot of His throne.

But closely allied is the other fact which we hinted at in the opening—that we will not pass this way again. This is our only opportunity for doing certain things that ought to be done. On all sides there are griefs we ought to solace, hunger we ought to feed, cold that we ought to warm, kind words that we ought to speak, generous deeds we ought to perform. All that you and I do toward making this world better and happier we must do very soon or never do at all. Joshua and his troops never came back over the way they were marching toward the crossing of the Jordan. The impress of the sandal or the bare feet of each soldier showed in what direction he was going, but never did the impress of the sandal of any one of them show that he had returned. We are all facing eternity to come. There is no retreat. Alertness and fidelity would not be so important if we could truthfully say: "I will be back here again. The things I neglect now I will do the next time I come. I will be reincarnated, and I will resume my earthly obligations. Having then more knowledge than I have now, I will discharge my earthly duties better than I can now discharge them. I do not give solemn farewell to these obligations and opportunities, but a smiling and cheery good-bye until I see them again." No, we cannot say that. There will be no new and corrected edition of the volume of our earthly life. After we make exit from the stage at the close of the fifth act we cannot reenter.

How many millions of people have lived and died I know not, but of all the human race who have gone only seven persons that I now think of have returned, the son of the widow at Zarephath, the young man of Nain, the ruler's daughter, Tabitha, Eutychus, Lazarus and Christ. Among all the ages to come I do not suppose there will be one more who will return to this life, having once left it.

At this point I ask you to notice the fact that my text does not call attention to the crossing of the Jordan, but to the way leading thereto. We all think much of our crossing of the Jordan when the march of our life is ended, but put too little emphasis on the way that leads to the crossing. What you and I need most to care about is the direction of the road we are traveling. We need have no fear of the crossing if we come to it in the right way. In other words, we need not care about death if our life has been what it ought to be. We will die right if we live right.

What an absurdity it would have been for Joshua and his men to have asked each other questions like these: "How can we cross the Jordan if we get there? Will not the water be too deep to allow us to wade? Will we not all be so saturated that we may lose our lives by exposure? How many of us can swim? Had we better not wait until the annual freshet has subsided?" No such folly did they commit. They were chiefly anxious about the way that they had "not passed before" and were ignorant of and to keep their eyes on the golden covered acacia box, wing mounted, which was the ark of the covenant.

O hearer, stop bothering about your exit from sublunary scenes! By the grace of God get your heart right and then go ahead. If the Lord takes care of you clear on to the bank on this side of the river, I think you can trust Him to take you from bank to bank, from the willows on this side the stream to the palms on the other side, from the last kiss of sorrowing ones on this side to the welcome, saintly, cherubic, seraphic, deific on the other side.

One Easter morning Massena, the Marshal of France, appeared with 18,000 armed men on the heights above the town of Feldkirch. There were no arms to defend the town, and the inhabitants were wild with terror. Then the old dean of the church cried out: "My brothers, this is Easter day! We have been depending on our own strength, and that fails. Let us turn to God. Ring the bells and have service as usual." Then the bells rang out sweetly and mightily from the church towers of Feldkirch, and the people thronged to the houses of prayer for worship. The sound of the bells made the enemy think that the Austrian army had come in to save the place, and Massena and his 18,000 soldiers retreated. By the time the bells had stopped ringing there was not one soldier in sight. So put your trust in God, and when hosts of troubles and temptations march for your overthrow ring all the bells of hope and faith and Christian triumph, and the threatening perils of your life will fall back, and your deliverance will be celebrated all up and down the skies. The God who led you through the way you never passed before will be with you at all the crossings.

THE SABBATH SCHOOL

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR DECEMBER 29.

Review of the Last Quarter of 1901. Psalm cv., 1-6—Golden Text, Rom. viii., 31—Summary of the Twelve Preceding Lessons.

Introduction—During the past quarter we have seen the Lord gradually bringing about His purpose in ways that are mysterious and strange. A nation is raised up in a foreign country, and then with a mighty hand is delivered from the oppressor and started toward the land of promise. We should learn that no event in our lives is unimportant, for great results may spring from that which in itself is very insignificant.

Summary—Lesson I. Topic: The sin of Joseph's brethren. Place: Jacob lived at Hebron. Joseph was sold at Dothan. Jacob sends Joseph to Shechem to visit his brethren; he finds them at Dothan; as soon as they see him they plan to kill him; Reuben persuades them not to kill him, but to cast him into a pit; they sit down to eat and see a company of Ishmaelites; they sell Joseph to the Ishmaelites, and send his coat, covered with blood, to their father; Jacob mourns greatly.

II. Topic: The dreams of Pharaoh's officers. Place: The capital of Egypt, probably Zoan. Joseph is sold to Potiphar in Egypt; lives in Potiphar's house ten years; is falsely accused by Potiphar's wife and cast into prison; the Lord is with him and gives him favor with his keeper; the king's butler and baker are sent to the same prison; Joseph serves them; they each have a dream and are sad; Joseph interprets their dreams, and asks the butler to remember him.

III. Topic: Fidelity rewarded. Place: Zoan. Pharaoh has two dreams that trouble him; his wise men are not able to interpret them; the butler then remembers Joseph; he is called; the king tells his dreams; there were to be seven years of plenty and then seven years of famine; Pharaoh chooses Joseph to buy up the corn during these years of plenty; Joseph is made ruler over the land, Joseph's name is changed; he marries Asenath; Joseph goes through the land and gathers great quantities of corn.

IV. Topic: Joseph forgiving his brethren. Place: Zoan. The famine reaches Canaan and Jacob sends his sons to Egypt to buy corn; Joseph recognizes them; keeps Simeon in prison; they return a second time with Benjamin; Joseph "could not refrain himself;" sends the Egyptians from the room; makes himself known; "wept aloud" and "kissed all his brethren;" asks concerning his father; tells them they must come to Egypt; offers to give them the land of Goshen.

V. Topic: Joseph's last days. Place: Goshen. Joseph sends presents to his father; Jacob and his sons go to Egypt; Joseph meets them and weeps on his father's neck; Joseph then introduces his father to Pharaoh; Jacob blesses his sons; Jacob dies and is buried in the cave with Abraham and Isaac; Joseph's brethren again ask forgiveness; Joseph forgives them; Joseph trains his children well; Joseph dies and is embalmed.

VI. Topic: The afflictions of God's people. Place: Goshen. God greatly prospered the Hebrews and they became numerous; the new king of Egypt oppressed them greatly; they were made to serve with rigor; taskmasters were set over them to afflict them with heavy burdens; they built Pithom and Raamses; their lives were made bitter, but the more they were oppressed the more God prospered them.

VII. Topic: God preserving Moses. Place: Zoan. Moses's parents, Amram and Jochebed, were of the house of Levi; Moses was a goodly child and was hid three months by his mother; an ark was then made; the child was put in the river; the king's daughter went to bathe and saw the child; Moses's sister Miriam is told to call a nurse; she calls her mother; after the child was grown he became the son of Pharaoh's daughter; she called his name Moses.

VIII. Topic: The woes of intemperance. Israel is compared to a vineyard; the Lord looked for good grapes, but it brought forth wild grapes; some of their evil deeds are here enumerated; woes are pronounced upon the covetous—those who "join house to house;" also upon the drunkards who regard not God; because of this the people are to be carried into captivity; their ruin will be complete and unavoidable; they are to be destroyed like chaff before the fire.

IX. Topic: God calling Moses to deliver Israel. Place: In the land of Midian. Moses decided to leave Pharaoh's court and join himself to the people of God; he killed a man and fled to Arabia; he married Zipporah; tended his father-in-law's sheep; when in the desert, near Horeb, God spoke to him from the burning bush; told him to put off his shoes; said he was about to deliver Israel; called Moses to lead them out of Egypt and promised to be with him.

X. Topic: The last plague threatened. Place: Goshen. Moses thought he was not able to deliver Israel, but God sent Aaron to assist him. Nine plagues were brought—blood, frogs, lice, flies, murrain, boils, hail, locusts, darkness—and still Pharaoh refused. One more plague was to be brought and then they would be thrust out. All the first born in the land were to be slain; there would be a great cry, but among the Hebrews all would be safe.

XI. Topic: Preparing for the exodus. Place: Goshen. The Lord gave minute instructions to Moses and Aaron. Each Hebrew family was to take a lamb and kill it in the evening and sprinkle the blood on the lintel and the two side posts; the lamb was to be roasted and all eaten; they were to eat in haste, prepared to leave at any moment; the blood would protect them. They were finally thrust out, and Pharaoh followed them to the Red Sea, where his host was drowned.

XII. Topic: The Prince of Peace. Place: Jerusalem. The prophet promised that a great light should come to the people. This light was Christ, the world's Redeemer. He has come and has established a government of peace. It is to continue forever, and is destined to fill the whole world.

Massachusetts is supporting a State bathhouse at Revere Beach. It was patronized last summer by 710,963 persons, 11.6 per cent. in excess of the patronage of the previous year. The total receipts amounted to $38,272, an average of about twenty-two cents per capita.

The power of the shortest word in advertising becomes doubly evident when one remembers that it is possible for a human being to get through life on fifteen hundred words of English, that Shakespeare's vocabulary, which was the greatest, included between fifty and sixty thousand, and that fully a quarter of the people of the United States communicate in slang and set phrases: that they are not only incapable of expressing themselves in ordinary English, but that the average sentence from Stevenson, Johnson or Wordsworth is not intelligible to them, states Pr[illegible]'s Ink.

Serum for Snake Bite.

Dr. Calmette, the director of the Pasteur Institute at Lille, is the discoverer of a curative serum for snake bite. He was severely bitten recently by a poisonous reptile, and at once gave himself an injection of his cure. His hand swelled badly and acute fever set in, but during the same day he was well enough to attend a meeting of the general committee of his department and to make an argument in favor of a grant of money to a sanitarium which he has founded at Lille. On the following day he was perfectly well, having thus afforded in his own person, albeit unwillingly, a convincing proof of the efficacy of his remedy.

This disease, judging from the amount of space devoted to it in the public prints, is getting to be more and more a common complaint. "Tip" seems to fairly revel in new and wierd cures for the affliction, and the patent medicine advertisements set forth a tempting list of remedies. Probably the reason that people with rheumatism did not talk so much about it in the old days was for fear the doctor would be called in. One has only to look over an old medical book to realize that a visit from a doctor a hundred years ago was no joke. Here is a book on "The Practice of Physic," printed in Edinburgh in 1784—a hundred and seventeen years ago. It is written by the foremost doctor of his time, William Cullen, professor in the University of Edinburgh, "First Physician to His Majesty in Scotland," and member of all the learned societies. In its day "Cullen's First Lines" was the greatest medical text book in the English language. Now this is what Dr. Cullen would have done for "Tip," or any other seeker after a cure for rheumatism. The learned doctor says: "The cure requires in the first place an antiphlogistic (inflammation checking) regime, and particularly a total abstinence from animal food and from all fermented or spirituous liquors; substituting a vegetable and milk diet. Blood-letting is the first remedy in acute rheumatism. The blood ought to be drawn in large quantity and the bleeding to be repeated in proportion to the frequency, fullness and hardness of the pulse and the violence of the pain. For the most part large and repeated bleedings during the first days of the disease seem to be necessary." In addition to these general bleedings the doctor [illegible] local bleedings wherever there was any swelling or redness. Fresh.

SWAPPING CONFIDENCES.

One Girl Wastes Sympathy on a Man Another Makes His Man Waste Theirs.

"I'll never be even civil to a man again," muttered the brown eyed girl.

The blue eyed girl shrugged her shoulders incredulously. "Have your unsophisticated affections been trifled with?"

"It is worse than that. A man I don't even like thinks I am in love with him.

"Did you give him cause?"

"Indeed I did not. Only a conceited prig could have mistaken my conduct. You know, I have just returned from Cousin Nan's cottage. There was a bachelor next door. I don't know how long he has been a bachelor, but long enough to be utterly selfish and uninteresting. He ran in every day, and I took Nan's husband that it was better to be lonely than to be bored. Then in some unexplainable way I got it into my head that he had been in love with Nan, and was still true to her."

"You—girl, and thinking that? ...er," commented the blue eyed ...

"I know made him interesting. His expression seemed soulful, and when he shook hands with Cousin Nancy I could see that I was a wistful expression, and when he kissed her children I felt sure that only a ... will was keeping back his tears. I thought him so noble, so uncomplaining, and I tried to enter into all his moods. It wasn't very thrilling, but as there were no other men around, I thought it wouldn't hurt me to be good to him and cheer him up as much as I could. We rode and walked together in sympathetic silence, and I felt sure that he understood, for he told Tom that I was such a restful girl. One evening we stood on the porch, and I thought of the years of loneliness before him, and my heart ached. Picking up his hand, I held it for a second against my cheek, said 'Good night' very abruptly, and went into the house."

"No wonder he thought that you were in love," interrupted the blue eyed girl.

"Nonsense! If a man picked up a girl's hand she wouldn't think that he was in love—she would know that he was simply affected by the moon or something that he had eaten for dinner."

"Of course, he proposed?"

"Hardly. This story isn't in any story book. He was frightened to death and never called again. I found out afterward that he had never been in love with anyone except himself—conceited prig!"

The blue eyed girl looked thoughtful. "If you want to be awfully popular I'll tell you how if you will promise never to breathe it."

"I'll promise anything."

"Well, I will tell you my own experience. Last summer there was only one eligible man at the summer resort, and I knew that my chances for a good time were slim, for the other girls were younger and very attractive. Then some one who didn't know told that man that the man I was engaged to had died, and since that time I had been indifferent to men. It was better to have him think that than to know the real unromantic truth, so I dropped several remarks which would confirm his opinion. He hadn't even looked at me before, but after that he began studying my face, and he thought it so wonderful the way I hid my true feelings, for though my heart was broken, only a very close observer would have guessed it. To make a long story short, he decided that I was very safe for a summer girl, and he showered his attentions on me, and I accepted them with an understanding air. It worked so beautifully that I now have six men trying to make me forget some deep, unknown sorrow, for they all feel sure that I can't fall in love."

"But do you think any of them will propose?"

"I hope not. I don't want to have a good thing spoiled."

Then the blue eyed girl began looking over her engagement book for the week.—Chicago Post.

The Secretary of State's Duties.

The Secretary of State's duties are more ceremonious than those of any other Cabinet member. At the New Year reception he presents the entire Diplomatic Corps to the President. He then returns to his own home and entertains the corps—with its dukes, marquises, counts, viscounts, barons and other nobles—at a magnificent luncheon. With great ceremony he will from time to time personally introduce to the President all new diplomats accredited to this country. He reserves one forenoon in each week for the reception at his office of Ministers and Charge d'Affaires. He also attends to the correspondence between the President and the emperors, kings, sultans and other rulers of foreign States. When a royal child is born he frames a letter of congratulation to the parents. When a royal personage dies it is he who dispatches this nation's formal message of condolence. A clerk in the State Department copies these polite missives upon large sheets of gilt-edged paper, in a faultless copperplate hand. A messenger takes them to the White House for the President's signature. They are then returned to the Secretary of State, who seals them with the Great Seal of the United States.—Ladies' Home Journal.

HYGIENIC BATHING.

Public Swimming Pool Dangerous to Public Health.

The dangers of the public swimming pool should not be forgotten by those suddenly interested in the subject of cleanliness among the poor of the cities. The proper methods of bathing are four: (1) By the bath in ocean water at the seashore. For only a very few of the entire people, and for but one-fourth of the year is this possible. Such bathing, like many other kinds of bathing, is not for cleansing the body. (2) By the bath tub with pure water, possible only for the well-to-do, and a limited number in public bath houses. (3) By the spray or rain bath, the sole method advisable in public baths, and especially if supported by the benevolent, by the state, or by city appropriations. (4) By means of sponge or towel at home, even with only a few gallons of water. This method should be encouraged by hygienists, physicians and all those who would discriminatingly help forward the cause of the public health. The free swimming bath for the vast majority of our people is impossible to provide if the water shall be pure, and it is impossible to keep the water pure when it is provided. We leave out of the count the not-to-be-sneered-at fact that unless the bathing is done unclothed, soap and cleanliness are not thought of, and, even at best, modesty, that hardly-won virtue, is not encouraged in public bathing. The only incontestable fact is that the public swimming pool is a danger to, not a promoter of, the public health. The newspapers, the politicians and the selfishly charitable are right in their efforts to encourage cleanliness, but the mere desire to do good nowadays does not prevent the final result from showing wasted effort, and, not infrequently, positive evil. Science should banish our sentimentalism, and nowhere more carefully than in socialistic experiment and fervors.—Philadelphia American Medicine.

King of Denmark's Palace.

Fredensborg is the largest of the King of Denmark's palaces. It has an imposing exterior, and is surrounded by wonderful avenues of limes, but is extremely simple in its interior arrangements. The bedrooms are small and furnished in the plainest style, and there are hardly any dressing rooms or wardrobes. A very wonderful view may be had from the palace roof, which is made entirely of copper. This metal is much used in Copenhagen; some of the steeples have copper steps by which they can be ascended. Rosenborg has a handsomer exterior than Fredensborg, and is full of beautiful artistic objects, including, it is said, the finest Venetian glass in the world.

Tadpoles in Trees.

There occurs in Japan a species of tadpole which seems to frequent the boughs of trees. The parent frog, or toad, or newt—it is not known which of these amphibians has so reckless a disregard for family traditions—builds in a tree a nest, and from the eggs which are there deposited, tadpoles are produced. The tadpoles seem to prefer this airy situation, which perhaps suits them in its freedom from rapacious fishes or frogs, for there is no evidence that they ever desert it. When the time comes for them to be converted into frogs, they drop into the pond below; but the American naturalist who first discovered this extraordinary fact did not succeed in tracing their future development.

HOUSEWORK

...much housework wrecks women's nerves. And the constant care of children, day and night, is often too trying for even a strong woman. A haggard face tells the story of the overworked housewife and mother. Deranged menses, leucorrhœa and falling of the womb result from overwork. Every housewife needs a remedy to regulate her menses and to keep her sensitive female organs in perfect condition.

WINE OF CARDUI

is doing this for thousands of American women to-day. It cured Mrs. Jones and that is why she writes this frank letter:

Glendale, Ky., Feb. 15, 1901.

I am so glad that your Wine of Cardui is helping me. I am feeling better than I have felt for years. I am doing my own work without any help, and I washed last week and was not sick at all. That shows that the Wine is doing me good. I am getting fleshier and lower was better, and sleep quite all night long. Before I began taking the Wine of Cardui, I used to have to lay down five or six times every day, but I do not think of lying down through the day. MRS. REBECCA JONES.

Will Not Hide My Light Under a Bushel.

GENTLEMEN:—I will not hide my light under a bushel, for I want the people to know what your Gooch's Mexican Syrup has done for me. For four years I have been afflicted with Asthma, and could not get anything to do me any good until I got your Gooch's Mexican Syrup. I took three bottles and it cured me entirely. I give you this hoping it may be the means of saving some one from a horrible and premature death.

Yours under obligations,
REV. THOS. B. WARWICK.

PUBLIC PROTECTED

Hon. Judge Wing of the Federal Court of Cleveland has just issued a permanent injunction with damages against a local chemist named Geary from the manufacture and sale of an imitation of Cascarets. Geary imitated the boxes, shape of the tablet and even a similar sounding name. This decision is to be commended. It is a step in the right direction. A dealer who will offer a substitute on the ground that something else is just as good when cascarets are called for, will do it for the purpose of making a few cents extra profit, which may be at the expense of a customer's health.

Cascarets have been advertised freely in our columns for years as the result of making them popular. Cascarets today having the largest sale of any bowel medicine in the world. They are sold in 10c boxes with the cover and each tablet stamped CCC. They are never sold by the jars. We deem it a duty to warn our readers against the substitution of this medicine, and if at any time you have been offered a substitute or offer made to sell something "just as good" when Cascarets are asked for, we will be grateful if you will take the trouble to have a letter to the Sterling Remedy Company, New York or Chicago, write direct to the Sterling Remedy Company, New York or Chicago.

Foils A Deadly Attack.

"My wife was so ill that our physicians were unable to help her," writes M. M. Austin, of Winchester, Ind., "but was completely cured by Dr. King's New Life Pills." They work wonders in stomach and liver troubles. Cure constipation, sick headache, 25c at Clanton Drug Co., and F. A. Gulledge, Verbena.
